Arrangements have been made with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company to deliver milk to Oakland from Terra Alta, Corinth, Hutton, Skipnish, Mountain Lake Park, Deer Park, Altamont, Wilson and Swanton at 10 cents for 5-gallon cans, and 20 cents for 10-gallon cans, the empty cans to be returned free. Cans should be plainly marked with the owner's name and shipping point on the can, or tags securely fastened to the same. Milk should be at these points in time for delivery on the morning accommodations. The cans will be returned on the evening accommodations.

Two milk routes will be established by the Association. One wagon will leave Oakland beginning Friday morning, March 31st, and the first stop for milk will be made about 7 o'clock on the Wonderly Road at the west end of Loch Lynn, where all parties living in that vicinity can deliver their milk. The wagon will then return to the Pleasant Valley Road and continue South as far as the Beckman settlement, then cross west to the Aurora Pike. All parties living on or near this route should have the milk at the road and the can properly tagged so as to avoid unnecessary delay in collecting same. Parties living South of Gortner who desire to have this wagon deliver their milk should leave the same at Gortner's store each morning.

Another milk wagon will leave Hoyes about 7 o'clock each morning to collect the milk and cream from parties living along the road from that point to Oakland. Parties living at Accident and other points some distance from this route should arrange to have their supply of milk or cream delivered at some convenient point where it can be picked up by the driver.

It is hoped that all parties furnishing milk will take particular care of the same, keep it clean, untainted and in a fresh condition when delivered at the Creamery or to the wagons sent out to collect. One can of bad milk may spoil or lower the quality of a whole day's supply.

We will pay for milk delivered at the Creamery 35 cents per pound for the butter fat, and 30 cents per pound when collected by our wagons. In addition to this we will allow 1 cent for each gallon of the skim milk left at the creamery by those delivering their own milk. These are high prices, but it is our desire to pay every cent possible in order to encourage the dairy interests of this County.

Bring or send us your milk and relieve the women folks of the drudgery and care of butter making at home. Those having hand separators may send the cream and retain the skim milk for stock feed.

The Association will make settlement with their patrons twice each month and guarantee satisfaction.

We shall be glad to have you visit our factory and we earnestly solicit your hearty co-operation.

Hamill Spedden, a native of Oakland, who has been in Fairmont for a number of years, where he has prospered.

Messrs. A. D. Naylor & Co., of Oakland, secured the contract for the installation of the heating plant in the building and the Mitchell Furniture Company, of Cincinnati, will furnish the interior fixtures and furniture. The contemplated improvements will cost in the neighborhood of $15,000.

The exterior of the building will be of Ohio sand stone. The entrance to the banking room from Second street will be through a massive bronze door which will be flanked on either side by bronze and plate glass side lights. England, and especially London, is making great plans for the coronation of King George next spring. It is expected that the gorgeous spectacle will surpass anything of the kind ever seen in the British capital, and the show will bring enormous crowds to the city. Such affairs always mean a magnificent display of British power and also big money for London merchants, hotel keepers and others. So the glad news is received with glowing anticipations.

How God Answers Prayer

By REV. H. PAGE DYER
Rector of Episcopal Church of Ascension, Philadelphia

Why should we pray? Many intelligent people say we should not pray and they give reasons for so believing. But even so, when there comes into their life some serious illness, or some approaching disaster, or the facing of death, almost all of them fall to prayer.

Even infidels and agnostics and atheists have been known to turn to God at such a time; they have ceased to rely upon their atheism or agnosticism and have felt the God they had denied to be their only help in their time of need. One such in his extremity, who was not willing to break wholly with his denial of God, cried out as he was lying, "O God, if there be a God, save my soul, if I have a soul."

If one were to ask us why we should pray we could give many answers. If we believe in a God at all (and almost everybody does), we realize his power and our dependence, and, therefore, the need of prayer. If he can help us (omnipotent) and knows how to help us (omniscient) and wants to help us (all-loving), then there is only left the need of our request or prayer.

Every religion of every kind, heathen, pagan, superstitious, Jewish, Christian, does pray. If, therefore, we fail to pray we are putting our judgment against every religion past and present known to man, and also against the instinct of every race, black, white, yellow, savage, wild or civilized.

This seems to be a rash position to take and we would not think of taking such a stand in any matter other than our relationship to God. And if there be an intelligent and loving delay, it is not very polite or courteous not to speak to him at times. This speaking to him should include adoration and thanks, as well as begging. We would not so neglect a merely human friend.

But if we do pray, how does God answer us? We find men hold two diverse theories as to this. One is: That God sends his answer directly from heaven and not through an agent. But this is surely contrary to our universal experience. In our secular life every good and perfect gift comes from God alone, but always through some one else.

Our money comes from God, but through dealings with men; our clothing comes from God, but through dealings with an importer, merchant or tailor. In our physical life our birth, development, cure and nourishment all come from God, but through our mother, exercise, doctor and food. I said this at a mission and challenged any one to find an exception. The only thing they could suggest was a farmer's prayer for rain, which came. But this involved clouds and barometric pressure and oceans and forests and may meteorolgical agents.

The second and true theory is that God answers our prayers. He alone can, but always through some agency. As this is true in our secular and physical life, so it is true in our spiritual life. As we got our physical life from God through our mother, so we get our Christian life from God through baptism.

As we got our physical strength from God through exercise, so we get our spiritual strength from God through confirmation. As we get our spiritual nourishment from God through bread, meat, etc., so we get our spiritual nourishment from God through holy communion. As we get our phyhical cure from God through the doctor and medicine, so we get our spiritual cure from God through penance.

This law is so universal and so simple that we would never think of doubting it if it were not for our religious prejudices.

What are some of these agencies which God uses? The four fundamental needs of birth, strength, food, cure are supplied as above. There are many incidental and subsidiary needs all supplied by God but through agencies.

Restored in Christ.

Our Lord once encountered a man who had a withered hand. In spite of the captious questioning of the Jews, or perhaps in order to silence it, Christ, at the dictate of his own merciful heart, said to the afflicted man, stretch forth thine hand! And when he stretched it forth it was restored whole. The moral is evident—in human society there are many palsied hands—atrophied powers or unused faculties—needing to be restored to full duty as social ministrants. There is only one way to accomplish this result—use what little power is left in stretching forth the imperfect faculty in the direction of Jesus Christ, who can endue it with fuller life and potency. If in your life there is any loss of efficiency, any withered hand, put it at once into working condition, through Christ's grace, in the line of duty.

Power of Faith.

No matter what your temperament may be, you can develop your power of faith.—Rev. S. P. Cadman, Congregationalist, Brooklyn, New York.

Don't overlook the fact that more than ability is required to create wealth, to qualify you to dispense it.

Shapes for Spring

BY JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

THREE of the prettiest shapes among the new hats for spring are shown here. One might choose with the eyes shut and be sure of possessing grace, style and real beauty in any of these. They fit well and are only moderately large.

Hemp and milan appear to lead in the point of popularity, but there are innumerable lovely models in other braids as well—hair braid, pyroxylin, chip, leghorn, tuscan, in fact every braid, including the rough Japs, finds a following, and there is no lack of variety in size or shape.

The hair braids and hemps are greatly favored for dress hats to be trimmed with French plumes and lace or ribbon—or both. Milans and hemps are liked for big masses of flowers. Many of these trimmed with big bunches of lilacs are blooming in triumph at Palm Beach just now.

A great many shapes are shown with borders (called "flanges") of velvet, and some are faced with velvet. Small shapes with upturned brims nearly always are improved by a velvet facing on the brim or coronet. The velvet flange is an undoubted advantage, adding finish and distinction to the shape. Its placing is a matter of perfect workmanship.

It will be noticed that crowns in the hats are conservative; they are not specially large or high or noticeable in any way. The achievement of grace in outline is the paramount idea in spring shapes and is more highly regarded than any other feature. This is a good sign. So far there seems to be an absence of freakishness this season, in any direction.

It looks as if flowers were to catch the fancy of all women young enough to wear flower-laden shapes. They are so pretty. Both the hats and flowers come in great ranges of lovely colors. Milans in the yellow or natural color and hemps in all colors give a choice from grave to gay and all the notes between.

There is a shape for every face. It is very essential to pick out the most becoming one and this is a serious matter.

FOR CHILD'S WEAR IN SPRING

Dress of White Dimity Is About the Most Dainty That Can Possibly Be Devised.

Tige and I are sweethearts—all that troubles me is that his old brown coat never gets too old to wear, so I can't make him nice new clothes like what mamma makes for me. This is my new white dimity for spring. Mamma says she likes to have all her sewing done by the time hot weather comes. The dress has a long blouse and double ruffle on the skirt and this is my blue sash. I wear it when I have the blue ribbon in my hair and usually I wear pale blue or white stockings. Mamma says these are "Gibson" plaits over my shoulders, and there are two narrow insertions of lace down the middle of my blouse. Mamma considers short sleeves the best for summer or winter, and she says she likes to have the skirts of my dresses solid embroidery because they are so fluffy. Sometimes I wear kid shoes, but usually black slippers—they're so sensible—and pretty, too. I'm six years old.—Anna M. Denniston in the Chicago News.

Handsome beaded bags show no signs of waning in popularity, but the ones done with tiny beads are the thing.

MEDIUM STYLES FOR SPRING

Coming Millinery Will Offer Many Choices, So That Surely All May Be Suited.

The woman who cannot find millinery to suit her this season will indeed be very difficult to please. Not in many years has it been made possible for women to be so sanely and, at the same time, so fashionably hatted as at present.

The styles are medium in all things. Crowns are moderately high, brims are neither too wide nor too narrow, and trimmings are in no wise exaggerated.

The smart-looking turbans are most attractive and come in a variety of models and colorings to suit every type of face. As a rule, two colors are combined, and not infrequently two fabrics besides the trimmings. A soft, coarse, rather wide straw and the fine braid of crinoline are a favored combination. The crown in folds will be of the heavier straw and the crushed brim of the crinoline or hair. The golden shades, which include lemon, ecru and leghorn, are preferred for the crown, while the brim will be of a contrasting color, as blue, dark red, green or black.

No less attractive than the shapes are the trimmings. The cockade of chanticleer red velvet decorating a hat of golden and black tones is an example of smart, becoming lines. A modified sugar loaf hat, the crown entirely concealed under tiny rosebuds, and the brim of black flexible straw, is another pretty model. A tiny blackbird nestling on the left side is the only trimming.

The fashionable trimmings are small flowers, single quills, small birds, medium wings, soft ribbons and velvet.

Now for Turned-Up Hats.

Once more will it be possible to see women's eyes and hair. Hat brims still will be large, but they are to be turned up. Hats with straw brims that turn up boldly in front, at the side or front and back are seen among the models for the fast coming spring time. They come in all sizes. One of the new forms is 18 inches long and 23 inches wide. Extra large hats, however, will be worn only be the extremists. Even women are weary of them, for they have been carried to such absurd measurements that they no longer are picturesque.

Novel Collar.

The string ties which women are wearing with their tailored shirt waists come in the loveliest of colors. The materials used are innumerable, but all, of course, have the silky finish.

A novel collar shows to good advantage a string tie of ciel blue corded silk. The high, straight, turn-down collar fastens in front. Wide, vertical eyelet slits appear around the collar at intervals of about two inches, and through these is run the tie, which is knotted in front in four-in-hand fashion.

DAINTIES FOR PARTY

CONFECTIONS SURE TO PLEASE THE CHILDREN.

May Be Known as Washington Cakes or by Any Other Name, but Will Always Be Found Most Delicious.

Possess yourself of a forcing tube such as is used for icing, various harmless colorings, and plenty of confectioners' sugar, and you can evolve all sorts of patriotic designs at little cost.

Make a simple cup cake batter, bake in shallow tins about two inches deep, when cold cut the cake in oblong pieces. Ice some of these with red icing, others in white, and with a tube make a curled fancy border of white on red, and vice versa.

Ice in one corner crossed flags, using red and blue icing. Some of the cakes can have three candied cherries, dotting the top with leaves and stems made of angelica; below can be a tree trunk iced in chocolate, with a red ice hatchet in it.

For a big cake, bake in a deep star-shaped pan, ice with a white icing, decorate with scrolls and fancy border, and in each point put a cluster of candied cherries with angelica foliage. Serve on a round platter, covered with red, white and blue frills, or surround with a wreath of artificial cherry leaves and fruit.

For a child's party make a number of small cakes, but in blocks as described above. Ice in red, white and blue, in even divisions. Heap these on a round platter, log cabin fashion, to resemble a fort. Through some of the openings stick toy cannon and tin soldiers on top of the fort for sentinels, and in the center have a small silk flag.

For another coloring ice the cakes in the colonial buff and blue, have the soldiers in colonial uniforms, while several of the flags used in the early days of the Revolutionary war can be stuck in a standard in the center.

An effective border for a round, big cake iced in white can be small flags crossed on sides and top. If one fears to eat a cake so decorated, the icing can be put on a round box that slips over the real cake.

Have the shield-shaped cutter made by a tinner. Mix simple sugar biscuit dough, roll rather thin and cut into different sized shields. From a dictionary study the coloring of various state and national shields and copy them closely in colored icing.

FOR THOSE FOND OF STEW

"Pepper Pot" Makes a Combination That Is a Welcome Addition to Any Menu.

One pound of cooked tripe, one small knuckle of veal, one onion, two potatoes, three-quarters of a cupful of chopped suet, one bay leaf, one blade mace, three quarts of cold water, a bunch of potherbs, salt and red pepper to taste, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, one tablespoonful of flour. Wash the veal and potherbs and slice the onion, put them in a saucepan with the water and bring slowly to a boiling point. Remove the scum. Allow to simmer for four and a half hours. Strain and set away to cool. When cold, skim off the fat, add the potatoes, cut in small cubes; the tripe, cut in half-inch squares; one tablespoonful of chopped parsley and the meat cut from the knuckle, rejecting every bit of the fat and gristle. Put them on to boil just long enough before dinner to cook the potatoes; when boiling, season to taste with salt and red pepper. Blend the butter and flour and cornstarch together, then stir them into the boiling soup. Mix the chopped suet with one and a quarter cupfuls of flour and half a teaspoonful of salt, and add enough water to make a stiff dough. Form into tiny squares or dumplings and simmer in the soup for 20 minutes.

Baked Bluefish.

Select a bluefish weighing six pounds, have it split, cleaned and the head left on, rinse thoroughly so that no scales or blood remain upon it, dust it lightly with pepper and salt. Make a savory dressing with plenty of butter and have it highly seasoned; stuff the body and the head as well, and tie with kitchen tape, do not sew it as it makes it difficult to serve and it is also apt to burst. Lay thin slices of bacon on the top and baste with a wineglass of white wine and take some of the melted butter. Garnish with cold boiled egg rings and fried parsley, serve with butter and parsley sauce. Remember to grease the rack well before laying the fish on it to bake, so that it does not stick.

Useful Hints.

Rapidly boiling water cooks no faster than that which barely bubbles, but only evaporates faster.

A little vinegar in the water in which a fish is boiling will prevent it falling apart.

Cotton crepe stenciled with oil paint or stencil dye will wash beautifully in Castile soapsuds.

To Whiten Handkerchiefs.

To whiten handkerchiefs which have become discolored through careless washing, dissolve some pipe clay in warm water and leave them to soak in the solution all night. Next day wash and boil the handkerchiefs in the usual manner, and they will be wonderfully improved in appearance.

In Its Due Order.

Champ Clark, at a dinner in Washington, pleaded indulgence for a somewhat rambling speaker.

"He'll arrive," said the Democratic leader, "if you'll only give him time. He is like Dr. Thirdly.

"Dr. Thirdly was dividing up his sermon into its appropriate heads one Sunday morning when a member of the congregation shouted irascibly:

"'Meat, man! Give us meat!'

"'Well,' said Dr. Thirdly promptly, 'hold on, then, till I'm done carving.'"

WOULD LIE AWAKE ALL NIGHT WITH ITCHING ECZEMA

"Ever since I can remember I was a terrible sufferer of eczema and other irritating skin diseases. I would lie awake all night, and my suffering was intolerable. A scaly humor settled on my back, and being but a child, I naturally scratched it. It was a burning, itching sensation, and utterly intolerable, in fact, it was so that I could not possibly forget about it. It did not take long before it spread to my shoulders and arms, and I was almost covered with a mass of raw flesh on account of my scratching it. I was in such a condition that my hands were tied.

"A number of physicians were called, but it seemed beyond their medical power and knowledge to cure me. Having tried numerous treatments without deriving any benefit from them, I had given myself up to the mercy of my dreadful malady, but I thought I would take the Cuticura treatment as a last resort. Words cannot express my gratitude to the one who created 'The Cuticura Miracles,' as I have named them, for now I feel as if I never suffered from even a pimple. My disease was routed by Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and I shall never cease praising the wonderful merits they contain. I will never be without them, in fact, I can almost dare any skin diseases to attack me so long as I have Cuticura Remedies in the house. I hope that this letter will give other sufferers an idea of how I suffered, and also hope that they will not pass the 'Cuticura Life Saving Station.'" (Signed) C. Louis Green, 929 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 29, 1910.

The NATION'S WEALTHY WIDOWS

By WALDON FAWCETT

WEALTHY American widows have come in recent years to to play a most important part in several important divisions of the world's affairs. It is not, either, merely here in the United States that these money-eyed women are making their influence felt. On the contrary, their influence has proven fully as potent in many circles abroad—so much so, indeed, that the good people of Europe have been compelled to sit up and take notice of the American widows as a class well worthy to rank with any subdivision of society abroad (not even excepting the nobility), if the comparison be made on the basis of gowns or millinery or jewelry or any of the other standards by which the feminine world sets such store.

Here in the United States it would be difficult to name a sphere in which the wealthy widows have not been exerting tremendous influence of late years. Even in politics they have not waited upon the victory of the suffrage cause to enable them to take a hand. For the present, to be sure, their influence is indirect, but it is none the less tangible, as witness the power of the salon maintained by that brilliant woman, Mrs. Hitt, widow of the late chairman of the foreign relations committee of the house of representatives and the backing which Senator Beveridge of Indiana has had through the fact that his wife is the kinswoman of Mrs. Marshall Field, widow of the Chicago merchant.

Socially there is no question as to the tremendous power of the American widow. To realize it one has only to stop to reflect how the polite world is dominated by the hospitalities of such well-to-do widows as Mrs. L. Z. Leiter, widow of the Chicago multi-millionaire and mother of the late Lady Curzon, late vicereine of India; Mrs. George M. Pullman, widow of the car builder; Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, widow of the "Mining King;" Mrs. Mary Scott Townsend, widow of the Pennsylvania coal and oil magnate, and Mrs. M. A. Hanna, widow of the late United States senator from Ohio.

Mrs. Hanna's life since the death of her husband, we may here digress to explain, has illustrated how great is the latitude of life open to the modern wealthy widow in contrast to the circumscribed existence of the average widow of a prominent official of a century ago, who, upon the death of her husband, was wont to retire to his plantation or country seat and live in the utmost quietude if not in actual seclusion. After the death of her husband Mrs. Hanna lived for a time in a fashionable hotel in Washington. Then she built a large house and occupied it for a time, later disposing of it to a prominent army officer. Next she had a special apartment arranged to her order in one of the largest of the new hotels in New York, even providing a special kitchen for "Maggie," her "jewel" of a cook. Then desiring a change, she hit upon the idea of her present program of life, which calls for an extended sojourn in Europe each spring and summer and a winter residence in Washington, where she has two apartments of 14 rooms each in a fashionable apartment house.

Mrs. Hanna's 28-room apartment might seem a pretty pretentious residential establishment for a lone woman to maintain, but it is scarcely a circumstance to the enormous four-story mansion erected at the national capital by Mrs. Slater, another wealthy widow, who is the sole occupant of this palace save for the 18 servants who minister to her needs. Wealthy widows, it may be added, have not shirked the responsibilities of house building. Indeed, on the contrary, it seems to be one of their fads. Mrs. Leiter, in addition to her town houses, has lately been building a summer "cottage" costing hundreds of thousands of dollars on the North Shore of Massachusetts near the summer home of President Taft. Mrs. Hay, widow of the late secretary of state, has built a magnificent mansion in Cleveland; Mrs. Pullman and Mrs. Marshall Field have ordered new homes from plans which they had a hand in making; Mrs. Hitt has built a splendid home since the death of her husband and the wealthy Mrs. Wyeth of Philadelphia had her nephew-architect carry out her ideas of a distinctive home.

In point of achievement, however, unquestionably the greatest of all the house builders in the coterie of wealthy widows is Mrs. Albert Clifford Barney, who inherited one fortune from her father, a Cincinnati pioneer, and married another. Mrs. Barney is of a most artistic temperament and is indeed an artist of no mean ability in both oils and water colors. She spends much time in Paris, where she and two of her daughters, who devote themselves respectively to painting and sculpture, are much in their element. When she is in this country Mrs. Barney divides her time and her boundless energy between the staging of Greek plays and other amateur theatricals of a most ambitious character and the designing and building of houses for love of it. These unique habitations that she creates Mrs. Barney sells or rents, and be it said to her credit that she is a clever enough business woman to make her art profitable in dollars and cents as well as in personal satisfaction.

In the field of philanthropy American widows have of late years accomplished so much good as to make these bereaved ones as a class the most respected and most admired contingent of American multimillionairedom. The generosity of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst in good works has insured her a place for all time in our real hall of fame and Mrs. Harriman's gift of a splendid park to the state of New York bids fair to be but the first of a series of notable benefactions. Mrs. Russell Sage is another woman who in a comparatively brief widowhood has helped the needy in many ways, and the late Mrs. Gardner Hubbard, widow of the man who reaped the greatest financial rewards from the invention of the telephone, was lavish during her lifetime in good works.

There is one group of widows in the United States in the members of which—for all that they are most of them living very quietly—the public is bound to take a keen interest. This group is made up of the widows of former high officials of the nation, including the widows of our military and naval heroes. Conspicuous among the number are the two surviving widows of presidents, Mrs. Mary Lord Harrison and Mrs. Grover Cleveland. Mrs. Cleveland spends most of her time in the family home at Princeton or at her farm in New Hampshire, though she has of late devoted no little time to residence in Switzerland, where her children are being educated. Mrs. Harrison, likewise, spends much time abroad, though she maintains a home in Indianapolis and indulges in occasional lengthy vacations in a log house in the Adirondacks.

Of the widows of the nation's warriors probably the public hears most frequently of Mrs. Phil Sheridan, widow of the famous cavalry leader, although Mrs. Logan and Mrs. Pickett, the latter the widow of the Confederate chieftain who led the desperate charge at Gettysburg, have been more or less in the public eye owing to their literary work and their careers on the lecture platform. Mrs. Sheridan, alike to both these other widows, resides at the national capital and an anecdote is told of Mrs. Sheridan to the effect that she silenced some gossip which speculated as to her remarriage by the remark, "I would rather be the widow of Phil Sheridan than the wife of any man alive."

And speaking of the remarriage of widows, it may be added that one of the circumstances that renders these widowed women of wealth interesting to many people is the possibility of remarriage—an ever-present incentive to speculation, even though the object of such public curiosity may have not the slightest intention of again entering the bonds of matrimony. And that this solicitude is by no means restricted to disinterested observers or confined to the United States is eloquently attested by the attentions which eligible members of the nobility of Europe have showered upon Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. "Jack" Gardiner, Mrs. Marshall Field and—most courted of all—Mrs. Nonnie Worthington Stewart Leeds, the dazzlingly wealthy as well as dazzlingly beautiful young widow of a multimillionaire who garnered the golden harvest of the tinplate industry and sundry railroads.

Almost all the wealthy American widows seem to have a penchant for spending more or less of their time in Europe and there are others who live there continuously, returning but seldom to their native land, and then only for visits. In this class are the widows of foreign diplomats who receive pensions from the governments served by their late husbands. A conspicuous example is afforded by Baroness Sternburg—the former Miss Langham, a Kentucky beauty, who as the result of a genuine romance that began as a case of love at first sight on a transatlantic liner, married Baron Speck von Sternburg, a very capable German diplomat, who lost his life as the result of disease contracted while serving his government in India.

In the field of art many American widows, such as Mrs. St. Gaudens, are factors, if not by virtue of their own talents at least as custodians of the masterpieces left by their deceased husbands, and the same is true in the spheres of literature and public life, where the collection of the papers of an eminent man or the publication of his memoirs has frequently devolved upon the widow. In the financial world wealthy widows, by sheer force of their monetary possessions, wield an influence recognized by all men of affairs. The most notable example, of course, is that afforded by Mrs. Hetty Green, who controls one of the wealthiest and most powerful of the New York banks.

Temperance

LIQUOR HABITS IN ENGLAND

Military Man Gives His Views in Medical Temperance Review—Cost to Each Officer.

The Medical Temperance Review of London, says: It is not often that we get such a candid confession of the bibulous habits of the higher classes as we find in a communication recently sent to one of the London dailies. The writer is a military man, and writes to explain the impossibility for an officer in the army to live on the stipend which the authorities give. The officers provide and pay for the food and drink in the regimental officers' mess. It is needless to say that most of them drink wine, beer and spirits, and this, of course, as we all know, is generally a very heavy item in the expenditure. We, however, should not have ventured to estimate the amount which an average officer would drink per day as high as this correspondent does, who evidently knows all about it. We should, probably, have been charged with exaggeration, and the extravagance and intemperance, which a certain class of writers is so fond of attributing to temperance works. But let our military correspondent speak for himself.

He says: "This is a specimen of an average middle-aged officer's routine. After breakfast a couple of cigarettes. Parade at 8:45 to 11 a. m., then a couple of glasses of beer and a cigarette. One p. m. lunch; a couple of glasses of beer, and if a piece of cake is eaten, then a glass of Marsala ('wine no gentleman should drink', as Thackeray puts it). Some time during the afternoon, on his return from a walk or ride, a whisky and soda. There is a rubber from 6 p. m. until it is time to change for dinner. It is pure vice, but many a man has a sherry and bitters either before or after he changes. At dinner a reputed pint of claret, a whisky and soda, or a couple of glasses of beer is the usual thing. After dinner a couple of glasses of wine before a move is made to the anteroom, and from then on until bedtime nobody can say another whisky and soda is extravagant over one's rubber or read, or even over one's spell of study. The hot grog nightcap is a thing of the past. In hot climates there would be a great many lemon squashes and gin-and-ginger beers. In cold climates, Newfoundland port takes the place of the morning beer. No general on earth would call other than temperate an officer who spent his day as described. Certainly well-to-do people in the city get through more than that per diem. And British officers avoid absinthe, so dear to a Frenchman, and the big swillings of beer indulged in by German officers occasionally. But it costs more than a pound a month. The £6 a year, which is known as 'mess allowance,' was formerly known as 'Regent's allowance,' and by old regulations, was paid into the wine fund for the purpose of letting every officer drink His Majesty's health, free of cost, after dinner. That sum is now devoted to the general expenses of a mess."

This is indeed a naive confession and repudiation of intemperance. We are certainly glad to hear that there have been some improvements on past customs, and we do not doubt that there is not so much obvious drunkenness as there used to be. We are not quite so sure that there is much less drink consumed, but it appears to be spread over the twenty-four hours in a fashion which enables the drinkers to maintain some control over their reasoning faculties. It is a matter for congratulation, both to them and us, whom they have to defend, that they do not drink absinthe and "big swillings of beer." But, nevertheless, let us add up what they do drink on the average, and see how that compares with the physiological limit of moderation on the most generous scale. We find, then, that six glasses of beer a day, two in the morning, two at lunch, and two at dinner, are considered necessary. In addition, one glass of Marsala, a whisky and soda in the afternoon, and sherry and bitters before dinner. Two glasses of wine after dinner, and another whisky and soda. The quantity of whisky is not stated, and, as we do not wish to exaggerate in the least, we will assume that it is not more than a small wineglassful (say two ounces) on each occasion.

Now, how does this work out as regards alcohol?

Six glasses of beer (3 pints), equals four ounces alcohol; four glasses of wine (half-pint), equals two ounces alcohol; four ounces of whisky, equals two ounces alcohol; total, eight ounces.

We have rather underestimated the alcoholic strength of the beer and wine so that there can be little doubt as to the total amount. This is exactly four times the amount which Professor Anstie, the most liberal expounder of the limits of moderation, laid down as the maximum for an adult man in twenty-four hours, and six times the maximum of Professor Parkes. We must conclude, then, that during the greater part of the time the average British officer is not perfectly sober. He can neither study nor think his best while he is under the influence of such a large quantity of alcohol, to say nothing of the degeneration of nerve and tissue which constant contact with such a quantity must inevitably cause.

CURRENT WRECKS A BRIDGE

Twenty-Seven Big Timbers Are Cut Through in One Day by Aid of Electricity.

One of the most ingenious uses to which electricity was ever put was in the wrecking of a bridge over the Wabash in Indiana.

This bridge had been purchased by the county authorities, who intended to replace it by a steel structure erected on the old piers and abutments. The owner agreed to remove the bridge in 30 days.

The chief difficulty lay in the short time agreed upon for the removal of the bridge. Several wreckers to whom the matter was submitted declared that it would be impossible within 30 days to pull down the old bridge without injury to the piers.

The structure might be blown up with dynamite, but the explosion would also destroy the piers. Were it fired, the heat would crack and injure the masonry of the bridge. The 30 days expired, and an extension of one week was granted.

The owner was at his wits' end, when he chanced upon an electrician who proposed, not to blow up the bridge, but to burn it apart. His proposal was gladly accepted.

Each span of the bridge was composed of nine chords of three timbers each. The 27 sills were to be cut simultaneously, so that the span would drop between the piers into the river. The cutting was to be accomplished by burning through the wood with loops of iron resistance made red-hot by the passage of the electric current.

Fifty-four resistance loops were heated to wreck each span, and the spans were wrecked one at a time. Sufficient current was used to heat the iron wires cherry red. The result was exactly the same with every span. Between the turning on of the current and the fall of the span an hour and 40 minutes elapsed. Then the mass of timbers fell into the water well inside the piers, so that they were uninjured.

The cut made by the hot wire was sharp and clean, and the wood was not charred more than an inch from the place of fracture.

The current was first turned on at about five o'clock in the morning, and at two in the afternoon the last span crashed down to the river bed.—Scientific American.

A BALL FOR BABY

If ever love is stitched into a gift it goes into the one that celebrates baby's first birthday. One of the prettiest presents, which will give the little one great joy, is a large edition of those balls which the happy mothers of today delighted to fashion as children with two circles of cardboard perforated in the center.

Instead of making the circles an inch or two in diameter, make them full six inches in size, and use pink and white or pale blue and white wool of a very fleecy type. Tie the wool through the perforation in the cardboard and then proceed to fill up the hole by drawing the wool through and through over the cardboard until no more will pass. Cut it and tie it between the two circles and remove these by tearing them away.

The ball should be sewn on to narrow satin ribbon, blue or pink, as the case may be, and to this ribbon should be attached a quantity of little gold or silver bells, which will jingle merrily when the ball is swung to and fro by the ribbons.

RENEWS ANTIQUE WASHSTAND

Long Islander Sells Piece of Furniture for Fifty Cents and Buys It Back for $20.

An elderly Long Islander once attended an auction of old furniture. Among the articles for which bids were asked was a heavy marble-topped washstand. The Long Islander bid ten cents for it, and as he was the only one who spoke the washstand was knocked down to him—rather to his dismay, as he had to have it conveyed to his distant home. For several years this ten-cent antique was an occupant of the barn, its marble top being removed and the interior of the stand serving as a receptacle for cans of paint.

One day a clerk from a furniture store in the neighborhood called at the Long Islander's and accidentally caught sight of the unappreciated washstand. He made some inquiries concerning it, and eventually purchased it for 50 cents. The clerk took his purchase to the store, gave it a thorough renovating and it became a handsome piece of hardwood furniture, the marble top adding the finishing touch. Not long after this transformation the elderly Long Islander and his wife visited the furniture store, and when the wife saw that beautifully polished antique washstand she fell in love with it, for it just filled her ideal. Her husband seemed to have a suspicion of the truth, and endeavored to distract her attention. But the affair ended by the woman purchasing the stand for $20, and it is now one of her most highly prized possessions.

Bell Must Be Tuned.

The general impression is that the tone of a bell is largely a matter of accident, but this is not so. A bell must be tuned the same as a piano or any other musical instrument. Every bell has five sounds, which must blend together in perfect harmony, and this is accommplished by shaving down certain parts until the desired harmony is secured. In the event of shaving too deep the bell is not injured, but the tuning operation is prolonged, as other parts must be operated on and cut away to a corresponding degree.

PRESIDENT TAFT IS WORKING TO ELIMINATE WAR

The abolition of war is not the dream of theorists, but the practical end of a practical plan, which, according to the President, promises to mark one of the greatest steps in the history of the world through the medium of arbitration. The President has taken the lead in a great movement of the nations looking toward the realization of a hope as old as the Christian era.

Under an unwritten law of the White House, the President cannot be directly quoted, but in the following an effort is made to reproduce his opinions as he expressed them:

Arbitration will surely come as the means of settling international disputes. Disarmament is incidental. It will follow as a matter of course, and has no part in the present movement. The realization of arbitration will make armament useless, and when it is useless it will disappear. The way to dispose of armament is to provide some means of settling international disputes without the use of armament. When that is accomplished it will be time enough to think of disarmament. The first step is the formation of an arbitration treaty with Great Britain. The favorable manner in which the suggestion has been received in England speaks well for its early accomplishment. The favorable indorsement in France is another indication that the time is ripe. When several big nations get together with such treaties then the others will observe how the new system works and all will come in.

The matter will be taken up immediately. The arbitration treaty must not be confused with an alliance. It distinctly is not an alliance. It is an agreement between two nations to settle disputes arising between them and would have no bearing whatever upon a dispute between one of the parties and a third power.

The present prize court is the first evidence of the general movement toward world-wide arbitration. The settlement of the Nowfoundland fisheries dispute between the United States and England at The Hague was one of the most important events of presenttimes. A dispute that had been standing for 100 years was settled and disposed of, with the exception of certain details which are to be worked out by a joint commission.

An effort will be made to have the arbitration treaty with England ratified at the coming session of Congress. Then will come similar treaties with other nation as rapidly as circumstances permit.

DEAR MR. HAMILL:—I was very much surprised upon my return from Baltimore Friday morning of last week to learn through your paper that the object of my visit to that city had been for the purpose of calling upon the President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company to urge the completion of the Confluence & Oakland Railroad.

You knew that I was in Baltimore for the purpose of attending a meeting of the State Association of Fire Underwriters and the Banquet given by the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

The gentlemen named in the article referred to were not aware of the fact that I had gone to Baltimore, say nothing of the object of that visit, and furthermore I am sure they do not care.

I most earnestly protest against using my name in connection with any hot air handed you as news, and certainly the other parties named deserve the same consideration. Furthermore if there were any truth in the statement published in your paper it would have been very unwise and detrimental to the best interests of this vicinity to make the facts public.

Hoping you can give this letter equal prominence in your paper this week, I am, Yours very truly,

E. S. WEST.

Requisitions Exchanged.

West Virginia and Maryland exchanged requisitions Saturday, the eastern state asking for Frank Spurgin, now in West Virginia, but wanted in this county, where he has been indicted for larceny, and the state of Maryland surrenders Charles Shaw, wanted in Preston county. The parties have been apprehended in both instances and the requisitions were in each instance promptly issued.

GARRETT COUNTY PART OF NATIONAL FOREST RESERVE

Department of Agriculture Ready To Purchase Land For Purpose.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The Department of Agricultural announces, through a circular which is just coming from the press, that it is ready to begin operations looking to the purchase of land by the National Forest Reservation Commission created under the Weeks Law.

This law was passed with special reference to the creation of National Forests in the Appalachian and White Mountains. Under it the Secretary of Agriculture is to examine, locate and recommend to the Commission for purchase such lands as in his judgment may be necessary for regulating the flow of navigable streams. The circular which is now being printed is intended to give information to the public as to where and what kinds of lands are wanted. Owners of land the purchase of which will be considered by the Government are expected on the basis of this information to make known to the Forest Service, which will conduct the work for the Department of Agriculture, their desire to sell. Copies of the circulars may be obtained by applying to the Forest Service.

The law is not restricted to particular regions, except that lands may bought only in the States whose legislatures have consented to the acquisition of land by the United States for the purpose of preserving the navigability of streams. The States which have already taken the necessary action are Maine, New Hampshire, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, South Carolina and Georgia.

The first lands to be examined for purchase will be in the Appalachian and White Mountains, which because of their altitude, steepness, and lack of protection are in a class by themselves. The area which is believed to need protection is much larger then the Government can purchase. Much difference exists, however, between different parts of the region. Careful examinations which have been going on for the last ten years have proved that the conditions which affect streamflow to an extreme extent are to be found in relatively limited areas, which are scattered more or less widely. By careful selection it is believed that much can be done for the permanent improvement of the watersheds with the purchase of a relatively small part of the land.

A blank form for the offer of land accompanies the circular. Additional copies of this blank form may be had by writing the Forest Service at Washington. The kinds of land which will be considered for purchase, if they lie within the designated areas, are set forth by the circular as follows.

Timber lands may be bought either with the timber standing on them or with reservation by the owner of the right to cut the timber under certain rules to provide for perpetuation of the forest. These will form a part of the agreement for the purchase of the land. Since, however, the Government can not pay high prices, it is not regarded as probable that much land bearing a heavy stand of merchantable timber can be bought. Culled and cut-over lands may be bougnt, as well as land covered with brush which is useful for watershed protection, burned land, and abandoned farm land, whether cleared or partially or wholly covered by young timber growth. Good agricultural lands will not be considered. Owners may reserve the right to remove valuable mineral deposits which are known to exist.

Proposals will be received for small as well as for large tracts can be examined only where the purchase of a considerable total of land in the same neighborhood is under consideration. With regard to the price which can be paid, Secretary Wilson indicates that the policy of the Commission will be to make the money available go as far as possible. "For the most part," he says, "we shall have to buy cut-over lands or lands without much merchantable timber. I want to make it plain at the start that I shall recommend this class of land only when it is offered very cheap. Proffers of land at exorbitant prices will not be considered. I am frank to say that I hope to see a great deal of public spirit manifested by land owners. I expect some lands to be offered at merely nominal prices in order to aid the Government in getting well started upon this wise and necessary policy.

"The lands acquired by the Government will be held as National Forests. They will be protected from fire and the growth of the timber will be improved as much as possible. The lands will not be game preserves, but will continue to be open to the public for hunting and fishing in accordance with the laws of the State in which they are situated. All their resources will be available for the public under reasonable conditions. Another point which I wish to emphasize is that we are not going to take from people their homes in order to put the lands into National forests."

The areas within which offers of land are desired are set forth in detail in the circular of the Forest Service. The approximate location of these areas is as follows, although Secretary Wilson warns those wishing to offer land that they should first secure the circular in order to see whether their holdings fall within the more detailed areas therein indicated:

In New Hampshire, lands in the White Mountain region.

In Maine, lands in a portion of Batcheldes's Grant in Oxford County.

In Maryland, a portion of the western part of Garrett county.

In Virginia, parts of Shenandoah, Rockingham, southwestern Warren, western Page, northern Bedford, eastern Botecourt, southern Rockbridge, southern Washington, Smyth, and Wythe counties and western Grayson county.

In West Virginia, parts of Pendleton, Hardy, Randolph and Pochahontas counties.

In Tennessee, parts of northeastern Johnson county, Cocke, Seveir, Blount, and Monroe counties.

In North Carolina, parts of Wilkes, Caldwell, Wautauga, Buncombe, Yancey, McDowell, southwestern Mitchell, Haywood, Swain, Jackson, Henderson, Transylvania, Macon, Clay, Cherokee, and Graham counties.

MARYLAND DAY

Senator Wellington Delivered an Excellent Lecture Friday Night.

Ex-Senator George L. Wellington, of Cumberland, delighted a large and very appreciative audience of Oakland people last Friday night at the court house when he addressed the pupils of the Oakland High School. The subject of Senator Wellington's address was "Distinguished Marylanders In American History," the occasion being the celebration of Maryland Day.

Mr. Wellington spoke with his usual earnestness and old time vigor and was listened to with rapt attention by his auditors as he dwelt upon the great achievements of distinguished Marylanders in shaping the destinies of the Republic from the pre-Revolutionary time to the opening of the great Civil War.

The speaker dwelt at length upon such characters as John Hanson, the first President of the United States Congress; Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; Daniel Cresap, the Allegany county Indian fighter, and numerous others who shared with equal prominence in promoting National greatness.

Mr. Wellington has always been a favorite with Garrett countians as a speaker and as a type of man who has forged ahead.

JOHN H. CUPPETT.

John H. Cuppett, a former resident of Friendsville, where he was engaged in the mercantile business, but more recently residing in Clarksburg, West Va., where he was the manager and majority owner in the Clarksburg Casket Company, died at his residence in that city last Sunday morning, March 26th, after a short illness of typhoid fever. The news of Mr. Cuppett's death came as a great shock to his many relatives and friends in Garrett county as it was not generally known that he was ill. Mr. Cuppett leaves surviving him his widow and two grown sons. His funeral took place at Clarksburg yesterday.

He was a member of the Missouri Lutheran church at Accident and was highly respected by all. He is survived by a number of grown children. His eldest son Samuel who left his home in 1872 and settled in the west, arrived in Oakland Tuesday from Hammoud, Ind., where he is engaged in educational work, and went from here to Accident the same day to attend the funeral, which took place yesterday.

He was born in Somerset county, Pa., and was a son of the late William Glotfelty, coming to this county with his parents in 1858 when his father bought the Cherry Tree Meadows tract of land containing a thousand acres and upon which he reared his family of ten sons and one daughter. The funeral of Mr. Glotfelty has not yet been arranged but it will probably occur on Sunday.

Married.

FRIEND-SPAHR—On Wednesday last at the residence of County Treasurer Robert L. Fries, west of Oakland, Mr. Samuel Herman Friend and Miss Ethel May Spahr. The groom is a son of Mr. Thomas C. Friend, of near Cranesville, and the bride who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Spahr, of near Terra Alta, was engaged in teaching the Lake Ford School. The day prior to the wedding the teacher dismissed the school as usual and announced that there would be no session the following day, but did not intimate to her scholars or even her family that she contemplated matrimony. Following the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. D. B. Orr, of Cranesville, the couple were driven to Oakland and from here left on train No. 7 for Ainsworth, Iowa, where they will make their future home.

GRIMES-LAUGHLIN—A wedding of unusual interest to society, because of the prominence of the contracting parties, occurred in Deer Park at 9 o'clock Thursday evening, the 23d inst., when Miss Sada Cornelia Laughlin became the bride of Mr. "Jack" Grimes. The ceremony, which was performed at the home of the bride's parents on Church street, was witnessed only by immediate relatives, the Rev. A. S. Arnett officiating. The bride is the only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Laughlin, one of the best known families in Garrett county, and Miss Sada, as she is popularly known, numbers her friends by the score.

The groom is a well known and popular young man, the son of Mr. J. F. Grimes a prominent real estate man of Pittsburg, Pa., and owner of the Glamorgan estate adjoining Deer Park, the most beautiful summer residence in that vicinity.

The ceremony was followed by a dinner for the wedding guests, after which Mr. and Mrs. Grimes left on No. 4 for Baltimore and other eastern points.

They have the best wishes of a large circle of friends.

Mrs. George W. Kitzmiller, of Clarksburg, W. Va., is in Oakland today.

APRIL WEATHER

As Predicted By the "Old Reliable," Peter R. Smith.

April is likely to be free from great general storms of wind, rain and floods. However, it will have his local rains, thunder showers, and in the cyclonic belts its destructive storms. The month will be normal, mostly cool till the middle of the month is passed. Following the local showers cool weather will prevail and frosty mornings will show their whitened locks. Moreover, the March storms having cleared the meteorology will give April regular weather.

March will pass to April with rising temperature and storm waves in process of formation and will be on passage on the 2d. Showers of rain and thunder will show up on the 2d and 3d.

On or touching the mornings of the 4th and 5th frosts will prevail. The temperature will change to much warmer on the 5th and storms will be in process of formation, and dates touching the 5th, 6th and 7th storms will be passing across the country eastward. Rain, wind and thunder will prevail in most parts of the country. These showers will be in the nature of heavy April showers. Also hail and snow flurries may show up. Frosts will follow about the 8th or 9th.

On the 11th, 12th and 13th storms will be on transit, attended with a high temperature. Rain, hail and thunder will prevail. After the passage of these storms the weather will be cool, with frosty mornings.

Storms will be on passage from the 17th to the 31st. Many very intense rains will show up in this period, and also hail in many places. After the passage of the storm a cool wave will follow with frost.

On the 24th and 25th showers of rain will prevail. On the 27th, 28th and 29th the temperature will be quite warm attended with storms in process of organization, which will be on transit on the 28th, 29th and 30th. These showers will be very intense in rain, wind and hail, and may be prolonged to May 1. After the passage of the wave the weather will be cool for several days.

Men who are fond of their gardens are arranging to begin work at an early date and hope for good weather soon. Mr. Leslie E. Friend, merceant and president of the First National Bank at Friendsville, came up to Oakland last Saturday and remained here until Sunday afternoon when he left for Charleston, W. Va., on business. Saturday was Mr. Friend's first visit to Oakland in a number of years. He expressed his surprise at the strides made by Oakland people generally in improvements to be seen on every hand.

The organization of a Civic Club, a meeting for which has been called for tomorrow afternoon at the court house, should meet with the approbation of every resident and property owner of Oakland. The improvement made in other towns where civic clubs have been doing effective work in beautifying the streets and homes, can easily be duplicated in Oakland. All that is required is perfected plans harmoniously and diligently work out. Everyone, men, women and children can do their share in making Oakland beautiful, attractive, a spotless town.

The following item clipped from a Cumberland paper this week will be interesting to many people in this county where the woman used to reside and was known as Belle Groves, her married name, but she seems to be going under her maiden name. Here is the item:

I will pay twenty-five dollars reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of the party or parties who circulated the report that my house, on Virginia, had been raided by the police. (Signed) MRS. BELLE K. ALBRIGHT.

Mr. Harry J. Frear, a former resident and mayor of Oakland, who removed from here to Roseburg, Oregon, returned to Garrett county last Thursday afternoon and will be engaged at Crellin for the next month or more with the Kendall Lumber Company in engineering work. Mr. Frear is extremely well pleased with his new home in the northwest where he is in the employ of the Kendall interests as manager of their holdings in that section. His son Mr. Floyd Frear is an employee of the engineering department of the city of Roseburg which Mr. Frear states is a thrifty city of some five thousand inhabitants and growing very rapidly.

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the Bronson case to get the deposition of John Gilmore, millionaire. In the latter's home he is attracted by a picture of a young girl, whom the millionaire explains is his granddaughter. A lady requests Blakeley to buy her a Pullman ticket. He gives her lower eleven and retains lower ten. He finds a drunken man in lower ten and retires in lower nine. He awakens in lower seven and finds his clothes and bag missing. The man in lower ten is found murdered. Circumstantial evidence points to both Blakeley and the unknown man who had exchanged clothes with him. Blakeley becomes interested in a girl in blue. The train is wrecked. Blakeley is rescued from the burning car by the girl in blue. His arm is broken. They go to the Carter place for breakfast. The girl proves to be Alison West, his partner's sweetheart. Her peculiar actions mystify the lawyer. She drops her gold bag and Blakeley puts it in his pocket. Blakeley returns home. He finds that he is under surveillance. Moving pictures of the train taken just before the wreck reveal to Blakeley a man leaping from the train with his stolen grip. Blakeley learns that a man named Sullivan leaped from the train near M—— and sprained his ankle. He stayed some time at the Carter place. While making inquiries at Carter's, Blakeley finds Alison and kisses her. Mrs. Conway, the woman for whom Blakeley bought the Pullman ticket, tries to make a bargain with him for the forged notes, not knowing that they are missing. An amateur detective thinks he has found Sullivan. Blakeley and the amateur detective go to the home of Sullivan's sister to investigate.

"Couldn't see you," I maintained; "I can't see you now. And your sense of contiguity didn't tell you about that flower crock."

In the end, of course, he consented to go with me. He was very lame, and I helped him around to the open window. He was full of moral courage, the little man; it was only the physical in him that quailed. And as we groped along, he insisted on going through the window first.

"If it is a trap," he whispered, "I have two arms to your one, and, besides, as I said before, life holds much for you. As for me, the government would merely lose an indifferent employe."

When he found I was going first he was rather hurt, but I did not wait for his protests. I swung my feet over the sill and dropped. I made a clutch at the window frame with my good hand when I found no floor under my feet, but I was too late. I dropped probably ten feet and landed with a crash that seemed to split my eardrums. I was thoroughly shaken, but in some miraculous way the bandaged arm had escaped injury.

"For heaven's sake," Hotchkiss was calling from above, "have you broken your back?"

"No," I returned, as steadily as I could, "merely driven it up through my skull. This is a staircase, I'm coming up to open another window."

It was eerie work, but I accomplished it finally, discovering, not without mishap, a room filled with more tables than I had ever dreamed of, tables that seemed to waylay and strike at me. When I had got a window open, Hotchkiss crawled through, and we were at last under shelter.

Our first thought was for a light. The same laborious investigation that had landed us where we were, revealed that the house was lighted by electricity, and that the plant was not in operation. By accident I stumbled across a tabouret with smoking materials, and found a half dozen matches. The first one showed us the magnitude of the room we stood in, and revealed also a brass candle-stick by the open fireplace, a candle-stick almost four feet high, supporting a candle of similar colossal proportions. It was Hotchkiss who discovered that it had been recently lighted. He held the match to it and peered at it over his glasses.

"Within ten minutes," he announced impressively, "this candle has been burning. Look at the wax! And the wick! Both soft!"

"Perhaps it's the damp weather," I ventured, moving a little nearer to the circle of light. A gust of wind came in just then, and the flame turned over on its side and threatened demise. There was something almost ridiculous in the haste with which we put down the window and nursed the flicker to life.

The peculiarly ghost-like appearance of the room added to the uncanniness of the situation. The furniture was swathed in white covers for the winter; even the pictures wore shrouds. And in a niche between two windows a bust on a pedestal, similarly wrapped, one arm extended under its winding sheet, made a most life-like ghost, if any ghost can be life-like.

In the light of the candle we surveyed each other, and we were objects for mirth. Hotchkiss was taking off his sodden shoes and preparing to make himself comfortable, while I hung my muddy raincoat over the ghost in the corner. Thus habited, he presented a rakish but distinctly more comfortable appearance.

"When these people built," Hotchkiss said, surveying the huge dimensions of the room, "they must have bought a mountain and built all over it. What a room!"

It seemed to be a living room, although Hotchkiss remarked that it was much more like a dead one. It was probably 50 feet long and 25 feet wide. It was very high, too, with a domed ceiling, and a gallery ran around the entire room, about 15 feet above the floor. The candle light did not penetrate beyond the dim outlines of the gallery rail, but I fancied the wall there hung with smaller pictures.

Hotchkiss had discovered a fire laid in the enormous fireplace, and in a few minutes we were steaming before a cheerful blaze. Within the radius of its light and heat, we were comfortable again. But the brightness merely emphasized the gloom of the ghostly corners. We talked in subdued tones, and I smoked a box of Russian cigarettes which I found in a table drawer. We had decided to stay all night, there being nothing else to do. I suggested a game of double-dummy bridge, but did not urge it when my companion asked if it resembled euchre. Gradually, as the ecclesiastical candle paled in the firelight, we grew drowsy. I drew a divan into the cheerful area and stretched myself out for sleep. Hotchkiss, who said the pain in his leg made him wakeful, sat wide-eyed by the fire, smoking a pipe.

I have no idea how much time had passed when something threw itself violently on my chest. I roused with a start and leaped on my feet, and a large Angora cat fell with a thump to the floor. The fire was still bright, and there was an odor of scorched leather through the room, from Hotchkiss' shoes. The little detective was sound asleep, his dead pipe in his fingers. The cat sat back on its haunches and wailed.

The curtain at the door into the hallway bellied slowly out into the room and fell again. The cat looked toward it and opened its mouth for another howl. I thrust at it with my foot, but it refused to move. Hotchkiss stirred uneasily, and his pipe clattered to the floor.

The cat was standing at my feet, staring behind me. Apparently it was following with its eyes an object unseen to me, that moved behind me. The tip of its tail waved threateningly, but when I wheeled I saw nothing.

I took the candle and made a circuit of the room. Behind the curtain that had moved the door was securely closed. The windows were shut and locked, and everywhere the silence was absolute. The cat followed me majestically. I stooped and stroked its head, but it persisted in its uncanny watching of the corners of the room.

When I went back to my divan, after putting a fresh log on the fire, I was reassured. I took the precaution, and smiled at myself for doing it, to put the fire tongs within reach of my hand. But the cat would not let me sleep. After a time I decided that it wanted water, and I started out in search of some, carrying the candle without the stand. I wandered through several rooms, all closed and dismantled, before I found a small lavatory opening off a billiard room. The cat lapped steadily, and I filled a glass to take back with me. The candle flickered in a sickly fashion that threatened to leave me there lost in the wanderings of the many hallways, and from somewhere there came an occasional violent puff of wind. The cat stuck by my feet, with the hair on its back raised menacingly. I don't like cats; there is something psychic about them.

Hotchkiss was still asleep when I got back to the big room. I moved his boots back from the fire and trimmed the candle. Then, with sleep gone from me, I lay back on my divan and reflected on many things; on my idiocy in coming; on Alison West, and the fact that only a week before she had been a guest in this very house; on Richey and the constraint that had come between us. From that I drifted back to Alison, and to the barrier my comparative poverty would be.

The emptiness, the stillness were oppressive. Once I heard footsteps coming, rhythmical steps that neither hurried nor dragged, and seemed to mount endless staircases without coming any closer. I realized finally that I had not quite turned off the tap, and that the lavatory, which I had circled to reach, must be quite close.

The cat lay by the fire, its nose on its folded paws, content in the warmth and companionship. I watched it idly. Now and then the green wood hissed in the fire, but the cat never batted an eye. Through an unshuttered window the lightning flashed. Suddenly the cat looked up. It lifted its head and stared directly at the gallery above. Then it blinked, and stared again. I was amused. Not until it had got up on its feet, eyes still riveted on the balcony, tail waving at the tip, the hair on its back a bristling brush, did I glance casually over my head.

From among the shadows a face gazed down at me, a face that seemed a fitting tenant of the ghostly room below. I saw it as plainly as I might see my own face in a mirror. While I stared at it with horrified eyes, the apparition faded. The rail was there, the Bokhara rug still swung from it, but the gallery was empty.

The cat threw back its head and wailed.

CHAPTER XXIV.

His Wife's Father.

I jumped up and seized the fire tongs. The cat's wail had roused Hotchkiss, who was wide-awake at once. He took in my offensive attitude, the tongs, the direction of my gaze, and needed nothing more. As he picked up the candle and darted out into the hall, I followed him. He made directly for the staircase, and part way up he turned off to the right through a small door. We were on the gallery itself; below us the fire gleamed cheerfully, the cat was not in sight. There was no sign of my ghostly visitant, but as we stood there the Bokhara rug, without warning, slid over the railing and fell to the floor below.

"Man or woman?" Hotchkiss inquired in his most professional tone.

"Neither—that is, I don't know. I didn't notice anything but the eyes," I muttered. "They were looking a hole in me. If you'd seen that cat you would realize my state of mind. That was a traditional graveyard yowl."

"I don't think you saw anything at all," he lied cheerfully. "You dozed off, and the rest is the natural result of a meal on a buffet car."

Nevertheless, he examined the Bokhara carefully when we went down, and when I finally went to sleep he was reading the only book in sight—"Elwell on Bridge." The first rays of daylight were coming mistily into the room when he roused me. He had his finger on his lips, and he whispered sibilantly while I tried to draw on my distorted boots.

"I think we have him," he said triumphantly. "I've been looking around some, and I can tell you this much. Just before we came in through the window last night, another man came. Only—he did not drop, as you did. He swung over to the stair railing, and then down. The rail is scratched. He was long enough ahead of us to go into the dining room and get a decanter out of the sideboard. He poured out the liquor into a glass, left the decanter there, and took the whisky into the library across the hall. Then—he broke into a desk, using a paper knife for a jimmy."

"Good Lord, Hotchkiss," I exclaimed; "why, it may have been Sullivan himself! Confound your theories—he's getting farther away every minute."

"It was Sullivan," Hotchkiss returned imperturbably. "And he has not gone. His boots are by the library fire."

"He probably had a dozen pairs where he could get them," I scoffed. "And while you and I sat and slept, the very man we want to get our hands on leered at us over that railing."

"Softly, softly, my friend," Hotchkiss said, as I stamped into my other shoe. "I did not say he was gone. Don't jump at conclusions. It is fatal to reasoning. As a matter of fact, he didn't relish a night on the mountains any more than we did. After he had unintentionally frightened you almost into paralysis, what would my gentleman naturally do? Go out in the storm again? Not if I know the Alice-sit-by-the-fire type. He went upstairs, well up near the roof, locked himself in and went to bed."

"And he is there now?"

"He is there now."

We had no weapons. I am aware that the traditional hero is always armed, and that Hotchkiss as the low comedian should have had a revolver that missed fire. As a fact, we had nothing of the sort. Hotchkiss carried the fire tongs, but my sense of humor was too strong for me; I declined the poker.

"All we want is a little peaceable conversation with him," I demurred. "We can't brain him first and converse with him afterward. And anyhow, while I can't put my finger on the place, I think your theory is weak. If he wouldn't run 100 miles through fire and water to get away from us, then he is not the man we want."

Hotchkiss, however, was certain. He had found the room and listened outside the door to the sleeper's heavy breathing, and so we climbed past luxurious suites, revealed in the deepening daylight, past long vistas of hall and boudoir. And we were both badly winded when we got there. It was a tower room, reached by narrow stairs, and well above the roof level. Hotchkiss was glowing.

"It is partly good luck, but not all," he panted in a whisper. "If we had persisted in the search last night, he would have taken alarm and fled. Now—we have him. Are you ready?"

He gave a mighty rap at the door with the fire tongs, and stood expectant. Certainly he was right; some one moved within.

"Hello! Hello there!" Hotchkiss bawled. "You might as well come out. We won't hurt you, if you'll come peaceably."

"Tell him we represent the law," I prompted. "That's the customary thing, you know."

But at that moment a bullet came squarely through the door and flattened itself with a sharp pst against the wall of the tower staircase. We ducked unanimously, dropped back out of range, and Hotchkiss retaliated with a spirited bang bang at the door with the tongs. This brought another bullet. It was a ridiculous situation. Under the circumstances, no doubt, we should have retired, at least until we had armed ourselves, but Hotchkiss had no end of fighting spirit, and as for me, my blood was up.

"Break the lock," I suggested, and Hotchkiss, standing at the side, out of range, retaliated for every bullet by a smashing blow with the tongs. The shots ceased after a half dozen, and the door was giving, slowly. One of us on each side of the door, we were ready for almost any kind of desperate resistance. As it swung open Hotchkiss poised the tongs; I stood, bent forward, my arm drawn back for a blow.

Nothing happened.

There was not a sound. Finally, at the risk of losing an eye which I justly value, I peered around and into the room. There was no desperado there: Only a fresh-faced, trembling-lipped servant, sitting on the edge of her bed, with a quilt around her shoulders and the empty revolver at her feet.

We were victorious, but conquered army never beat such a retreat as ours down the tower stairs and into the refuge of the living room. There, with the door closed, sprawled on the divan, I went from one spasm of mirth into another, becoming sane at intervals, and suffering relapse again every time I saw Hotchkiss' disgruntled countenance. He was pacing the room, the tongs still in his hand, his mouth pursed with irritation. Finally he stopped in front of me and compelled my attention.

"When you have finished cackling," he said with dignity, "I wish to justify my position. Do you think the—er—young woman upstairs put a pair of number eight boots to dry in the library last night? Do you think she poured the whisky out of that decanter?"

"They have been known to do it," I put in, but his eye silenced me.

"Moreover, if she had been the person who peered at you over the gallery railing last night, don't you suppose, with her—er—belligerent disposition, she could have filed you as full of lead as a window weight?"

"I do," I assented. "It wasn't Alice-sit-by-the-fire. I grant you that. Then who was it?"

To Incline Toward Mercy.

Jim had been far from a good boy during the day and toward nightfall he realized the fact fully. Being well acquainted with the workings of family discipline, he assayed a little diplomacy.

"Shall you tell father about me?" he inquired of his mother.

"Certainly I shall tell him," responded his mother, with sorrowful firmness.

"Shall you tell him before dinner or after dinner?" asked the culprit.

"After dinner," was the announcement.

"Mother," and Jim gave a wiggle of anticipation, "couldn't you have a blueberry pudding for his dessert? Couldn't you do that much for me, mother?"—Youth's Companion.

SHORTHORNS POSSESS MANY EXCELLENT DAIRY QUALITIES

English Breeder Developed Milk Producing Strain and His Cows Were Well Known All Over England for Their Superiority.

From the very origin of the breed Shorthorns have had two qualities to commend them to favorable consideration, and it is this dual capacity of beef and milk production that has made them so popular with farmers and stockmen. As beef producers Shorthorns are "known of all men;" but their dairy qualities, though excellent when properly developed, are not so generally understood. The early history of the breed furnishes many instances of cows that were great milk producers, says the Northwestern Agriculturist.

One of the earliest breeders to develop milk production in his herd was Jonas Whittaker, and, as a result, his cows were known all over England for their excellent dairy qualities. Even in the herds of the Booths, where beef form and fleshing quality was the first consideration, cows of heavy milk production were developed. Sir Charles Knightley had a tribe known as the Fawsley Fillpails that did much to establish the fame of Shrothorn cows as excellent at the pail. The herd of Thomas Bates was established about the year 1800 and soon became the most noted in England.

This herd was carefully bred for beef form and soon became the fountain head from which other breeders drew their herd bulls; yet Mr. Bates was careful to cultivate the milking qualities of his herd, and in consequence, had cows that give from 24 to 34 quarts of milk per day. So persistently did he impress this in this herd of cows that many of their descendants proved excellent milkers many generations after Mr. Bates' herd was dispersed. Hence the prevailing opinion that Shorthorn cows of exceptional dairy qualities should be sought among those carrying an infusion of Bates blood has a foundation in fact; yet there are exceptions and some notable ones.

Amos Cruickshank, who drew the attention of the beef producing world to the excellence of the Scotch Shorthorns, by the wonderful fleshing qualities he had bred into his herd, was not unmindful of the dairy qualities of his cows, and in that marvelous herd of beef cattle were many matrons quite good at the pail.

The large dairies that supply milk for London are composed quite largely, and in some cases exclusively, of Shorthorn cows. This is also true in part of dairies in New York and New England.

WATER FOR DAIRY COWS

Important That the Three or More Gallons Given to Animals Daily be Warmed to About 60 Degrees F.

It is very important that the water drunk by the cows giving three or more gallons of milk daily be warmed to about 60 degrees F. Otherwise the cows will not drink as much as they need to keep up a good milk flow. It does not take much ice water to chill a thin-fleshed cow through and through on a cold winter day, especially when she is compelled to walk some distance through the snow or a cutting wind to get to the tank or pond. Experiments made at the Missouri state experimental station show that drinking water is needed in proportion to the milk yield. That is, a cow giving six gallons of milk a day needs about twice as much water as a cow giving three gallons a day. If the water is too cold to be comfortable if drunk in large quantities, the cow will not drink enough, and as a result, will drop considerably in her milk yield. When Missouri Chief Josephine was giving about 100 pounds of milk each day last winter she drank daily about 31 gallons of water. Imagine how she would have suffered if that had been ice water. It was warmed, however, and Josephine did not chill after drinking.

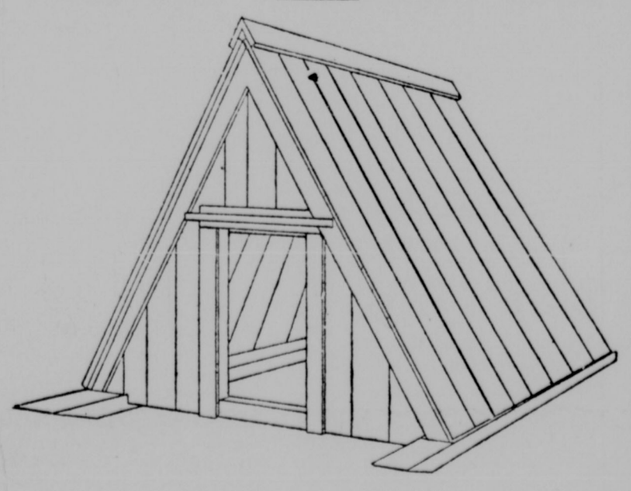
Green Feeding Worth While.

If the best results are to be obtained with poultry they must be furnished plenty of green feed, is a statement so often heard that its repetition seems silly; yet there are flocks on fairly prosperous farms where one would think the practice of regular green feeding had never been heard of.

Conditions for Live Stock.

If you are in doubt as to the conditions you should give your live stock in the barn-yard, imagine yourself in the animals' place.

CARE FOR FARROWING SOWS



To produce strong, healthy pigs, hey must be looked after before they re born. The sow must be cared for nd fed properly if she is to give birth o a good litter of pigs. As a rule, the ow is neglected during this period, he owner seeming to think that the pplication of care and feed after she as farrowed is all that is required. We should know that a poorly nourished mother means a weak, sickly itter of pigs.

The question of shelter is an important one, whether in the northern or outhern states, although in the south —the far south especially—very little shelter except at farrowing time is needed. At farrowing time the mother should always be supplied with a building that will afford shelter from the rain and the wind for both the mother and the pigs until the pigs become dry. If the wind strikes the young pigs when they are first born they will often chill to death. Each farmer can make his own shelter, to be in keeping with his surroundings, but probably the best and most economical building that can be made is a portable hoghouse.

WEAK BACKS MADE STRONG.

Backache in most cases is kidney-ache, and usually accompanied by irregularities of the urine. To remove the pain and weakness, you must cure the kidneys. Do so with Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Rosa Weinmann, 1927 Greenwood Terrace, Chicago, Ill., says: "So intense were the rheumatic pains in my back, I felt like screaming. They gradually became more severe until they ran all over my body. I could not sleep and could hardly move. I steadily grew worse until I could scarcely open or close my hands. No relief was obtained until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Soon I felt better and ere long the pain left."

Exhorting the Ducks.

There are two tiny boys in this town whose mother sings often to them at their request, and as she is an ardent church woman, the children hear as many hymns as anything else. The other day they were playing with their wooden ducks in the bathtub, and strangely enough the ducks were more inclined to float sideways than in the approved manner. After several attempts to keep the misguided ducks straight the older boy shouted:

"Stand up, duck, stand up!" Then two-year-old, noting the familiar phrase, leaned over the tub and exhorted. "'Tand up, duck! 'Tand up for Jesus!"

Warned.

A serious-minded New Yorker, who, because of his dignified outlook on life, has sent his son, aged twelve, to a particularly strict and proper boarding school in New England, unexpectedly visited the school last week. Ascertaining the location of his young hopeful's room, he climbed the four flights of stairs necessary to reach it—and entered. On a mammoth placard suspended from a steel engraving of "Washington and Generals" (presented to the youth as a Christmas gift by his admiring parent) was the cheerful sentiment:

"Don't spit on the ceiling. We have lost our ladder."

Her Wedding March.

A young girl who had never heard of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," but was familiar with the more popular parody on it, was a witness to a wedding ceremony in an uptown church recently. As the betrothed pair walked with dignified tread toward the altar to be wed and the organ pealed forth Mendelssohn's inspiring march, the young girl was plainly shocked. When she arrived at her home she told her mother of the ceremoney and innocently exclaimed: "What do you think, mother, they played 'Gee Whiz! I'm glad I'm Free.'"

EDITOR BROWNE
Of The Rockford Morning Star.

"About seven years ago I ceased drinking coffee to give your Postum a trial.

"I had suffered acutely from various forms of indigestion and my stomach had become so disordered as to repel almost every sort of substantial food. My general health was bad. At close intervals I would suffer severe attacks which confined me in bed for a week or more. Soon after changing from coffee to Postum the indigestion abated, and in a short time ceased entirely. I have continued the daily use of your excellent Food Drink and assure you most cordially that I am indebted to you for the relief it has brought me.

"Wishing you a continued success, I am Yours very truly,

J. Stanley Browne,
Managing Editor."

Of course, when a man's health shows he can stand coffee without trouble, let him drink it, but most highly organized brain-workers simply cannot.

The drugs natural to the coffee berry affect the stomach and other organs and thence to the complex nervous system, throwing it out of balance and producing disorders in various parts of the body. Keep up this daily poisoning and serious disease generally supervenes. So when man or woman finds that coffee is a smooth but deadly enemy and health is of any value at all, there is but one road—quit.

It is easy to find out if coffee be the cause of the troubles, for if left off 10 days and Postum be used in its place and the sick and diseased conditions begin to disappear, the proof is unanswerable.

Postum is not good if made by short boiling. It must be boiled full 15 minutes after boiling begins, when the crisp flavor and the food elements are brought out of the grains and the beverage is ready to fulfill its mission of palatable comfort and renewing the cells and nerve centers broken down by coffee.

There is no other season when medicine is so much needed as in the spring. The blood is impure and impoverished—a condition indicated by pimples, boils and other eruptions on the face and body, by deficient vitality, loss of appetite, lack of strength.

The best spring medicine, according to the experience and testimony of thousands annually, is

Hood's Sarsaparilla

It purifies and enriches the blood, cures eruptions, builds up the system.

A Helpless Invalid

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is, it would almost seem, to blame for her own wretchedness. Read what this woman says:

Richmond, Mo. — "When my second daughter was eighteen months old I was pronounced a hopeless invalid by specialists. I had a consultation of doctors and they said I had a severe case of ulceration. I was in bed for ten weeks, had sinking spells, and was pronounced to be in a dangerous condition. My father insisted that we try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and brought me six bottles. I soon began to improve, and before it had all been taken I was as well and strong as ever,—my friends hardly recognized me so great was the change." — Mrs. Woodson Branstetter, Richmond, Mo.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what another woman says:—

Jonesboro, Texas. — "I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for myself and daughter, and consider it unequalled for all female diseases. I would not be without it for anything. I wish every mother in America could be persuaded to use it as there would be less suffering among our sex then. I am always glad to speak a word of praise for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and you are at liberty to use this testimonial."—Mrs. James T. Lawrence, Jonesboro, Texas.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice—it is free and always helpful.

MILD, GENTLE LAXATIVE FOR WOMEN GIVEN FREE

So many of the ills of women are due to habitual constipation, probably because of their false modesty on the subject, that their attention cannot be too strongly called to the importance of keeping the bowels open. It is always important to do that, regardless of the sex, but it is especially important in women.

From the time the girl begins to menstruate until menstruation ceases she has always vastly better prospects of coming through healthy if she watches her bowel movements. If you find yourself constipated, with bad breath, pimply complexion, headaches, belching gas and other symptoms of indigestion and constipation, take a small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a woman's favorite laxative. You will find that you can do away with salts, strong cathartics, etc., which are entirely unsuited to woman's requirements.

Mrs. Katherine Haberstroh of McKees Rocks, Pa., and Mrs. A. E. Herrick of Wheeler, Mich., who was almost paralyzed in her stomach and bowels, are now cured by the use of this remedy. A free sample bottle can be obtained by addressing Dr. Caldwell, and after you are convinced of its merits buy it of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle.

For the free sample address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Still winter does not want to let go.

The band was out serenading Saturday night and everybody spoke in highest praise of their playing.

Miss Effie Fox spent a short vacation in Uniontown, Pa., returning on Monday.

Word was received Sunday morning by telegraph that John H. Cuppett, of Clarksburg, W. V., had passed away. Death was due to typhoid fever. Mr. Cuppett was well known here, as for years he was a successful merchant of our town. He was always kind, courteous and a gentleman. He had a host of friends and all extend their sympathy to the widow and her two sons in their hour of affliction.

The surveyors for the new road will be here this or next week. They would have been on the ground soon, but for the bad weather. However word was sent from headquarters that they will start the survey as soon as the weather will permit.

We hear that there is prospects of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad extending their line to Oakland.

Orval Jenkins has had a beautiful new sign hung outside his restaurant.

Tom Fike returned home from Balmore on Friday.

George Kolb was a visitor to Accident for a few days last week.

Mrs. Salathiel Savage is out again after her long siege of sickness.

Miss Iva Savage returned home the latter part of last week from Pittsburg, where she had undergone a surgical operation at the Mercy Hospital.

Rev. Jasper Frantz came home for a visit to his mother last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Smith, of Morgantown, are visiting at Ami Frankhouser and family with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wolf. They leave Tuesday for home.

The public school will close for this term on Friday of this week.

We are to have normal school here this summer.

And now what do you think of a factory for canning fruit, vegetables, etc? This town is far from being a back number. We have enterprising business people here who don't have to consider long when a good thing is proposed to them. Mention of a cannery for canning vegetables, etc., was made in last week's REPUBLICAN, and our people became very enthusiastic over it and a company will be formed immediately with sufficient capital raised to start a first class concern and work pushed so everything will be ready for this season's crop. And now a word to the farming community, and those who have truck patches, large and small: It is up to you to raise the required fruit or vegetables to make this a success. There is no crop that the farmer can raise that will bring in as much money per acre as growing vegetables when you have a market for them, as this will be.

Mrs. Jessie Frazee returned Monday from a visit to her daughter Mrs. Paul at Unamis, where she spent several days.

Why not make use of our clay deposits. This would make a capital location for a brick yard.

It is getting time to do the cleaning up around our dwellings after the hard winter and while we are doing that don't forget our cemetery. Let us appoint a time and get out there and fix it up. You can tell what kind of a town you are entering by the way your cemetery is taken care of. If you have no loved ones resting there, don't forget that the time must come when we will be laid there with our dear ones.

There are not enough REPUBLICAN papers coming to this town and vicinity. We think it would pay a representative of the greatest weekly to visit our city and stir up things. The news items from here generally take in the whole business and are just as good as if we had a paper right here. Subscribe citizens and keep posted on the news of the day.

The band talks of erecting a stand for the purpose of giving evening concerts during the summer months.

There seems to have been quite a prize fight a few miles out of town, although we don't think fists were used as weapons. We heard pitchforks and rocks were resorted to. Maybe it would pay some one to come here and teach the manly art, but for our part we would sooner kiss and make up.

HAUSER.

Preaching in the M. E. church at 11 a. m. and 7.30 p. m.

BLOOMINGTON.

Work at the mines in this vicinity still continues dull with no immediate prospect of improvement. This is not only the condition of business surrounding our little town, but all along the line of the W. M. R. R. and the George's Creek Valley the same conditions prevail—half time and a poor turn at that.

The Ladies' Aid society was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bownan on Tuesday night. After the regular business had been transacted Mrs. Bowman served delicious refreshments.

Rev. J. L. Duncan, of the M. E. Charge of this place, who has not only been acting as pastor to the church, but principal of the public school as well, will leave for Washington City on next Friday evening, immediately after the close of his school, to be present at the conference of his chnrch, which convenes in that city the latter part of this week.

Mr. John Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Elliott of this place whose term of enlistment in the U. S. army will expire in six months, has been sent to the Philippines Islands, where he will end his military services. A postal card received by his parents from Honolulu, en route, reports a most delightful trip.

Prof. Rathbun, principal of the Piedmont High school, a Garrett county young man who has made good and struck a popular cord as a public educator in our neighboring state by virtue of ability and hard work, was a visitor to friends in town on Sunday.

The "kids" are around with their wooden Easter eggs gathering pennies for the Easter Festival. Don't be a grouch, give them a penny. The kids will be the "grown ups" in a few years and you may need them to help you over mud holes in your old days. They will not forget you.

Mr. Edward Whisner, of Beryl, son-in-law of Mr. Joseph Paugh, of this place, went under the knife at the Western Maryland hospital, Cumberland, on Monday morning for appendicitis. He stood the operation well and is reported as being in good shape.

Mr. Jacob Barker and his wife, of Swanton, were guest of his son-in-law, Mr. James Coffman, during the week.

Word comes from over the mountain of the complete destruction by fire early Sunday morning of the Mt. Zion school house, situated along the county road midway between Barnum and Swanton. A box supper or festival had been held in the building on Saturday night and it is supposed that the fire rolled out of the stove used in heating the room.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Brydon, of New York city, arrived in town on Wednesday morning on a visit to the parental homestead.

We are having more different kinds of weather in one week than the Hagerstown Almanac predicted for the entire month of March. Monday at noon the thermometer registeaed 68 degrees, on Tuesday morning 25 degrees.

Fruit growers of this vicinity are well pleased with weather conditions this spring. The continued cold mornings have a tendency to check the growth of the buds, hence the optimistic view of the orchardists.

Cheering News From Grantsville.

Messrs. J. M. Tucker. E. E. Ruggles and A. B. Uhlen were in Grantsville Wednesday in the interest of good roads, especially the habilitation of the National Pike.

They inspected thoroughly the old National Pike bridge and spoke warmly in favor of restoring it to its original condition.

The bridge is one of the prettiest landmaks of the National Road achievement in Garrett county, and the people rejoicing in the prospect of seeing it again made useful and beautiful.

Enough was stated while the gentlemen were in Grantsville to warrant the expectation that the State Commission will be ready to receive bids for rebuilding the five miles of National Pike west of the Allegany county line on or about April 1st.

Later—The same gentlemen were in Frostburg Thursday, but interviews with road authorities here were not so satisfactory. The 5½-mile stretch, west of the county line, has been reduced to 4½ miles, in order, it is believad, to build a trans-continental highway of similar length from Oakland to Scuffleburg, or some place named like that. Oakland folks may differ as to the demerits of descendants of the great Browning family, but they are an invincible unit when it comes to the State Board, that, the shorter the Oakland road, the more imperious its demands.

OAKLAND CIVIC CLUB HAS BEEN ORGANIZED

Miss Tecla Fundenburg Elected Presisent and Committees Appointed.

The Civic Club of Oakland is the latest organization to claim favor with the the residents of the town, and the ladies composing it should be heartily supported by every business man and property owner within the municipality, for with this organization in perfect harmony and working toward one particular purpose of accomplishment—the beautifying and better sanitation of the town—the investment will yield heavy returns.

The meeting of the women of Oakland for the purpose of organizing the club was held in the court house last Friday afternoon when the organization was effected with a membership of twenty-three, Miss Tecla Fundenburg was chosen president; Mrs. Edward H. Sincell, vice president; Mrs. Lou Waters, secretary, and Mrs. Julius C. Renninger, treasurer.

Various committees were appointed as follows:

On municipal affairs, Mrs. M. C. Hinebaugh, charman; cemetery committee, Mrs. Eva Mitchell, chairman; sanitation committee, Mrs. C. Elwood Offutt, chairman; publicity committee, Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell, chairman. The heads of these committees were empowered to appoint their fellow committee members, whose names will be announced at a meeting of the club to be held on Tuesday afternoon of next week, to which all not affiliated with the club are urgently invited to be present and become members.

The meeting last Friday being for the sole purpose of organization nothing of a practical nature was accomplished aside from that above stated.

The ladies desire to extend their thanks to Mr. Wotring, street supervisor, for his effectual and faithful work in the past and express the hope that they may be permitted to cooperate with him in beautifying the streets of the town and assist in any way possible to that end.

The object of the civic club and the purpose for which it has been organized is to impress upon householders and the public generally the great necessity, from a sanitary as well as an artistic point of view, the need of a general spring housecleaning as successfully carried out, not alone in towns of small dimensions, but in some of the larger cities of this country, under the direction of similar clubs. This spring cleaning is in no wise to be understood as applying to the interior of dwellings or to interfere with the work of the housekeeper. It is simply and solely to apply to the civic housecleaning of cellars and yards, public and private alleys, public and private lots, streets, etc., in fact any place, public or semi-public, where the broom is needed and which could possibly grow into a disease breeding place.

Mayor Hart has expressed his willingness to assist the members of the club in carrying out any practical plan they may present to the city authorities.

EIGHT MONTHS IN THE HOUSE OF CORRECTION

Was the Sentence Imposed on Mike Bell for Illegal Sale of Liquor.

Mike Bell, an Austrian, charged with illegally retailing liquor near Swanton, was arrested last Friday and brought to Oakland by Sheriff Shartzer, and on Saturday he was given a hearing upon the charge by Justice Teats. The evidence brought out the fact that Bell dispensed beer and liquor from his shanty, built near the tracks of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at a point below Swanton, near Stricker's siding, not alone during the days of the week, but also on Sunday, without either State or Government license and in dry territory.

Sunday prior to his arrest Bell dispensed liquor to a crowd of young men residing in the neighborhood of Swanton and this act led to his undoing, complaint being laid with the State's officers and his arrest immediately followed.

After hearing the testimony of witnesses Bell was found guilty upon three charges and the Court sentenced him to serve a term of eight months in the House of Correction, to which institution he will shortly be taken by Sheriff Shartzer.

The hearing before Justice Teats involved Andrew C. Rawlings, of near Swanton, one witness testifying that Rawlings also sold liquor over the counter in Bell's emporium. The latter disclaiming any intention of violating the law, however, and stated that he waited upon the "customer" by direction of Bell. Rawlings' arrest followed and he is now under bond for his appearance before Justice Teats for a hearing to be held Monday morning.

SUP'T BROWNING CRITICIZED BY STATE BOARD

In its Opinion on School Matters in Garrett.

The following is the text of the opinion of the State Board of Education in the case of Browning and others vs. county superintendent E. A. Browning.

Thomas J. Browning and nine others, as citizens and taxpayers of Garrett county, united in filing a petition to this Board, asking for the passage of an order requiring Edward A. Browning, the county superintendent of the public schools of said county, to show cause why said Browning should not be removed from office.

The petition charges that said Browning is "inefficient and incompetent for the discharge of the duties of said office and has been guilty of such dereliction of duty to the interests of the public schools of said county as to unfit him for the office he holds, and to bring the school system into public disgrace and scandal."

Nine charges were set forth, and under several of them numerous specifications were particularly set out.

The charges are, in substance, as follows:

1. Failure to visit schools as required by law.
2. Improperly granting certificates to teach.
3. Failure to hold proper examinations of teachers.
4. Failure to perform duties required by law whereby schools have become a public scandal, and competent teachers compelled to leave the county.
5. With unjust treatment of t achers, neglect to provide schools with teachers, and improper award of contracts.
6. With using undue and improper influence with the school commissioners in matters relating to salaries.
7. With using the power of his office to gratify personal spite.
8. Failure to hold public examinations of pupils.
9. Unfair award of scholarships.

The case was heard at a special meeting of the Board, held on March 2nd, at Oakland. Both sides were represented by counsel, a mass of documentary evidence submitted, twenty-three witnesses for the complainants and four for the respondent, were examined, and more than six hours given to the taking of testimony and hearing the arguments.

Section II of Chapter 3 of Article 77 of the Code provides that the State Board of Education "shall have power to remove or suspend any county superintendent who may be found inefficient or incompetent for the discharge of duties assigned him, or guilty of such moral delinquincy as unfits him for the office he holds."

It was proven by numerous witnesses and indeed admitted by the respondent himself, that the superintendent has not visited the schools twice each year, as required by law, and that he had not held the examinations of pupils as required by the By-Law of this Board, offering as reasons for his failure to do so the short school term of seven and one-half months, bad roads and general climatic conditions prevailing in the mountains during the late fall, winter and early spring seasons.

Now it is not difficult to see how such conditions might, in Garrett county, with its large area, severe winter climate, rough mountain roads and widely separated school houses, at times prevent a literal compliance with Section 72 requiring the superintendent to visit the various schools, but we are at loss to know how any of the reasons assigned could explain the failure to hold public examinations under Section 48 of Article 77, and Section 15 of Chapter V of the By-Laws of this Board.

This duty of supervision imposed upon the superintendent is the most important work he has to perform, and nothing should be permitted to interfere with its thorough, conscientious and efficient performance. The closer this supervision, the better the results; but, as conditians vary in the different counties, the law has prescribed a minimum number of visits to each school year, according to the number of teachers employed. The minimum for Garrett county, with about one hundred and seventy-three teachers, is two visits to each school during each scholastic year.

There was an effort on the part of the respondent to show that it is not possible for the superintendent, who has no assistant, to make two visits each year to each school, and in addition to such work, properly carry on the office work.

If this be true, it is a condition that should be remedied by the local authorities, but we do not intend to be understood as holding that such is necessarily the case.

These visits of the superintendent are vitally important to teachers and pupils alike; they are essential to the successful administration of the public schools; they are clearly required by the law, all of the schools of the county, no matter how small or how remote are entitled to receive the benefits to be derived from them.

As there is, however, no evidence in the case sufficient to convince us that there has been any willful neglect of duty on the part of the superintendent, either as to the visits or the public examinations of pupils, though we feel compelled under the evidence to sustain charges one and eight, we do not take the view that these charges alone should be held to justify either removal or suspension of the superintendent.

The evidence offered being in our opinion insufficient to support charges two, three, four, five, six, seven and nine, they are not sustained, and the petition is therefore dismissed.

NEW TOWN COUNCIL MET AND ORGANIZED MONDAY

Mr. G. Arthur Fraley Elected President of the Body and Mr. Dunham Clerk.

The new Town Council met on Monday night and was organized by the election of Mr. G. A. Fraley, one of the holdover members of the body, as its president, succeeding Mr. J. M. Stanton, who served in that capacity formerly.

Mr. John C. Dunham, who has been clerk for many years, was reelected to that position. Other officers elected by Council were as follows: Collector, Mr. D. M. Mason; weighmaster, Mr. J. O. Hinebaugh; street commissioner, Mr. A. C. Wotring; water superintendent, Mr. Lee Mason. The Council deadlocked on the election of treasurer, Messrs. J. M. Jarboe, Jr., and W. L. Thomas being the nominees. Three ballots were taken and the election resulted in a tie in each instance, hence no chice was made.

Mayor Hart submitted his nominations as follows and they were comfirmed: Bailiff, Bartlett Nethken; police magistrate, Ed. I. West. No recommendation was made with respect to the attorneyship.

A special meeting of Council will be held next Monday night when the unfinished business of last Monday will be completed and the vacancies now existing will probably be filled.

We hereby extend our heartfelt thanks to the kind people of Selbysport and community for their kindness and help during the sickness and death of our dear wife and mother.

THE GREAT HEREAFTER

By PASTOR RUSSELL
of Brooklyn Tabernacle

TEXT—It shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow into it.—Isaiah 11:2.

Our text has not yet been fulfilled, but we believe the beginning of its fulfillment to be near. It pictures Messiah's kingdom, for which Christian people have long been waiting and praying, "Thy kingdom come; they will be done on earth as it is in heaven"—the same kingdom for which the Jews so long waited and are still waiting. Our text relates not to the spiritual part of the kingdom, which the Gospel church is called to share, but to the earthly part of the kingdom, which belongs to the natural seed of Abraham. A great mistake has been made by many of us in the past, in that we have not discerned and acknowledged the two Israels, spiritual and natural, and the separate rewards and blessings apportioned to these by the Divine promises of the Scriptures. Both are to be used of God in fulfilling the promise made to Abraham—in blessing all the families of the earth.

After the completion of Messiah, Head and Members, on the plane of glory, the New Covenant will be inaugurated with Israel, as the Scriptures distinctly teach (Jeremiah xxxi. 31-34). Our text, therefore, waits for its accomplishment until the last member of the elect Church of Christ shall have passed beyond the vale.

In the symbolic language of the Scriptures a mountain is always symbolical of a kingdom. Hence the mountain of the Lord's house means the kingdom of God and that royal house or family recognized by him. For instance, we read that David sat upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord and that God made a covenant with him, "even the sure mercies of David"—viz., that none but his seed, his posterity, would ever be recognized as the Divinely appointed representatives of God in kingly authority and power. In other words, Messiah was to be the offspring of David, the great antitypical David (Beloved), who must "reign from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth."

The Messiah-King on the spirit plane, the Son of God (and like God invisible to men, as are also the angels), is the antitypical David and the antitypical Solomon, the wise, the great, the rich. In the days of his flesh our Lord was the Son of David according to the flesh, though begotten of a divine life not tainted by any human imperfection. He was, therefore, holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners. His faithfulness to the will of the Father made him subject to all of the experiences of suffering and death, as expressed in his own words. The cup which my Father has poured for me, shall I refuse to drink it? His obedience unto death, even the death of the cross, demonstrating his loyalty to the last degree and he received the high reward appropriated. "Him hath God also highly exalted and given a name that is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, both of things in heaven and of things in earth."

We have before our minds the antitypical house of David, Messiah's kingly household, the royal priesthood divinely prepared. As a kingdom it will be at the top, above all the kingdoms of earth. Not only will this be true of the spiritual kingdom (invisible t man as the angels are indivisible), but it will include also an earthly kingdom, composed of "Israelites indeed." At their head as princes in all the earth will stand the resurrected Ancient Worthies, perfected as men and samples of all mankind, by obedience to the laws of the kingdom, may attain to, with eternal life. These Ancient Worthies are enumerated in the Scriptures—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, the prophets, etc., and described by St. Paul in Hebrews 11:38-40. To these belong the earthly promises of the Old Testament. They never heard of the heavenly or spiritual promises. Their loyalty will find its reward in the fact that they will come forth from the tomb no longer blemished and imperfect, but fully, completely restored to the perfection originally enjoyed by father Adam. Additionally these will have the special guidance and instruction of Messiah (Head and members) in all the affairs of mankind. Thus as the Master said, speaking of that time, "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and the prophets in the kingdom (Luke 13:28.)

God's kingdom will be represented in the earth by Isaac, especially by these saintly men of Israel, resurrected perfect, who will be the special appointees and representatives of the glorified Messiah's rule.

Humanity for 6,000 years has been learning "the exceeding sinfulness of sin," its downward tendency in every sense of the word.

As a consequence, the world is losing confidence in itself. All, whether politicians or judges or governors, great or small, or one party or another, of one nationality or another—all are accused of being tarred with the same stick of selfishness. The Bible clearly indicates that this distrust is not without reason, and that the great time of trouble to come upon every nation (Daniel 12:1) will be the direct result of this loss of confidence.

The Hair Band

A BAND for the hair every hour of the twenty-four is the latest fad to which milady is devoting herself heart and mind. Apparently we have just discovered the neatness and beauty of bands for the hair, which should have been brought home to our intelligence long ago.

For wear in the daytime, the plain band, of black velvet or other ribbon, harmonizes with hair of every color, and lends a sparkle to gray hair which is particularly beautiful. Manufacturers are making bands of many varieties to harmonize with most of the shades of hair, of which there are innumerable gradations. These bands are for daytime wear, all about two and a half inches wide. They are finished with a flat bow and fasten with hooks and eyes.

For evening, wide lustrous ribbon, tulle net and spangled fabrics are used. The rosette is fastened just above the tip of the ear. Velvet ribbons in vivid shades of green—in coral and cerise, as well as black, are used with ornaments of rhinestone.

Even at night, wide soft ribbons are worn when the hair is put in rollers or on pins, to conceal them and render the head sightly. The back hair, braided in two loose braids, is tied at the end with a yard length of wide, soft ribbon. The braids are brought about the head with one length of the ribbon. The other ribbon is tied in a small bow a little to one side of the center of the brow. The band in the hair, finished with bow or rosette, is universally becoming. From babyhood to old age the ribbon in the hair is a feminine privilege of which we should make the most. It is not a matter of fashion, but a permanent institution. The adjustment, the width of ribbons and styles in the bands may vary, but the band, like the hair, is always correct. It is a finish to the coiffure, useful and beautiful.

DECORATIONS FOR BRASS BED

Idea That Makes for Comfort and Adds to Appearance of Room.

Brass beds look charming and attractive and often brighten an otherwise dark bedroom, but many people complain that they are far colder than an ordinary wooden bed that has a high head and footboard to protect them from drafts. To overcome this objection a clever woman devised a scheme which not only corrected this defect, but also added a decorative note to the room.

The hangings and window seat were made of gray chintz, having garlands of pink roses scattered over the surface. She bought more of this material and made covers that slipped easily over the brass rods at the head and foot of the bed. These were finished at the bottom with dainty frills of the material. A frill was also fastened around the mattress, which showed beneath the bedspread.

The covers were found not only to add much to the physical comfort, but were also useful in protecting the brass from the usual dents and scratches that are apt to come with the daily wear and tear of a much used room.

They were made to be removed easily if required for special occasions.

NIGHTDRESS.

This dainty nightdress might be made in nainsook or fine Indian calico; the fullness at neck is drawn up and set to a narrow band of beading edged with lace; ribbon is threaded through and tied in front. An insertion band is taken round below bust and ended off in points each side. The puffed sleeves are drawn in with insertion bands and finished with lace-edged frills.

Materials required: 4½ yards 36 inches wide, 1 yard insertion, 1¼ yard beading, 1½ yard wide, 1½ yard narrow lace.

GOOD FEATURE IN LINGERIE

New Undergarments That Can Be Laundered Quickly and Easily Anywhere.

When you see some of the soft, clingy and entirely adorable crepe lingerie which is shown in the French shops now you will simply throw discretion to the winds, take out the bill you were fondly cherishing for something or other and have the temptress—who in this case is the little saleslady with the queer accent—wrap up your pet piece. Then you'll hurry home to "try it on," revel in the possession of it and linger over the luxury of its dainty laces and fascinating ribbon bows.

And really you won't be so indiscreet after all, especially if you are a girl without the privilege of a home, because the crepe lingerie doesn't require a laundress to be made fresh and clean. Usually it is combined with real torchon or Irish crochet, both of which can be pulled into shape without the aid of an iron.

Many a girl who travels has found it impossible to gratify her longing for dainty underwear because of the uncertainties of laundering. After having it returned a few times torn and spoiled, she has settled down to plain garments devoid of any of the irresistible little feminine touches. For her the silk crepe idea will be a positive joy, for she can retire to her hotel bathroom and, with the assistance of a cake of good, pure soap, may restore her lingerie to its pristine glory and loveliness.

The new garments come in every weight from the heaviest silk crepe to the flimsiest crepe de chine, built into nightgowns, chemise, corset covers, combinations and petticoats. They are shown in white and colors and many are elaborately embroidered in self-tone silk.

Another idea for the traveler or the girl away from home is the Italian silk undergarment. It is most familiar as an undervest, but so popular and practical has it proven that it has been extended to cover the entire lingerie wardrobe.—Washington Star.

How to Choose a Teapot.

The real secret in choosing a teapot, be it made of silver, crown derby or even the humble but useful brown "mug," is this: Never buy a teapot with the root of the spout low down in the body of the pot. Let the spout be set high in the body, then you can fill the pot well up, without the tea dribbling over, as it never fails to do when having a lowbuilt spout close to the teapot's foundation. Far too many fancy articles are made and sold more fit to stand among chimney piece ornaments than to brew and pour that welcome beverage which cheers, but does not inebriate.

Smocking on Girls' Dresses.

Smocking is being done generously on the frocks of little children, the pink and blue threads on white are lovely. One wonders why they have been so slow getting here. One smocked in yoke in points is scalloped in the neck and finished with baby Armenian lace.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

RAPID PACE IN TEMPERANCE

World Is Forgetting How to Get Drunk —Ancients Spent Immense Sums of Money on Wine.

(By JOHN WATSON WHYTE.)

The world is nearer real temperance today than at any time in its history.

Teetotalers may not believe this, but if they read the following they will realize that the world at least is forgetting how to get really good and drunk. The men of 60 or 70 years ago were great drinkers, but for pointers on how to get drunk and spend money it is necessary to turn to the ancients.

Caesar on a certain occasion while drunk with wine is said to have given Eutychus, his Charioteer, a tip amounting to $80,000, the largest money tip on record.

Philip of Macedon was a drunkard. He always left the banquet table staggering. Alexander the Great, his son, inherited his weakness for drink. It took him two days and two nights to sleep off a banquet. He died of drink at the age of 32.

Dionysius, the younger, tyrant of Sicily, went on sprees which lasted three months at a time. He lost his eyesight through overindulgence.

Nero was in the habit of sitting at noon and sticking there until midnight, eating and drinking all the time.

Tiberius was a sincere drunkard. After becoming emperor of Rome he was drunk so often that his army nicknamed him "Biberius," meaning "tippler." He had two boon companions, Flaccus and Piso, with whom he went of sprees. At the weeping stage they deplored the prevalence of drunkenness. Tiberius was very fond of mushrooms, and died from eating the wrong kind.

Nowhere in all the world today will you find as many confirmed drunkards as there were among the Thracians, the Iberians, the Celts or the Scythians. The man who didn't get drunk every day or two was considered queer.

"Eat, drink and amuse yourself. All else is vanity," said Sardanapalus, the last king of the Assyrians, and those words were written on his tomb.

The Greeks were moderate drinkers until they began to copy the luxury of the Persian feasts. The Romans imitated the Greeks. Then the whole world went on a saturnalia.

In the beginning no wrong was thought of drinking, and the moralists even advised drink to dispel melancholy. Hippocrates upheld drinking and earnestly advised people to drown their sorrows in wine.

The Romans carried over indulgence to an extreme never equaled in another age. Gluttony and intemperance reigned, and huge fortunes were spent in single repasts.

Of the many feasts given by Vitelius not one cost less than $1,500, and his reign was an almost continuous debauch. Commodus was a notorious drunkard, and Septimus Severus was not much better. Several died of over indulgence in the flowing bowl.

When Meliogabalus ascended the throne he had a historiographer whose special task was to record the orgies. Forty courses a day were served at his feasts, each one of which cost not less than $10,000. He gave fortunes to new inventors of drinks.

Apicius spent $3,000,000 on rare wines and dishes. He went over his books one day and found he had but $250,000 left. Rather than starve on such a pittance he killed himself. Apicius discovered how to keep oysters alive during long shipments. For this he was revered as a demigod.

Many of the famous drunkards drank $500 worth of wine at a single meal. At a little luncheon given to Cicero and Pompey by Lucullus, $5,000 worth of wine was consumed by the three.

These facts leave no doubt that we are comparatively sober nowadays.

Bishop of Lincoln on Total Abstinence.

Addressing a crowded gathering of men at the annual church parade of the Grimsby Friendly and Trade societies, Sunday, August 28 last, the new Bishop of Lincoln made an eloquent plea for temperance in all things. Preaching from St. Paul's words, "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things," the Bishop drew an analogy between the athlete's preparation for the contest and the necessity for preparation to resist life's temptations. "If you want to fight the powers of evil," he said, "to master lustful appetites and conquer fleshly instincts, you must put yourself into training. I have been a teetotaler for 30 years. I don't prescribe it; I don't dogmatize upon it; but I do recommend it. You will gain health, power of brain and body, and will remove yourself from an atmosphere of temptation."

Saloons Need Recruits.

Unless the saloons can recruit 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 boys from each generation as raw material, most of them must soon close. One family in every four or five must contribute a boy to the demon of rum—more terrible than any man or woman-eating monster of mythology. Has your family already contributed a boy to this fiery Moloch or is it going to do so? If not, must not some neighboring family have to contribute more than its share?—Vick's Magazine.

LEADING QUESTION.

Grace — What lovely sleighing weather, Jack!

Jack—Yes, it is. Would you like to try it?

Grace—Dear me, I should be delighted!

Jack—D-do you think your father would lend me his horse?

EYES WOULD BURN AND STING

"It is just a year ago that my sister came over here to us. She had been here only a few weeks when her eyes began to be red, and to burn and sting as if she had sand in them. Then we used all of the home remedies. She washed her eyes with salt water, used hot tea to bathe them with, and bandaged them over night with tea leaves, but all to no purpose. She went to the drug store and got some salve, but she grew constantly worse. She was scarcely able to look in the light. At last she decided to go to a doctor, because she could hardly work any more. The doctor said it was a very severe disease, and if she did not follow his orders closely she might lose her eyesight. He made her eyes burn and applied electricity to them, and gave her various ointments. In the two and a half or three months that she went to the doctor, we could see very little improvement.

"Then we had read so much how people had been helped by Cuticura that we thought we would try it, and we cannot be thankful enough that we used it. My sister used the Cuticura Pills for purifying the blood, bathed only with Cuticura Soap, and at night after washing, she anointed her eyes very gently on the outside with the Cuticura Ointment. In one week, the swelling was entirely gone from the eyes, and after a month there was no longer any mucus or watering of the eyes. She could already see better, and in six weeks she was cured." Cause and Effect.

"Where is Bill today?"

"Bill is sick in bed."

"What's the matter with him?"

"Well, you know that girl of his thinks he doesn't use tobacco. Yesterday he was hurrying around the corner and he ran right into the girl. He had a chew in his mouth."

"Yes, yes; go on."

"There were two things to do—hurry by or swallow."

"Well?"

"Bill talked to her for five minutes."

"I Was Afraid I Had Killed Somebody," She Said.

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the Bronson case to get the deposition of John Gilmore, millionaire. A lady requests Blakeley to buy her a Pullman ticket. He gives her lower 11 and retains lower 10. He finds a drunken man in lower 10 and retires in lower 9. He awakens in lower 7 and finds his clothes and bag missing. The man in lower 10 is found murdered. Circumstantial evidence points to both Blakeley and the man who stole his clothes. The train is wrecked and Blakeley is rescued from a burning car by a girl in blue. His arm is broken. The girl proves to be Alison West, his partner's sweetheart. Blakeley returns home and finds he is under surveillance. Moving pictures of the train taken just before the wreck reveal to Blakeley a man leaping from the train with his stolen grip. Investigation proves that the man's name is Sullivan. Mrs. Conway, the woman for whom Blakeley bought a Pullman ticket, tries to make a bargain with him for the forged notes, not knowing that they are missing. Blakeley and an amateur detective investigate the home of Sullivan's sister.

CHAPTER XXIV.—Continued.

Hotchkiss felt certain that it had been Sullivan, but I was not so sure. Why would he have crawled like a thief into his own house? If he had crossed the park, as seemed probable, when we did, he had not made any attempt to use the knocker. I gave it up finally, and made an effort to conciliate the young woman in the tower.

We had heard no sound since our spectacular entrance into her room. I was distinctly uncomfortable, as alone this time, I climbed to the tower staircase. Reasoning from before, she would probably throw a chair at me. I stopped at the foot of the staircase and called.

"Hello up there," I said, in as debonnair a manner as I could summon. "Good morning. Wie geht es bei ihnen?"

No reply.

"Bon jour, mademoiselle," I tried again. This time there was a movement of some sort from above, but nothing fell on me.

"I—we want to apologize for rousing you so—er—unexpectedly this morning," I went on. "The fact is, we wanted to talk to you, and you—you were hard to waken. We are travelers, lost in your mountains, and we crave a breakfast and an audience."

She came to the door then. I could feel that she was investigating the top of my head from above. "Is Mr. Sullivan with you?" she asked. It was the first word from her, and she was not sure of her voice.

"No. We are alone. If you will come down and look at us you will find us two perfectly harmless people, whose horse—curses on him—departed without leave last night and left us at your gate."

She relaxed somewhat then and came down a step or two. "I was afraid I had killed somebody," she said. "The housekeeper left yesterday, and the other maids went with her."

When she saw that I was comparatively young and lacked the earmarks of the highwayman, she was greatly relieved. She was inclined to fight shy of Hotchkiss, however, for some reason. She gave us a breakfast of a sort, for there was little in the house, and afterward we telephoned to the town for a vehicle. While Hotchkiss examined scratches and replaced the Bokhara rug, I engaged Jennie in conversation.

"Can you tell me," I asked, "who is managing the estate since Mrs. Curtis was killed?"

"No one," she returned shortly.

"Has—any member of the family been here since the accident?"

"No, sir. There was only the two, and some think Mr. Sullivan was killed as well as his sister."

"You don't?"

"No," with conviction.

"Why?"

She wheeled on me with quick suspicion.

"Are you a detective?" she demanded.

"No."

"You told him to say you represented the law."

"I am a lawyer. Some of them misrepresent the law, but I—"

She broke in impatiently.

"A sheriff's officer?"

"No. Look here, Jennie; I am all that I should be. You'll have to believe that. And I'm in a bad position through no fault of my own. I want you to answer some questions. If you will help me, I will do what I can for you. Do you live near here?"

Her chin quivered. It was the first sign of weakness she had shown.

"My home is in Pittsburg," she said, "and I haven't enough money to get there. They hadn't paid my wages for two months. They don't pay anybody."

"Very well," I returned. "I'll send you back to Pittsburg, Pullman included, if you will tell me some things I want to know."

She agreed eagerly. Outside the window Hotchkiss was bending over, examining footprints in the drive.

"Now," I began, "there has been a Miss West staying here?"

"Yes."

"Mr. Sullivan was attentive to her?"

"Yes. She was the granddaughter of a wealthy man in Pittsburg. My aunt has been in his family for 20 years. Mrs. Curtis wanted her brother to marry Miss West."

"Do you think he did marry her?" I could not keep the excitement out of my voice.

"No. There were reasons"—she stopped abruptly.

"Do you know anything of the family? Are they—were they New Yorkers?"

"They came from somewhere in the south. I have heard Mrs. Curtis say her mother was a Cuban. I don't know much about them, but Mr. Sullivan had a wicked temper, though he didn't look it. Folks say big, light-haired people are easy going, but I don't believe it, sir."

"How long was Miss West here?"

"Two weeks."

I hesitated about further questioning. Critical as my position was, I could not pry deeper into Alison West's affairs. If she had got into the hands of adventurers, as Sullivan and his sister appeared to have been, she was safely away from them again. But something of the situation in the car Ontario was forming itself in my mind: the incident at the farmhouse lacked only motive to be complete. Was Sullivan, after all, a rascal or a criminal? Was the murderer Sullivan or Mrs. Conway? The lady or the tiger again.

Jennie was speaking.

"I hope Miss West was not hurt?" she asked. "We liked her, all of us. She was not like Mrs. Curtis."

I wanted to say that she was not like anybody in the world. Instead—"She escaped with some bruises," I said.

She glanced at my arm. "You were on the train?"

"Yes."

She waited for more questions, but none coming, she went to the door. Then she closed it softly and came back.

"Mrs. Curtis is dead? You are sure of it?" she asked.

"She was killed instantly, I believe. The body was not recovered. But I have reasons for believing that Mr. Sullivan is living."

"I knew it," she said. "—I— think he was here the night before last. That is why I went to the tower room. I believe he would kill me if he could." As nearly as her round and comely face could express it, Jennie's expression was tragic at that moment. I made a quick resolution, and acted on it at once.

"You are not entirely frank with me, Jennie," I protested. "And I am going to tell you more than I have. We are talking at cross purposes.

"I was on the wrecked train, in the same car with Mrs. Curtis, Miss West and Mr. Sullivan. During the night there was a crime committed in that car and Mr. Sullivan disappeared. But he left behind a chain of circumstantial evidence that involved me completely, so that I may, at any time, be arrested."

Apparently she did not comprehend for a moment. Then, as if the meaning of my words had just dawned on her, she looked up and gasped:

"You mean—Mr. Sullivan committed the crime himself?"

"I think he did."

"What was it?"

"It was murder," I said deliberately.

Her hands clenched involuntarily, and she shrank back. "A woman?" She could scarcely form her words.

"No, a man; a Mr. Simon Harrington of Pittsburg."

Her effort to retain her self-control was pitiful. Then she broke down and cried, her head on the back of a tall chair.

"It was my fault," she said wretchedly, "my fault. I should not have sent them the word."

After a few minutes she grew quiet. She seemed to hesitate over something, and finally determined to say it.

"You will understand better, sir, when I say that I was raised in the Harrington family. Mr. Harrington was Mr. Sullivan's wife's father!"

CHAPTER XXV.

At the Station.

So it had been the tiger, not the lady! Well, I had held to that theory all through. Jennie suddenly became a valuable person; if necessary she could prove the connection between Sullivan and the murdered man, and show a motive for the crime. I was triumphant when Hotchkiss came in. When the girl had produced a photograph of Mrs. Sullivan, and I had recognized the bronze-haired girl of the train, we were both well satisfied—which goes to prove the ephemeral nature of most human contentments.

Jennie either had nothing more to say, or feared she had said too much. She was evidently uneasy before Hotchkiss. I told her that Mrs. Sullivan was recovering in a Baltimore hospital, but she already knew it, from some source, and merely nodded. She made a few preparations for leaving, while Hotchkiss and I compared notes, and then, with the cat in her arms, she climbed into the trap from the town. I sat with her, and on the way down she told me a little, not much.

"If you see Mrs. Sullivan," she advised, "and she is conscious, she probably thinks that both her husband and her father were killed in the wreck. She will be in a bad way, sir."

"You mean that she—still cares about her husband?"

The cat crawled over on my knee, and rubbed its head against my hand invitingly. Jennie stared at the undulating line of the mountain crests, a colossal surf against a blue ocean of sky. "Yes, she cares," she said softly. "Women are made like that. They say they are cats, but Peter there in your lap wouldn't come back and lick your hand if you kicked him. If—if you have to tell her the truth, be as gentle as you can sir. She has been good to me—that's why I have played the spy here all summer. It's a thankless thing, spying on people."

"It is that," I agreed soberly.

Hotchkiss and I arrived in Washington late that evening, and, rather than arouse the household, I went to the club. I was at the office early the next morning and admitted myself. McKnight rarely appeared before half after ten, and our modest office force some time after nine. I looked over my previous day's mail and waited, with such patience as I possessed, for McKnight. In the interval I called up Mrs. Klopton and announced that I would dine at home that night. What my household subsists on during my numerous absences I have never discovered. Tea, probably, and crackers. Dilligent search when I have made a midnight arrival, never reveals anything more substantial. Possibly I imagine it, but the announcement that I am about to make a journey always seems to create a general atmosphere of depression throughout the house, as though Euphemia and Eliza, and Thomas, the stableman, were already subsisting, in imagination, on Mrs. Klopton's meager fare.

So I called her up and announced my arrival. There was something unusual in her tone, as though her throat was tense with indignation. Always shrill, her elderly voice rasped my ear painfully through the receiver.

"I have changed the butcher, Mr. Lawrence," she announced portentously. "The last roast was a pound short, and his mutton-chops—any self-respecting sheep would refuse to acknowledge them."

As I said before, I can always tell from the voice in which Mrs. Klopton conveys the most indifferent matters, if something of real significance has occurred. Also, through long habit, I have learned how quickest to bring her to the point.

"You are pessimistic this morning," I returned. "What's the matter, Mrs. Klopton? You haven't used that tone since Euphemia baked a pie for the iceman. What is it now? Somebody poison the dog?"

She cleared her throat.

"The house has been broken into, Mr. Lawrence," she said. "I have lived in the best families, and never have I stood by and seen what I saw yesterday—every bureau drawer opened, and my—my most sacred belongings—" she choked.

"Did you notify the police?" I asked sharply.

"Police!" she sniffed. "Police! It was the police that did it—two detectives with a search warrant. I—I wouldn't dare tell you over the telephone what one of them said when he found the whisky and rock candy for my cough."

"Did they take anything?" I demanded, every nerve on edge.

"They took the cough medicine," she returned indignantly, "and they said—"

"Confound the cough medicine!" I was frantic. "Did they take anything else? Were they in my dressing-room?"

"Yes. I threatened to sue them, and I told them what you would do when you came back. But they wouldn't listen. They took away that black sealskin bag you brought home from Pittsburg with you!"

I knew then that my hours of freedom were numbered. To have found Sullivan and then, in support of my case against him, to have produced the bag, minus the bit of chain, had been my intention. But the police the bag, and, beyond knowing something of Sullivan's history, I was practically no nearer his discovery than before. Hotchkiss hoped he had his man in the house off Washington Circle, but on the very night he had seen him Jennie claimed that Sullivan had tried to enter the Laurels. Then—suppose we found Sullivan and proved the satchel and its contents his? Since the police had the bit of chain it might mean involving Alison in the story. I sat down and buried my face in my hands. There was no escape. I figured it out despondingly.

"The House Has Been Broken Into, Mr. Lawrence."

Against me was the evidence of the survivors of the Ontario that I had been accused of the murder at the time. There had been blood-stains on my pillow and a hidden dagger. Into the bargain, in my possession had been found a traveling-bag containing the dead man's pocketbook.

In my favor was McKnight's theory against Mrs. Conway. She had a motive for wishing to secure the notes, she believed I was in lower ten, and she had collapsed at the discovery of the crime in the morning.

The Boy Critic.

Richard Croker, at an open-air luncheon at Palm Beach, told a George Washington story.

"A teacher," he began, "was conducting a lesson in history.

"'Tommy Jones,' she said, 'what was there about George Washington which distinguished him from all other Americans?'

"'He didn't lie,' was the prompt answer."

CURE THAT SORE THROAT

Sore throat is inflammation of the mucous membrane of the throat, and if this membrane happens to be at all sensitive a predisposition to sore throat will exist.

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic is both a preventative and a cure for sore throat because it possesses extraordinary cleansing, healing and germicidal qualities. Just a little in a glass of water, used as a gargle, will quickly relieve all soreness and strengthen the mucous membrane of the throat, and thus overcome all tendency to sore throat.

Paxtine is far superior to liquid antiseptics or Peroxide for all toilet and hygienic uses.

Paxtine may be obtained at any drug store, 25 and 50c a box, or sent postpaid upon receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass. Send for a free sample.

Doubting His Word.

Two Irishmen occupied beds in the same room. By and by one of them woke up.

"Mike," said he, "did you put out the cat?"

"I did," said Mike.

An hour later Patrick woke up again.

"Mike," said he, "Mike, did you put out the cat?"

"Sure I did," said Mike, sleepily. "On me word of honor."

Some time later Patrick again waked up.

"Mike," said he, "Mike, ye divvle; ye did not put out the cat."

"Well," said Mike angrily, "if ye will not take the word of honor of a gintleman get up and put her out yerself."

Encourage the Boys.

When a boy presents an idea that is feasible, pat him on the back and encourage him, and he will develop a love for agriculture and become the pride of your heart in your declining years and will love the homes and the farms that you have worked so hard to pay for.

If farming has not paid in your case by all means give the boy a chance to begin without your handicap. "What was good enough for me is good enough for the boy," is a maxim unworthy of a New England farmer. Give the boy a chance at an agricultural education and he will help you to stop the leaks and turn the past and present into a brighter future.

A FOOD STORY

Makes a Woman of 70 "One in 10,000."

The widow of one of Ohio's most distinguished newspaper editors and a famous leader in politics in his day, says she is 70 years old and a "stronger woman than you will find in ten thousand," and she credits her fine physical condition to the use of Grape-Nuts:

"Many years ago I had a terrible fall which permanently injured my stomach. For years I lived on a preparation of corn starch and milk, but it grew so repugnant to me that I had to give it up. Then I tried, one after another, a dozen different kinds of cereals, but the process of digestion gave me great pain.

"It was not until I began to use Grape-Nuts food three years ago that I found relief. It has proved, with the dear Lord's blessing, a great boon to me. It brought me health and vigor such as I never expected to again enjoy, and in gratitude I never fail to sound its praises." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THURSDAY, APRIL 6, 1911.

THE WOMAN'S CIVIC CLUB.

The Woman's Civic Club is going to work in a practical way to make this a cleaner and better town. Every woman who is interested is invited to attend the meeting next Tuesday afternoon at the court house and to join the club which will work on a broad basis.

The civic club presents to women an opportunity for practical effort that will count in the improvement of the city in which we live. The women at the head of the organization realize that this is an excellent time to begin work of municipal cleanliness and improvement and realizing this they have grasped the opportunity and will work with that end in view.

THE COUNTRY PREACHERS.

Dean Skinner of Purdee University, is quoted as hurling a broadside at country preachers in saying that "they are the most conspicuous back numbers in the country" and that "while farmers and the rest of the world have improved, preaching has remained of the same quality."

The Dean doesn't make out a case of inefficiency or insufficiency against the rural parsons in his statements. The "quality" of the preaching of many of the early country pastors was good enough for any age. No doubt many distinguished city pastors pray and long for the "quality," and through it the power of these early preachers. If the present rural pastors have the "quality" of their early predecessors, the Almighty has endowed them richly and they and those to whom they minister are greatly blessed. There was more room for improvement on the part of farmers and those engaged in other callings, not excluding college professors, than in the "quality" of country preachers. If the latter are holding their own with the early preachers, doing nobly.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

A Visit to a Sugar Camp.

To the Editor of The Republican.

We accepted the kind invitation of one of our good Garrett county farmers to visit them when they were "stirring off."

After a hearty supper, prepared by the good hostess, we set out for the camp, each carrying a lantern. After walking perhaps a half mile through the grove we came within sight of the camp. The steam was pouring out the doors and windows and every crack and knot hole. A constant shower of sparks poured out the huge chimney, interspersed by an occasional burst of flame as the fireman stirred the embers. Inside everything savored of sweetness.

The sugar water, which has been gathered from tree to tree, had been run into a huge wooden tank from which it runs into the boiling tank. The flow is regulated by an automatic device which shuts off the flow when the water in the tank rises. A roaring hot fire is kept burning beneath this tank and the water is boiled away at the rate of twelve barrels per hour.

It is boiled to syrup and is then drawn off in to large tanks to cool and settle. After it is cold it is either drawn off into syrup cans or placed in a smaller kettle where it is boiled until it makes wax and finally is poured into a wooden trough. It is stirred until cool when it is crumb sugar.

During the time it was passing from wax to sugar we were invited to "help ourselves," which we proceeded to do without delay. The boiling syrup was poured into a cup of cold water where it collected in a soft, delicious mass. It is generally pulled out with the fingers and swallow without chewing. We know from experience that even tho we eat enough to make us sick we will never tire of it. The boiling is kept up until twelve o'clock or sometimes all night, but growing tired about eleven o'clock we retired to the farmhouse to dream of eating wax. R. SEE.

Forest Fires in Maryland in 1910.

Reports from Forest Wardens for fourteen counties of the State including Allegany, Harford, Howard, Moutgomery, Prince George's St. Mary's, Washington and Worcester have been compiled by the State Forester. In the counties named there were sixty-five fires, which burned over 17,536 acres of woodland causing an estimated damage of $96,294. About half of these fires were extinguished by the Forest Wardens and their assistants, at a cost of $181.50. The others were either extinguished by the landowners, or allowed to burn out. Thirteen of the sixty-five fires were started from unknown cause, of the fifty two that started from known causes, twenty-three were caused by burning sedge fields, brush, etc.; twenty were started by railroads; four by hunters; two by mischievous boys; one by a traction engine; one by a saw-mill and one was reported as incendiary. It is strikingly shown that the two common causes of forest fires in the State are brush burning, which resulted in 44 per cent. of the fires, and railroads, including logging locomotives, 38 per cent.

In the other counties of the State not reporting, there are fewer forest fires, but as there are no forest wardens there is lack of definite information. It is probable that the total record for the State would be not less than 20,000 acres burned over, with an approximate damage of $100,000.

By far the most destructive forest fire was in St. Mary's county in April 1910, when nearly 9,000 acres were burned over causing a loss, including building, of over $50,000. In the other counties of the State, with the exception of Garrett, Howard, Montgomery, Prince George's and Worcester, the fire damage for 1910 was less than that for 1009.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. ELIZABETH LEIGHTON.

Mrs. Elizabeth Leighton, relict of the late Isaac Leighton, of Loch Lynn Heights, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Falkenstein at Terra Alta, West Va., last Friday after a week's illness due to the infirmities of advanced years, and was buried in Oakland Tuesday afternoon, her remains being deposited in the Oakland cemetery by the side of her husband, whose demise occurred on January 4th of the present year. Mrs. Leighton's maiden name was Elizabeth Vernon and she was married in the year 1850 in Birmingham, England, coming to this country shortly afterward. Twelve children were born as a result of this union. Eight of them survive their parents, among whom are Mr. H. V. Leighton, of Loch Lynn Heights, and Mrs. J. M. Falkenstein, of near Oakland.

Exchanged Properties.

Mr. N. U. Bond, who recently completed one of the handsomest residences in this section, the building being located on Second street just north of the corporate line of Oakland and surrounded by a large scope of ground, exchanged properties last Friday with Mr. D. M. Dixon, whose home is located on Oak street opposite the parsonage connected with St. Paul's M. E. church. Mr. Bond, in addition to the Dixon dwelling, received a considerable sum in cash from Mr. Dixon. The latter will move into his newly acquired home about the first of next month.

Divorce Granted.

In the Circuit Court for Garrett county a decree was filed last week by Judge Henderson granting Ed. A. Browning a divorce from his wife. Mrs. Bruce Browning. The decree awards the custody of the child born as a result of the union to the mother with the privilege to the father to visit it at times.

SHORT RUN.

The sugar makers have been having a good rest for the past week on account of bad storms and have been enjoying a few sports of the season, fox hunting being the enjoyment.

On last Friday a fox was located in a ledge of rocks near here and "Billy" Harvey, a noted fox hunter of Kurtz Chapel, was notified by telephone and arrived some few hours later with his fox hounds. So every one was expecting "fox meat" for supper. Several ladies were in the crowd to see the excitement. The hounds soon drove the fox from its hiding place and then Mr. Foxie had the chase of its life. Several shots were fired but the fox escaped. Some claimed that Alex might have killed it, had he not gotten his hand fast in Lois' pocket, bnt before he got his hand freed from the fragments of torn jacket, the fox had escaped. The chase was continued next day and the fox was captured.

Our school closed last Friday after a very successful winter. The school was taught by Miss Anna Bell, of Oakland. A very good program was prepared by the school for the entertainment of the many visitors that were present. A very nice dinner was spread and every one heartily enjoyed both the program and the dinner. Dinner was followed by a few games and much "chin music."

Scott Moon, of Kurtz Chapel, is visiting many friends here now.

Mrs. Daniel Wilson spent several days last week visiting friends in Kitzmiller.

Best wishes to THE REPUBLICAN.

NEW GERMANY.

A late spring presages a good fruit crop for the coming year. Winter wheat and rye, however, is somewhat backward.

The teachers of the various schools of the community have returned to their homes after a successful term of thirty weeks.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Snow, snow, beautiful snow; of it we are tired, we wish it would go.

The roads are so bad in this part of the county that traffic is hindered much.

The stork came to the home of Ernest Ringer last week.

Miss Mary Neil is visiting friends in Accident.

George Frazee and family are being visited by his brother-in-law Burt DeHaven.

On Monday two fine horses were shipped here for Senator Speicher.

Mrs. Ralph Tannahill, of Confluence, Pa., is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Neil, for a few days.

Adam Hetrick was visiting in town, and was to have been one of the witnesses in the law suit, but it did not materialize.

Seventy or eighty persons gathered at the council room Monday to hear the trial of Martin Rush and Charles Sweitzer, each bringing suit against the other for assault with attempt to kill. After they all assembled at the room with their witnesses, Sweitzer determined to take it to court, filling bond for same. Of course Rush then did likewise and the audience was disappointed.

Leslie E. Friend returned home from a trip to Virginia by way of Oakland and Hoyes last week.

And still we are patiently waiting for those surveyors. Of course the weather being so bad they could not do anything if they were here. Patience must be practiced a little longer, for our reward will be great when we shall travel that new road.

Why not call a meeting and try to get our farmers interested in the cannery movement. Cooperation is the most essential thing. It stands to reason that with the enlightened class of farmers that we have in this vicinity they will grasp the situation immediately and things would go right along. Of course they understand that it would not justify people putting a lot of money into an enterprise if they could not derive any benefit from it, neither would it justify the farmer to plant acres into things only to find there was no market. We heard someone mention in a store full of people the other evening that people around here had been used to 70 or 80 cents a bushel for tomatoes, whereas they would not get near that amount at a cannery. Now we would say planting in a garden, or cultivating a truck patch is two widely different things and when working in a wholesale way of course they would be cheaper. The farmer is the man himself to take hold of this enterprise and reap the benefits from both ends.

A festival will be held in a week or so by the ladies of our town, the proceeds to go to the fixing up of the cemetery. This a very worthy thing to do, and all should helpthe good work along in every possible manner. We ought all to take an interest in our cemetery and beautify it in every way possible.

Salathiel Savage, our undertaker, had a hard trip to the mountains last Saturday where he had charge of the funeral of Jesse Glotfelty who died of pneumonia at his home.

Irene Watstone, the grandaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Friend, is very ill with typhoid fever. We trust she may soon recover. We have not had a case of this malady in our town for some time.

Mrs. David Lewis has been seriously ill but is better.

Mrs. Thomas Welsh has been suffering with rheumatism for some time.

W. F. East and son are taking lots of orders for wall paper and wall decorations in the latest designs.

GRANTSVILLE.

March came in like a lion and went out like two. April has made, if possible, a worse start. We hope for a more pleasant finish. On Sunday night snow fell to the depth of five inches.

"It commenced to fall in the gloaming,
And busily all the night
It was heaping hedge and highway
With an ermine deep and white."

On Friday of last week when the storm was at its height a five passenger Westcott automobile passed through Grantsville enroute to Boston from Indianapolis. The car was in charge of Messrs. Martin and Robinson, of Boston, who have the agency for the Westcott in New Nngland. West of Keyser's Ridge the roads had been rendered impassable by snow drifts and it was only after considerable labor with shovels that the car finally plowed its way through.

Rev. G. D. Miller, of Springs, Pa., has purchased a Ford touring car. He made the purchase through the Stahl agency at Somerset, Pa. On Wednesday Mr. Miller, accompanied by F. W. Bender and D. D. Otto, both veteran motorists, went to Somerset by rail and brought the machine overland to Springs They encountered snow drifts and mud galore on the homeward trip.

Mr. Lawrence Bittinger the rural mail carrier, has decided to try gas power in lieu of horse power on his daily trip of 25 miles. He is having shipped to him a 5 horse power motor cycle. This will enable him to make the journey in much less time and no doubt with much less expense. As a consequence of the motor cycle purchase Lawrence has disposed of one of his horses to Rev. W. W. Morris, who also takes buggy and harness.

Herman Robinson, who has been employed in Bender's store for several months, has resigned and moved to Avilton on the farm which he recently purchased from his father. Mr. Robinson bought a valuable mare which he uses on his farm, from A. J. Schrock

MID-WINTER—FROM APPEARANCES

Heavy Snow Fell Saturday and was Succeeded Tuesday By Rain.

Saturday and Sunday snow to the depth of three or four inches fell in Garrett county, covering everything in a mantle of white. The storm coming out of the east continued until Tuesday morning, when it was succeeded by a heavy rain which freezing as it fell, covered the walks with a heavy sleet, rendering it unsafe for pedestrians.

Sunday morning the thermometer registered but twelve degrees above zero. With the state of weather which has been the portion of Garrett county folks since winter set in during the first week of December, a heavy yield of fruit is almost assured.

Dr. W. W. Davis, who recently resigned from the position of superintendent of Mountain Lake Park, has been appointed general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of Maryland. Dr. Davis will open his offices in Baltimore in a few days. The position is one that requires considerable executive abilty and energy on the part of the person holding the office. Dr. Davis in these respects is well qualified to successfully carry on the work of the alliance.

Sheriff Andrew Shartzer went to Swanton yesterday afternoon where he placed Charles C. Shaw, of Oakland, under arrest at the reqest of the officials of Preston county, by whom a requisition from Governor Crothers had been secured. Shaw stands charged with assaulting an old gentleman at Terra Alta several months ago, and upon arriving here from Swanton with his prisoner, the Sheriff turned him over to the Preston county authorities who took him to Kingwood.

FOR RENT—Three nice rooms, furnished or unfurnished. If interested, address Lock Box 171, Oakland, Md.

Messrs. Dixon & Kelso, who have had a large force of men employed for some weeks installing the necessary machinery in the Mountain Top mill for the manufacture of flour, will begin operations on Monday morning next when the first grist will be put through the various machines. The mill has a capacity of sixty-five barrels per day and its erection at this point just at this particular time fills a long-felt need. Garrett county, from nearly every standpoint, is naturally a wheat producing country, the average yield per acre being somewhat in excess of the northwest.

Mr. Richard Browning, son of ex-State Senator and Mrs. Richard T. Browning, arrived home last Sunday evening from the Pacific coast where he had been for two or three years trapping, hunting and engaged in various avocations during the summer months when hunting was prohibited under the laws of the State in which he was located. Mr. Browning brought home with him a large quantity of bear and deer skins, many curios which he had gathered during his residence in the west and a fund of personal experiences which befel him during the chase after the big game of the Rockies.

MID-WINTER—FROM APPEARANCES

Heavy Snow Fell Saturday and was Succeeded Tuesday By Rain.

Saturday and Sunday snow to the depth of three or four inches fell in Garrett county, covering everything in a mantle of white. The storm coming out of the east continued until Tuesday morning, when it was succeeded by a heavy rain which freezing as it fell, covered the walks with a heavy sleet, rendering it unsafe for pedestrians.

Sunday morning the thermometer registered but twelve degrees above zero. With the state of weather which has been the portion of Garrett county folks since winter set in during the first week of December, a heavy yield of fruit is almost assured.

Dr. W. W. Davis, who recently resigned from the position of superintendent of Mountain Lake Park, has been appointed general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of Maryland. Dr. Davis will open his offices in Baltimore in a few days. The position is one that requires considerable executive abilty and energy on the part of the person holding the office. Dr. Davis in these respects is well qualified to successfully carry on the work of the alliance.

Sheriff Andrew Shartzer went to Swanton yesterday afternoon where he placed Charles C. Shaw, of Oakland, under arrest at the reqest of the officials of Preston county, by whom a requisition from Governor Crothers had been secured. Shaw stands charged with assaulting an old gentleman at Terra Alta several months ago, and upon arriving here from Swanton with his prisoner, the Sheriff turned him over to the Preston county authorities who took him to Kingwood.

FOR RENT—Three nice rooms, furnished or unfurnished. If interested, address Lock Box 171, Oakland, Md.

Messrs. Dixon & Kelso, who have had a large force of men employed for some weeks installing the necessary machinery in the Mountain Top mill for the manufacture of flour, will begin operations on Monday morning next when the first grist will be put through the various machines. The mill has a capacity of sixty-five barrels per day and its erection at this point just at this particular time fills a long-felt need. Garrett county, from nearly every standpoint, is naturally a wheat producing country, the average yield per acre being somewhat in excess of the northwest.

Mr. Richard Browning, son of ex-State Senator and Mrs. Richard T. Browning, arrived home last Sunday evening from the Pacific coast where he had been for two or three years trapping, hunting and engaged in various avocations during the summer months when hunting was prohibited under the laws of the State in which he was located. Mr. Browning brought home with him a large quantity of bear and deer skins, many curios which he had gathered during his residence in the west and a fund of personal experiences which befel him during the chase after the big game of the Rockies.

BIG GAME of the ARCTIC ICE

by E.P. LARNED

COPYRIGHT by FIELD & STREAM

CAMP FIRE IN THE ARCTICS

ICE PAN WITH TWELVE WALRUS

NATIVES AND TYPICAL BOAT

NATIVE KAYAKS

IT WAS due to the initiative of and to the preparations made by Mr. G. F. Norton of New York and to his kindness in including me in the party, that I owe this opportunity to set forth here a brief account of the hunting trip taken by Fred Norton, Harry Whitney and myself during the summer of 1908 on the sailing steamer Erik, which sailed as tender to the Roosevelt as far as Etah, North Greenland, on the memorable expedition of that year, which resulted in the discovery of the pole by Commander Robert E. Peary. Whitney was a member of the party until we left Etah to return home.

The ship being our headquarters for the whole of the trip, we were able to take along as large an outfit as we wished. In addition to the usual paraphernalia we took with us an 18-foot whaleboat propelled by a three-horsepower gasoline engine.

Sydney, Cape Breton island, was the rendezvous for the two ships of this expedition, the Roosevelt and the Erik, to which place Norton and I proceeded by train from New York. The Erik had come from St. John's several days before and was taking on coal and provisions. The Roosevelt arrived on the fourteenth, with Whitney and other members of the expedition, with the exception of Commander Peary, who came by train on the same day. At Sydney we met Mr. Craft, from Carnegie Institute, Washington, who was to become a welcome member of our party aboard the Erik.

Of the ship's company was Capt. Sam Bartlett, uncle of Captain Bob, of the Roosevelt; first mate, Tom Bartlett, at one time skipper for Dr. Grenfell; second mate, Harold Bartlett, son of the "old man," as the crew called Captain Sam; chief engineer, Richard Pike; second engineer, Jim; another Jim, the steward; Joe White, the cabin boy, and the cook, boatswain, two stokers and a crew of five sailors—all Newfoundlanders with the exception of the cabin boy, who was, I believe, an elevator boy in a New York hotel before we took him along as chief administrator to our comfort. This was the gathering aboard the Erik when she sailed out of Sydney on Friday, July 17, at 12:30 a. m., leaving the Roosevelt to follow later and making the start of a polar expedition which was to become in a little over a year's time, the most famous in history.

We passed through the Straits of Belle Isle during the night of the eighteenth, having experienced both clear and foggy weather and a drop in the temperature to 40 degrees Fahrenheit, making Hawk Harbor, a whaling station and factory on the Labrador coast, Sunday evening at eight.

The whale meat for which we come to Hawk Harbor having been stowed on deck forward we left in company with the Roosevelt on Tuesday afternoon and the following day entered the harbor at Turnivik, our last stop on the Labrador coast, in the midst of a thunderstorm. Turnivik is a fishing station, and here Capt. Bob Bartlett said good-by to his father, Capt. William Bartlett, who is owner of the station.

The run through Davis strait, across Baffin and Melville bays, around Cape York and into North Star bay, where we waited for the Roosevelt, consumed nine days, during which time we overhauled our outfit, worked on a raft for the whaleboat and fished for gulls that wouldn't bite. We crossed the arctic circle on the twenty-eighth of July. At midnight on the thirtieth of July I took a snapshot photograph of the ship from the end of the bowsprit.

The Roosevelt came in on the third of August, having stopped at Cape York to pick up dogs and natives, and at the suggestion of Peary we lost no time in preparing for a walrus hunt. Commander Peary helped us in every way possible—as indeed he had done from the start and continued to do until the ships separated—procuring Eskimo guides for us and telling us where to go and what to do when we got there. We left the ship at three in the morning with three Eskimo guides, steering our power whaleboat west through Wolstenholm sound to where Saunders island lifts its steep, bare sides, washed on the west by the open water of Baffin bay. In the sound and about Saunders island congregate the old bull walrus, while further north in the Whale sound regions are found only the cows and young bulls.

Off the eastern end of the island one of the Eskimo pointed to a black spot on a floating cake of ice, and as we pushed nearer the black turned to a dirty brownish yellow, soon easily recognized as two big walrus bulls lying asleep on the ice pan. The engine was stopped and the boat drifted up quietly. Two Eskimo stood in the bow with harpoons ready, I stood next, and the others somewhere behind me. When within about 30 feet both walrus raised their heads, showing long white tusks and thick necks criss-crossed with scars. As Whitney and I fired they started sliding off the pans into the water. The Eskimo in the bow, first to throw his harpoon, missed the nearest animal as he sank, but the second man threw true, and the line slipped out over the bow, tightening with a jerk as he snubbed it on a cleat. So we had one walrus, at any rate, hard and fast on the business end of the line. When he came up to breathe—for he was far from dead—I fired at him again and missed, and he ducked under. The same thing happened several times, and though I did finally finish him with a bullet through his brain, I had no idea until then what a lot of practice it takes to shoot accurately out of a boat when rocked even by small waves, as was ours.

The sixth of August was calm and warm, the sun shone brightly and the innumerable pans of floating ice glistened under the slanting rays, as the Erik shoved her nose into the mouth of Whale sound.

"Just the day for walrus—no wind and they'll be out on the ice sleeping in the sun," said Mat Henson, who had come aboard from the Roosevelt to take charge of the hunt; and Mat knew, for he had hunted walrus in Whale sound many a time.

In half an hour several pans of walrus had been sighted—it was then four in the morning—and two boats were launched: Norton, Henson, two Eskimo and myself in a rowboat; Whitney, with a crew, in the launch. We were soon busy. When an animal was killed an oar was hoisted and the ship steamed up to the spot and hauled the dead monster aboard with the winch; the boat shoving off again to search for more game. Some of the "tricks of the trade" were soon learned, for instance: a walrus killed in the water would sink nine times out of ten, and unless there was a harpoon in him would be lost. The same was generally true of one shot on an ice pan, unless killed instantly—he would slide off into the water and sink.

Our party finally returned aboard exhausted, to find that about 40 walrus had been taken.

When I awoke next morning we were dropping anchor off a little Eskimo village named Kangerderlookseah, situated near the mouth of Inglefield gulf. Commander Peary had been with us aboard the Erik since leaving North Star bay and said that he would remain here long enough to give us a chance at the caribou. That afternoon we pushed off in the whaleboat, bound for the head of the gulf, our five Eskimo companions as pleased and as excited as children at the idea of a hunt. We worked along shore, zigzagging between low slabs of ice, where sea pigeons flouted and little auks dove and flew away as the boat approached. Looking over the side one could see their little black-and-white bodies shooting the water, using their wings vigorously and leaving a trail of bubbles behind. Several seals were seen and as we rounded a point half an hour later, another village appeared, the pointed huts hardly distinguishable at first from the pointed rocks. A native came out in a kayak to accompany us ashore.

At least half the population expressed a strong desire to go with us, by getting into the boat when we were making ready to leave, a compromise being finally effected by our taking along two fine-looking young bucks each dressed in a new bear and sealskin suit.

At seven the next morning the sun burst through the mist and shone on the wet rocks, the white ice in the bay, and also on the glistening black head of a curious seal wallowing about just off shore. Things were moving in no time. The huskies crawled out from under the boat cover and beat their fur clothing with sticks to get out the dampness and the oil stoves were set going in preparation for breakfast. At eight we started inland, accompanied by the Eskimo hunters, carrying rifles and a few biscuits.

The first ridge rose sharply from the shore, the trail beyond leading up a broad, rocky valley. Here we separated, my two guides turning up a dry creek bed. It was hard traveling over the broken rock in the valleys and the steep slants of the ridges, and my .405 Winchester got pretty heavy before we sighted the first game, in the shape of two blue-gray caribou bulls, feeding at the edge of a rock-rimmed pond. One of the huskies and I circled around the down-wind side and crawled on our bellies up to a big boulder near the head of the pond, bringing both animals within range. As we reached the boulder and peeked cautiously around it the nearer caribou began to get uneasy and started out of the water, but pulled up on the bank, at a range of about 100 yards, long enough to get himself properly shot. At that distance his coat was much the same shade of gray as the rocks on which he fell.

Not long after leaving this pond we killed, between us, 15 ptarmigan with the .22 rifle. A few hours later, standing on the top of a high ridge looking across a big valley with a lake at the bottom, the inland ice cap could be plainly seen curving down, smooth and white, smothering all but this narrow strip of barren land along the coast; and at the foot of the ridge on the other side, standing ankle deep at the edge of another little pond, were two more caribou, a bull and a cow. We dropped back of the crest of the ridge and, following down a ravine further on, came out on a level with the pond, hidden from the sight of the game by a small hummock of rock. By crawling to the top of the hummock we were able to get a view of the pond. The caribou were still there, but lying down among the stones, and so like them in color that they were very hard to locate without the glasses—though only 300 yards distant, as I afterward placed it. It was useless to try to get nearer, as there was no cover, and I fired at the bull and could see he was hit by the way he staggered as he jumped up and tried to run. The cow jumped up also and stood still, broadside on, and when I fired at her I could hear the bullet strike very plainly. Though it did not knock her down, she seemed unable to run, and another shot put her out of her misery.

While still at this pond the two Eskimo hunters with whom Whitney started out chased a cow and calf on the run right past us. I hit the cow in the side at the third shot and the calf stopped and was killed by one of the Eskimo.

We now had six caribou—a fair supply of meat—and two extra men to help carry it in, as the other party had had no luck. So I left them to bring in what they could and started for camp alone. On the way I killed the biggest bull of all. He was alone on a hillside and I got within range without much difficulty. Whitney was in camp and said he had seen no caribou and Norton came in a couple of hours later, tired and disgusted, having shot a calf.

Our second attempt at walrus hunting in Whale sound was practically a failure, the weather being unfavorable. The Erik was headed for Etah, where we found the Roosevelt. At Etah the shore rises abruptly on both sides of the harbor and the sharp, rocky hills were dotted with Arctic hares. They are white with black-tipped ears all the year around and have extremely long and powerful hind legs, often running along almost upright for considerable distances. They were very shy when we arrived, having been hunted for some days by men from the Roosevelt.

During the ten days spent at Etah the Roosevelt was making ready for her dash northward. The two ships lashed together, transferred supplies, coal and the vile-smelling whale meat, which we had carried for so long aboard the Erik. Coal and provisions were landed and the day before the Roosevelt sailed was spent in transferring some 250 dogs from an island, where they had been put ashore, to the Roosevelt's deck.

Early in the afternoon of the eighteenth of August the Roosevelt showed by signal that she was ready to start north. At the time the Erik was tied to the rocks, landing coal, and the Roosevelt was anchored further up the bay. The captain, Norton, Whitney and I rowed over to her and Commander Peary invited us into his cabin, where we drank a glass of brandy to the health of all on board and to the success of the expedition, shook hands with everyone we could find amid the bustle and preparation of starting, and rowed back to the Erik. Whitney had decided to winter at Etah, and we left him there on the twenty-first, dropping him astern in his rowboat about an hour's run out.

Here we were homeward bound and not a sight had we had of the greatest and most desired arctic game, the white bear. It was nearly a month later before we did see one. We killed a few more walrus, arctic hares and birds on our way south, visited the Greenland Danish settlements at Upernavik, Disco and Holstenberg and crossed Davis strait, striking the coast on the west side near the mouth of Cumberland gulf.

On the twenty-second of September, off the Labrador coast, we ran into an iceberg, the shock breaking open the old Erik pretty well back to the pavement. Fortunately the damage was about two feet above the water line; very fortunately, as none of the boats happened to be in a condition that would permit quick launching. The crash came about eight o'clock on a bright, starlight evening, with the northern lights shifting across the sky and probably blotting out the berg until it was too late to escape collision. This accident seemed to take the life right out of the old ship, though she had withstood so many dangers in the past, and it was a crippled old Erik with a badly smashed nose that finally dropped anchor in Brigus harbor.

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. The doctors said I could not get well without an operation, for I could hardly stand the pains in my sides, especially my right one, and down my right leg. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle of Compound, but kept on as I was afraid to stop too soon."—Mrs. SADIE MULLEN, 2728 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

SUNSHINE AND GOOD HEALTH

Wherever Sun's Rays Penetrates Human Life Is Quickened and Health and Happiness Promoted.

The sunlight, with its mellowing warmth and radiance, is one of the great essentials to good health. Wherever it penetrates, in prudently regulated moderation, it quickens human life, promotes health and happiness, and may be truly regarded as one of the best friends of man and beast. The common practice of providing blinds, shutters, curtains and other means for shrouding the windows and shutting out the sunshine, is undoubtedly a great mistake, and makes for general weakness and ill health. More window light, more sunshine, and not less, is what we require. Let all your apartments, kitchen, sitting rooms, parlors and bedrooms, too, be flooded with sunlight as much as possible.

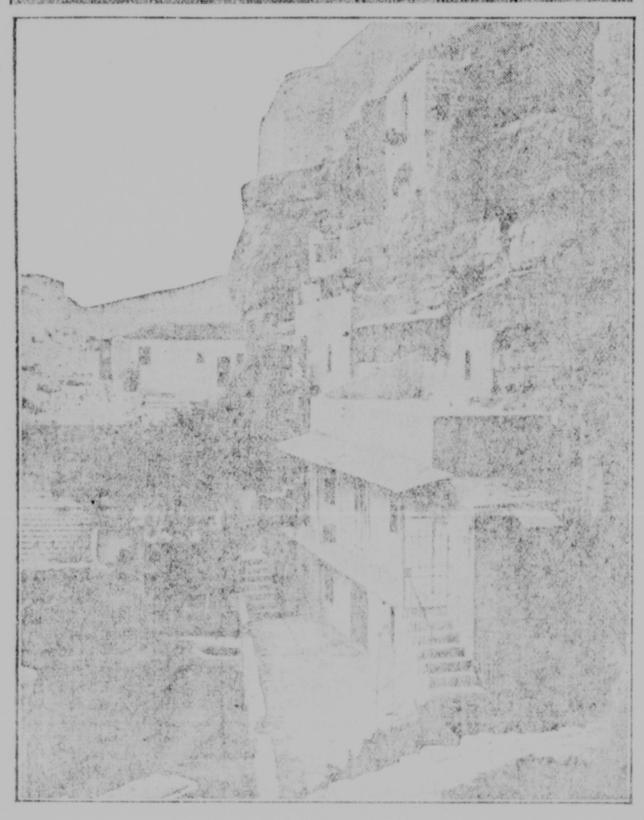
STRANGE THINGS FOUND IN VARIOUS PORTIONS OF THE EARTH

Famous Mar Saba Monastery



Far out in the wilderness of Judea is the famous monastery of Mar Saba, where in the eighth century Stephenos, the Sabaaite, wrote in Greek the well-known hymn, "Art thou weary, art thou languid?" It is now used as a place of confinement for unruly monks. No women are allowed to enter it, but a tower in the vicinity is allotted for their use as lady tourists often visit Mar Saba.

ALEXANDRA'S BIRTHDAY CAKE

Truly a wonderful affair was the ke that was made to grace the table Queen-Mother Alexandra of Eng-nd on the occasion of the celebration her last birthday at Sandringham. he big confection, of course, was uch too elaborate to be eaten but it ade a beautiful centerpiece and was onsidered a triumph of the pastry-ok's art.

DIAGNOSED CASE IN DREAM

A romance that dips into the realm of mysticism lies behind the marriage of Miss Elsie Turner to Dr. Lawrence F. Keith at Boston.

Miss Turner was stricken ill with a mysterious ailment. Specialists treated her with no favorable results. She was finally taken to the home of Doctor Keith. He was baffled till one day Miss Turner calmly told him what the trouble was and prescribed the treatment.

"Why, where in the world did you learn that?" Doctor Keith asked in amazement.

"Doctor——told me in a dream." The young woman named an old friend of the family long since dead. Doctor Keith followed out the dream diagnosis. She is now well.

A PATRIARCHAL PEAFOWL

The oldest peafowl in the world is believed to be that owned by Thomas Lambert, a farmer of Sulphur Well, Metcalf county. The bird apparently s just as active as ever. He as roosted in trees 110 years. In 810 Horatio Thompson came to Kentucky from Virginia, bringing with him this peafowl. This bird was then between 10 and 15 years old. When Mr. Thompson died this gay knight of fowldom passed to Thomas Lambert.

For 75 years the peafowl roosted on the same limb of a large oak tree until the tree was cut down. This bird is known all over southern Kentucky, and Peafowl school in Metcalfe county, was named in his honor.

STRANGE WEDDING CEREMONY

Her love undiminished by the fact that her betrothed is now legless, Anna Reilly, a pretty brunette, wheeled Robert Meyers into the office of Alderman McInerney, at Pittsburg, a few days ago and blushingly whispered: "Alderman, we want to get married."

Calling into his office some workmen from the street, the alderman went through the ceremony with the clay-covered workmen as witnesses and attendants. Then the girl wheeled her husband back to their little home.

Meyers was a railroad brakeman and lost both legs in an accident last February. He had known his wife for two years, but they were not engaged until after the accident.

CLOCK WAS MADE IN 1790

An interesting specimen of a long clock, made in 1790, is owned by a gentleman at Lutterworth. It has an oval face, a hand which points to the days of the week, completing the round in seven days; one which shows the true dead beat, and another which points to the chimes and quarters.

On the upper part of the clock is a small orchestra, which includes a flute, a cello and two violins, and a boy and girl in addition to three singers. The hours and the quarters are struck and every three hours a tune is played "three times over either on the bells alone, the lyricord or on both together," while the three figures beat time and the boy and girl dance to the music.

WHEN THE TWINS TRAVELED

A curious scene was witnessed at King's Cross station, London, the other Saturday on the arrival of the express from Edinburgh. Two women, known as the sisters Rosa and Josepha Blazek, who are in many respects similar to the Siamese twins, being joined together from the waist downward, stepped out on the platform. They alighted without difficulty, and walked to the barrier. Here, however, there was a difficulty, for the twins presented only one ticket. After a long conference between the collector, a policeman, and the friends of the joint couple, they were allowed to pass the barrier. It is to be supposed that the puzzle was too great for ordinary people to solve.

SEVENTEEN YEARS OVERDUE

A lady in business in Lorient, France, received a letter the other day, which was sent to her from Concarneau, postponing an engagement. The receiver of the letter could make nothing of it. Then she looked at the date both on the letter and the envelope. She found it was September 7, 1893. On the back of the envelope was an official note in red ink to the effect that it had been found in making some repairs at the post office at Concarneau, last November. For seventeen years the letter had lain in the post office and after it was found it had taken nearly three months to reach its destination.

WOMAN'S QUEER MASQUERADE

The story of a woman's strange life comes from Chelsea, Eng., where an inmate of the workhouse has confessed to having lived fifty years as a man without being discovered. She is now seventy-five years old, and tells of this with a lively exultation in the adventure. She assumed the guise of a man because she thought that with it she could earn her living more easily. She was married at the age of sixteen, after being well educated, and immediately left her husband, disliking his treatment of her. She worked as a painter and decorator.

The young king of the Laos territory, which is under French protection, has just inaugurated, in Luang Prabang, the newest royal order, namely, the Order of the Million Elephants and the White Umbrella. The decoration is in gold and white and green enamel, and the ribbon is red ornamented with old gold.

Rock of the Virgin, Biarritz

Biarritz, France, on the shores of the Mediterranean, which Napoleon III. and Eugenie selected as their winter residence, has been popular ever since then with winter tourists and invalids. It was there that the late King Edward spent his last holiday. A picturesque bit of the scenery at Biarritz is the Rock of the Virgin, shown in the accompanying picture.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT...

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL, Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

The Vengeance of Eternal Fire

"Even as Sodom and Gomorrah and the cities about them . . . are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire" (Jude 7).

Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle spoke here twice today to large and attentive audiences. We report one of his discourses from the above. He said in part:—

My text is one of the strongest of those which once we erroneously misunderstood to teach the eternal torment of the non-elect. Coming to the text with our minds filled with the wrong impressions respecting the character of the Almighty Creator and respecting his purposes toward humanity it is easy for us to misunderstand the words of St. Jude. So deeply were the erroneous thoughts impressed upon our minds from childhood that, irrational though they were, we considered them fundamental theology. In like manner we wrested to our own confusion and injury many Scriptures, reading into them what they do not say and ignoring what they do say. As, for instance, the messages of Holy Writ to the effect that "all the wicked will God destroy"; that "the wages of sin is death"; that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die"; that there is no eternal life out of Christ. All these and others we warped and twisted away from their beautiful and simple teaching, and made out of them "doctrines of devils" with which we alarmed ourselves and those committed to our instruction.

We thank God that gradually the eyes of our understanding are opening to discern the great Truth that the testing of the Church in the present Age and the testing of the world at large in the coming Age will be as to worthiness for eternal life or worthiness of eternal death—everlasting destruction—the Second Death from which there will be no redemption, no resurrection, no recovery. As St. Peter declares, Those who enter into it will be, like brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed—annihilated.

Sodom's Guilt and Punishment.

Sodom and surrounding cities were profligate and licentious to the extreme and Divine Justice decreed that their course must not continue, but that they should be made an example of—a lesson to others of the Divine displeasure against all such licentiousness. Accordingly we read that fire and brimstone were rained from heaven to the utter destruction of those cities, the place of which is now marked by the Dead Sea. The Sodomites were obliterated and only their name and history have come down to us. Their utter destruction by eternal fire or heavenly fire rained upon them was a complete destruction. Their experience pictures forth the utter destruction of all whom God will finally reject as unworthy of eternal life. Not that fire and brimstone would be rained upon all, but that utter destruction will come upon all disapproved by the Almighty. Who thinks that St. Jude meant that the fire that destroyed the Sodomites was an eternal one? Whoever thinks that it is still burning as a literal blaze should take a look at the picture of the Dead Sea and note that there are no fires there. The thought is that the fire, which is a symbol of destruction, did its work thoroughly, completely, leaving not a vestige of these condemned to destruction.

The Sodomites all went to hell—to the Bible hell—to the state of death. But they did not go to the hell which was manufactured by our forefathers during the dark ages—a hell of eternal torture. We have Bible testimony on the subject, which we will produce. They are unconscious now like the remainder of the dead, waiting for the resurrection. And the resurrection opportunity will come to them, as well as to all the remainder of Adam's race; because they, as well as all others, are redemed by the precious blood of Christ—by the sacrifice which he finished at Calvary. This is not speculative. We have the words of the Master himself on the subject. Let us take our information, our wisdom from the proper quarter. Then our doubts and fears will speedily flee away.

Not a Second Chance.

We will produce the Bible testimony showing that the Sodomites will be released and come forth during the mediatorial reign of Messiah to enjoy a share of the blessings then to be poured out upon Israel and the world; and to have an opportunity of coming into harmony with God and gaining eternal life. But we know that straightway somebody will say, No, Pastor Russell, that would be a second chance, and God has nowhere promised a second chance to any. Furthermore it would be belittleing to the Divine Government to suppose that God, after giving one fair trial to a man and reaching a decision would conclude to give him another trial, as though Divine Justice were unable to determine the worthiness or unworthiness of the individual for eternal life in one trial or testing.

We fully agree with this sentiment, but call attention to the fact that the Sodomites did not enjoy one trial for life. They and all mankind were "born in sin, shapen in iniquity; in sin did their mothers conceive them." They were born under the sentence, "Dying thou shalt die." Neither they nor anyone else, therefore, could be placed upon trial for a future life everlasting or death everlasting, until released from the original sentence of death under which all were born. And no release from that death sentence was granted to anybody until the Redeemer came and died, "the Just for the unjust," that, "as by a man came death, by a man also might come the resurrection of the dead."

Only those, therefore, who have been born since Jesus' day could be released from the original penalty, or could be placed on trial for life or death eternal. Only the Church, therefore, accepts this proposition. To this agrees the words of the Apostle, "If we sin wilfully after that we have come to a knowledge of the Truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin (such having enjoyed and misused their share of the original sacrifice)—nothing but a fearful looking forward to of judgment (sentence) and fiery indignation, which will devour the adversaries of God—in the Second Death (Hebrews x, 26). The Sodomites, therefore, did not enjoy any chance of eternal life. They knew not "the only name given under heaven or amongst men whereby we must be saved." Not only so, but the majority of mankind since Jesus' day have never heard the Gospel in the true sense of the word hearing— They have never understood, never appreciated, it fully, rightly.

More Tolerable For Sodomites.

It may astonish some to know that Jesus, speaking of the judgment or trial of the world during the coming age, during his Mediatorial Kingdom, declared that that trial would be less severe upon the Sodomites than upon some of those people to whom he preached, who would also have a share in the opportunities of that great epoch—an opportunity, with the Sodomites, of reconciliation to God and the attainment of eternal life. His words were, Woe unto you Chorazzin and Bethsaida, for if the mighty works which have been done in you had been done in Sodom and Gomorrah, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes. Therefore I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon in the day of judgment [the world's trial time, the Millennium] than for you (Matthew ii, 22, 23). What more could we ask upon this subject? What higher authority could be invoked than the Great Judge himself?

It will not do to say that Jesus did not refer to the same licentious Sodomites mentioned by St. Jude in our text. It will not do to say that Jesus meant some Sodomites living in his day, because there were none. The Master distinctly tells us that "the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained down fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all" (Luke xvii, 29). When our Lord declares that "it shall be more tolerable for Sodom in the day of judgment than for Capernaum" and the other cities in which he preached, he implies that it will still be tolerable for those people who heard him and who rejected his message.

"Thus It Is Written."

This Gospel Age which began with our Lord's sufferings and trying experiences, and which has continued those experiences with his followers, has for its object the preparation, the qualification, of those who will be the Judges of the world in the coming Age. They must all be developed in the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit—"meekness, patience, brotherly kindness, love," else that will not be fit to be the Judges of mankind by and by. It is required that all become copies of the Redeemer, God's dear Son. St. Paul tells us this, saying, "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?" and that God has foreordained that all of these judges must be copies of his Son? (Romans viii, 29; I Corinthians vi, 2).

Come back with me to the Old Testament Scriptures and note how the Divine Spirit dictated this matter of the future trial of the Sodomites to one of the prophets and caused it to be written for our instruction. Alas! as Jesus said, we have been "slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken" (Luke xxiv, 25). Through Ezekiel the Prophet, the Lord explains that when the restitution time shall come at the Second Advent of our Lord in the glory of his Kingdom, then the Divine blessing will come upon Israel now cast off. Nor will the blessing of Messiah's Kingdom come upon Israel only: It will extend to all the families of the earth. Through the Prophet the Lord specially emphasized to Israel her two sister nations, Sodom and Samaria. The Lord pointed out that in the day of their pride and prosperity they disdained these sister nations as being far beneath them and unworthy of their notice in every way. But in the restitution times (Acts iii, 19) they will be glad to have a share of the Divine favor in conjunction with those nations formerly despised.

The Lord declares that it is not because of the worthiness of any of these that he proposes their restitution, but because of his glorious character, for which his namesake, Let me quote to you this remarkably clear statement of the Divine purposes future; and let us notice that it is emphatically declared that the ones to be restored and blessed are the very ones who perished in the days of Lot. We read,—

"Sodom thy sister hath not done * * * as thou hast done * * * Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness was to her, * * * neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and the needy. And they were haughty, and committed abomination before me; therefore I took them away as I saw good. [God did not see good to take them to a hell of eternal torture; but he did see good to destroy them and to make them an example of the destruction of all ultimately displeasing to him after enjoying a knowledge of his grace and an opportunity for eternal life.]

BITTINGER.

Unusual weather, for the beginning of April, prevails here. Snow, sleet and wind, with cold nights, has continued for a week, causing considerable destruction among wild birds a number of which have been found dead about farmyards where they had gathered for food and shelter.

The public school at this place closed last Friday, with a record showing good attendance, a splendid average attendance and most successful work accomplished by the school under the untiring efforts of Prof. J. C. Beahm. Prof. Beahm contemplates conducting a private subscription school for several weeks during the spring months, which promises to be well attended.

A natural freak was discovered on the farm of Christian C. Beachy, one day last week, in the shape of a two-headed lamb. The animal was normally devoloped in other respects, but lived only a few hours, and we learn that Mr. Beachy will have the form prepared, mounted and preserved.

Amos H. Reckner and Theodore Beckman, of Meadow Mountain, attended the joint council meeting of Lutheran congregations held in this village last Saturday afternoon.

Jesse Butler, of Jennings, was a pleasant caller among us last Monday afternoon.

George Reckner, of North Glade, has been in this neighborhood for several days chasing foxes.

Mrs. Henry Bittinger and Mrs. Charles Stark are reported on the sick list this week.

Miss Lucinda Beeghley was the guest of Prof. and Mrs. J. C. Beahm last Sunday and Monday.

SUNNYSIDE.

The farmers up here are a little behind with their work as none have planted potatoes, corn, nor sowed oats.

With the exception of deep snow-drifts and mud drifts the roads are in fair condition for travel. Buggies, light wagons and sleighs being used, as the roads are so either mode of conveyance can be employed.

We who knew "Uncle Jesse" Glotfelty were very sorry to learn of his demise. He was always kind, cheerful and of a very sociable make-up, and in his departure Garrett county lost one of its best citizens.

Those of us who are fond of "sight-seeing" and hearing sounds should like to made a little run down South, out of the United States and into Mexico. Since Uncle Sam "pays the freight" on such occasions as are likely to develop down there some of us might be loaded on.

The public school at this place taught by Miss Mabel Porter, of near Oakland, closed on last Friday. Our school was, in every way, a sucess. Miss Porter is a strong teacher, a good disciplinarian and endeared herself to our people through her excellent social qualities. She is not possessed of the giddy and gaudy qualities that make a young lady undesirable, but on the contrary is just plain, pleasant, unassuming, sensible. Miss Porter is, therefore, exceptionally well qualified to teach the schools of our county.

John Fike, an employee of the B. & O. R. R. R. Co., was killed at Tunnelton, W. Va., on last Thursday, by a fall of earth while he was engaged in construction work at that place. His remains were brought near here on Saturday and on Sunday at 10:30 a. m. funeral services were conducted by Rev. Emory Fike at Glade View Brethern church. Interment took place at the Wolf grave yard. "Johnny" was aged 21 years. His father, the late Simon S. Fike, preceded him to the grave ten years ago. He was raised near the Red House, where he had many warm friends. At the age of eleven he connected with the Brethren or Dunkard church, Glade View congregation, and has lived an exemplary Christian life. He is survived by an aged mother, four sisters and two brothers. The awful suddeness of his death was a crushing blow to the family, to whom the sincere sympathy of the community is extended. His remains were followed to the grave by a large concourse of sorrowing relatives, friends and neighbors, manifesting the high esteem in which he was held by those who knew him.

MOUNTAIN TOP MILL TO BEGIN OPERATING SATURDAY

It is Equipped With The Best Modern Machinery Obtainable.

The Mountain Top Mill, owned by Messrs. Dixon & Kelso, work upon which has been in progress for a number of weeks, will begin active operations on Saturday, the delay in getting the machinery started being on account of the unfinished condition of many minor details.

The mill is an improvement over the usual run of roller system flour mills in a great many respects, the most important being the ability of this particular mill to turn out whiter and a better grade of flour. This is made possible by the larger bolting or screen surface in the bolting machine installed in the Mountain Top Mill. Most mills throughout the country are lacking in this respect with the consequent result that flour will not grade up with the quality of the product to be manufactured in the Oakland mill.

The mill is equipped with four stands of rollers, sixteen elevators, an automatic packer which will accommodate either eight or sixteen sacks or full barrels as may be necessary. The machine is automatic in all its movements. These machines are contained on the first floor and are driven from beneath by pulleys located in the basement of the mill.

On the second floor are a number of machines, namely, the receiving separator, which removes every particle of foreign substance from the grain passing through it; a stock hopper of 100 bushels capacity; a purifier; a dust collector and a fan which serves the double purpose of blowing out the offal as well as to keep the rolls cool.

The largest machine is located on the third floor it being known as a sectional sifter. In all its parts it is fitted with the ball-bearing device which means a saving of power as well as economizing room, as this single machine will do the work of ten of the old fashionedd reels and will do it much better and with very much less required power.

The machinery was built and installed by the Wolf Company of Chambersburg, Pa., which concern has a world-wide reputation as manufacturers of milling machinery.

The mill will derive its power from a twenty-five horse power gas engine which has been in the Dixon mill for a year or more.

WOMEN'S CIVIC CLUB MAPPED OUT WORK

To Be Done During the Spring Months at Meeting Held Tuesday.

The first meeting of the Woman's Civic Club of Oakland since its organization a week ago, held at the court house Tuesday afternoon, was quite encouraging to those who have become interested in its work and the efforts of the ladies toward civic improvement will undoubtedly bear excellent fruit.

Aside from the reception of a large number of new members to the club, several gentlemen were made honorary members and a sum of money to carry on the work of organization has been collected and is in the hands of the Treasurer.

Cleaning up day for property owners has been set for May 16th, when everyone residing in the town is urged to thoroughly clean their premises of trash and all that cannot be burned should be placed in boxes or barrels so that it may be carted away with the least possible labor and expense. A concerted effort on the part of the property owners in this respect will work wonders in the appearance of the town and will be creditable to householders and the ladies whose influence and suggestions worked the transformation of making cleaner, brighter and more sanitary yards and streets.

May 23rd has been designated cemetery cleaning day. Upon this day every lot owner is requested to be at the cemetery and clear away the accumulated leaves, broken and decayed twigs and any other accumulations of matter which may be upon their holdings in the cemetery.

Wire screen baskets have been ordered by the club and upon their receipt they will be placed at the various street corners for the reception of waste paper and other light materials which, if not deposited in some such receptacle, will blow along the streets and litter private property.

Business men especially have been requested to clear their back doors of broken boxes, barrels, waste paper, and other trash which has accumulated during the winter months, and burn the same or dispose of it in some other manner.

Cooperation with the ladies means success to the movement and until this is done their efforts to make Oakland a model town will be futile.

Special Easter Music.

At St. Paul's M. E. church, Oakland, Sunday morning and evening, special Easter music will be rendered. All are cordialy invited to be present.

Palm Sunday.

Last Sunday was Palm Sunday. It was, too, the first day of Holy Week and there were special sermons or services in all the churches, particularly the Lutheran, Catholic and Episcopal churches. Palms were distributed in the Catholic and Episcopal churches.

OAKLAND'S POPULATION INCREASED BY LATE CENSUS

Figures Given Out By Census Officials Show A Gain of 196.

The Census Bureau at Washington has issued the bulletin of population for Maryland in its minutest detail. The total for the several counties and Baltimore are published in another column of this paper today.

The bulletin gives the population of the State by minor civil divisions, including even election districts in the counties. The statistics of the one hundred and twenty incorporated towns and villages in the State furnish an excellent guide to determine the growth of the State's population. As a rule all the incorporated places have increased in population in the past decade, some, it is true, very little.

Oakland has made some advancement toward increasing her population, but not as much as all would like to see. In 1900, under the figures gathered by the State enumerators, which were adopted by the general government, the returns gave Oakland 1170. In 1910, under the government supervision, the population is given as 1366, showing an increase of 196, in the decade between 1900 and 1910. The county increased from 17,701 in 1900 to 20,105 in 1910.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

A preliminary program for the coming season will be issued in a few days. Twenty thousand copies will be printed. This program will be printed on enameled India tint paper with photo-brown ink of the finest quality. The work will be quite artistic—the kind for which THE REPUBLICAN jobbing department is noted. The program will be ready for distribution in a few days.

The golf grounds are being put in condition by Mr. P. T. Lipscomb and a force of men and teams. The grounds are being rolled and seeded to lawn grass and later they will be gone over daily by a combined lawn mower and roller. This work is being done by the Ladies' Civic Club and will make a great improvement in the appearance of the grounds fronting on the railroad.

The Interdenominational camp meeting, under the direction of Joseph H. Smith, will be held July 4-14. A large corps of workers, many new to Mountain Lake Park, will be at this meeting.

The Nesbit cottage on D street was was not transferred to Mr. H. L. Bittner on account of a misunderstanding as to the amount of ground to be conveyed.

Mrs. Amanda Michael will move from the Chautauqua Hotel to the Smouse cottage on Wheeling avenue.

Home From Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Annan and daughters, Misses Priscella and Margaret Annan, who were touring Europe for the past three months arrived home last night. They landed in New York on Saturday on the Coronia. Mr. Annan was seen by a reporter to whom he said that they had a most delightful trip. Mr. Annan says that one could learn something on the other side of the water and that those people could learn something from us. Mr. Annan was greatly pleased with the hotels abroad, saying that he didn't eat but one bad meal while there. Mr. Annan looks well, an indication of itself that he enjoyed the trip.—Cumberland Times.

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the Bronson case to get the deposition of John Gilmore, millionaire. A lady requests Blakeley to buy her a Pullman ticket. He gives her lower 11 and retains lower 10. He finds a drunken man in lower 10 and retires in lower 9. He awakens in lower 7 and finds his clothes and bag missing. The man in lower 10 is found murdered. Circumstantial evidence points to both Blakeley and the man who stole his clothes. The train is wrecked and Blakeley is rescued from a burning car by a girl in blue. His arm is broken. The girl proves to be Alison West, his partner's sweetheart. Blakeley returns home and finds he is under surveillance. Moving pictures of the train taken just before the wreck reveal to Blakeley a man leaping from the train with his stolen grip. Investigation proves that the man's name is Sullivan. Mrs. Conway, the woman for whom Blakeley bought a Pullman ticket, tries to make a bargain with him for the forged notes, not knowing that they are missing. Blakeley and an amateur detective investigate the home of Sullivan's sister. From a servant Blakeley learns that Alison West had been there on a visit and Sullivan had been attentive to her. Sullivan is the husband of a daughter of the murdered man.

CHAPTER XXV.—Continued.

Against both of these theories, I accuse a purely chimerical person named Sullivan, who was not seen by any of the survivors—save one, Alison, whom I could not bring into the case. I could find a motive for his murdering his father-in-law, whom he hated, but again—I would have to drag in the girl.

And not one of the theories explained the telegram and the broken necklace.

Outside the office force was arriving. They were comfortably ignorant of my presence, and over the transom floated scraps of dialogue and the stenographer's gurgling laugh. McKnight had a relative, who was reading law with him, in the intervals between calling up the young women of his acquaintance. He came in singing, and the office boy joined in with the uncertainty of voice of 15. I smiled grimly. I was too busy with my own troubles to find any joy in opening the door and startling them into silence. I even heard, without resentment, Blobs of the uncertain voice inquire when "Blake" would be back.

I hoped McKnight would arrive before the arrest occurred. There were many things to arrange. But when at last, impatient of his delay, I telephoned, I found he had been gone for more than an hour. Clearly he was not coming directly to the office, and with such resignation as I could muster I paced the floor and waited.

I felt more alone than I have ever felt in my life. "Born an orphan," as Richey said, I had made my own way, carved out myself such success as had been mine. I had built up my house of life on the props of law and order, and now some unknown hand had withdrawn the supports, and I stood among ruins.

I suppose it is the maternal in a woman that makes a man turn to her when everything else fails. The eternal boy in him goes to have his wounded pride bandaged, his tattered self-respect repaired. If he loves the woman, he wants her to kiss the hurt.

The longing to see Alison, always with me, was stronger than I was that morning. It might be that I would not see her again. I had nothing to say to her save one thing, and that, under the cloud that hung over me, I did not dare to say. But I wanted to see her, to touch her hand—as only a lonely man can crave it, I wanted the comfort of her, the peace that lay in her presence. And so, with every step outside the door a threat, I telephoned to her.

She was gone! The disappointment was great, for my need was great. In a fury of revolt against the scheme of things, I heard that she had started home to Richmond—but that she might still be caught at the station.

To see her had by that time become an obsession. I picked up my hat, threw open the door, and, obvious of the shock to the office force of my presence, followed so immediately by my exit, I dashed out to the elevator. As I went down in one cage I caught a glimpse of Johnson and two other men going up in the next. I hardly gave them a thought. There was no hansom in sight, and I jumped on a passing car. Let come what might, arrest, prison, disgrace, I was going to see Alison.

I saw her. I flung into the station, saw that it was empty—empty, for she was not there. Then I hurried back to the gates. She was there, a familiar figure in blue, the very gown in which I always thought of her, the one she had worn when, Heaven help me—I had kissed her, at the Carter farm. And she was not alone. Bending over her, talking earnestly, with all his boyish heart in his face, was Richey.

They did not see me, and I was glad of it. After all, it had been McKnight's game first. I turned on my heel and made my way blindly out of the station. Before I lost them I turned once and looked toward them, standing apart from the crowd, absorbed in each other. They were the only two people on earth that I cared about, and I left them there together. Then I went back miserably to the office and awaited arrest.

CHAPTER XXVI.

On to Richmond.

Strangely enough, I was not disturbed that day. McKnight did not appear at all. I sat at my desk and transacted routine business all afternoon, working with feverish energy. Like a man on the verge of a critical illness or a hazardous journey, I cleared up my correspondence, paid bills until I had writer's cramp from signing checks, read over my will, and paid up my life insurance, made to the benefit of an elderly sister of my mother's.

I no longer dreaded arrest. After that morning in the station, I felt that anything would be a relief from the tension. I went home with perfect openness, courting the warrant that I knew was waiting, but I was not molested. The delay puzzled me. The early part of the evening was uneventful. I read until late, with occasional lapses, when my book lay at my elbow, and I smoked and thought. Mrs. Klopton closed the house with ostentatious caution, about eleven, and hung around waiting to enlarge on the outrageousness of the police search. I did not encourage her.

"One would think," she concluded pompously, one foot in the hall, "that you were something you oughtn't to be, Mr. Lawrence. They acted as though you had committed a crime."

"I'm not sure that I didn't, Mrs. Klopton," I said wearily. "Somebody did, and the general verdict seems to point my way."

She stared at me in speechless indignation. Then she flounced out. She came back once to say that the paper predicted cooler weather, and that she had put a blanket on my bed, but, to her disappointment, I refused to reopen the subject.

At half-past eleven McKnight and Hotchkiss came in. Richey has a habit of stopping his car in front of the house and honking until some one comes out. He has a code of signals with the horn, which I never remember. Two long and a short blast mean, I believe, "Send out a box of cigarettes," and six short blasts, which sound like a police call, mean "Can you lend me some money?" Tonight I knew something was up, for he got out and rang the door-bell like a Christian.

They came into the library, and Hotchkiss wiped his collar until it gleamed. McKnight was aggressively cheerful.

"Not pinched yet!" he exclaimed. "What do you think of that for luck! You always were a fortunate devil, Lawrence."

"Yes," I assented with some bitterness, "I hardly know how to contain myself for joy sometimes. I suppose you know"—to Hotchkiss—"that the police were here while we were at Cresson, and that they found the bag that I brought from the wreck?"

"Things are coming to a head," he said thoughtfully, "unless a little plan that I have in mind—" he hesitated.

"I hope so; I am pretty nearly desperate," I said, doggedly. "I've got a mental toothache, and the sooner it's pulled the better."

"Tut, tut," sadi McKnight, "think of the disgrace to the firm if its senior member goes up for life, or—" he twisted his handkerchief into a noose, and went through an elaborate pantomime.

"Although jail isn't so bad, anyhow," he finished, "there are fellows that get the habit and keep going back and going back." He looked at his watch, and I fancied his cheerfulness was strained. Hotchkiss was nervously fumbling my book.

"Did you ever read the Purloined Letter, Mr. Blakeley?" he inquired.

"Probably, years ago," I said. "Poe, isn't it?"

He was choked at my indifference. "It is a masterpiece," he said, with enthusiasm. "I re-read it to-day."

"And what happened?"

"Then I inspected the rooms in the house off Washington Circle. I—I made some discoveries, Mr. Blakeley. For one thing, our man there is left-handed." He looked around for our approval. "There was a small cushion on the dresser, and the scarf-pins in it had been stuck in with the left hand."

"Somebody may have twisted the cushion," I objected, but he looked hurt, and I desisted.

"There is only one discrepancy," he admitted, "but it troubles me. According to Mrs. Carter, at the farmhouse, our man wore gaudy pajamas, while I found here only the most severely plain night-shirts."

"Any buttons off?" McKnight inquired, looking again at his watch.

"The buttons were there," the amateur detective answered gravely, "but the buttonhole next the top one was torn through."

McKnight winked at me furtively.

"I am convinced of one thing," Hotchkiss went on, clearing his throat, "the papers are not in that room. Either he carries them with him, or he has sold them."

A sound on the street made both my visitors listen sharply. Whatever it was it passed on, however. I was growing curious and the restraint was telling on McKnight. He has no talent for secrecy. In the interval we discussed the strange occurrence at Cresson, which lost nothing by Hotchkiss' dry narration.

"And so," he concluded, "the woman in the Baltimore hospital is the wife of Henry Sullivan and the daughter of the man he murdered. No wonder he collapsed when he heard of the wreck."

"Joy, probably," McKnight put in. "Is that clock right, Lawrence? Never mind, it doesn't matter. By the way, Mrs. Conway dropped in the office yesterday, while you were away."

"What!" I sprang from my chair.

"Sure thing. Said she had heard great things of us, and wanted us to handle her case against the railroad."

"I would like to know what she is driving at," I reflected. "Is she trying to reach me through you?"

Richey's flippancy is often a cloak for deeper feeling. He dropped it now. "Yes," he said, "she's after the notes, of course. And I'll tell you I felt like a poltroon—whatever that may be—when I turned her down. She stood by the door with her face white, and told me contemptuously that I could save you from a murder charge and wouldn't do it. She made me feel like a cur. I was just as guilty as if I could have obliged her. She hinted that there were reasons and she laid my attitude to beastly motives."

"Nonsense," I said, as easily as I could. Hotchkiss had gone to the window. "She was excited. There are no 'reasons,' whatever, she means."

Richey put his hand on my shoulder. "We've been together too long to let any 'reasons' or 'unreasons' come between us, old man," he said, not very steadily.

Hotchkiss, who had been silent, here came forward in his most impressive manner. He put his hands under his coat-tails and coughed.

"Mr. Blakeley," he began, "by Mr. McKnight's advice we have arranged a little interview here to-night. If all has gone as I planned, Mr. Henry Pinckney Sullivan is by this time under arrest. Within a very few minutes—he will be here."

"I wanted to talk to him before he was locked up,' Richey explained. "He's clever enough to be worth knowing, and, besides, I'm not so cocksure of his guilt as our friend the patch on the seat of government. No murderer worthy of the name needs six different motives for the same crime, beginning with robbery, and ending with an unpleasant father-in-law."

We were all silent for awhile. McKnight stationed himself at a window, and Hotchkiss paced the floor expectantly. "It's a great day for modern detective methods," he chirruped. "While the police have been guarding houses and standing with their mouths open waiting for clews to fall in and choke them, we have pieced together, bit by bit, a fabric—"

The door-bell rang, followed immediately by sounds of footsteps in the hall. McKnight threw the door open, and Hotchkiss, raised on his toes, flung out his arm in a gesture of superb eloquence.

"Behold—your man!" he declaimed.

Through the open doorway came a tall, blond fellow, clad in light gray, wearing tan shoes, and followed closely by an officer.

"I brought him here as you suggested, Mr. McKnight," said the constable.

But McKnight was doubled over the library table in silent convulsions of mirth, and I was almost as bad. Little Hotchkiss stood up, his important attitude finally changing to one of chagrin, while the blond man ceased to look angry, and became sheepish.

It was Stuart, our confidential clerk for the last half dozen years!

McKnight sat up and wiped his eyes.

"Stuart," he said sternly, "there are two very serious things we have learned about you. First, you jab your scarf-pins into your cushion with your left hand, which is most reprehensible; second, you wear—er—nightshirts, instead of pajamas. Worse than that, perhaps, we find that one of them has a buttonhole torn out at the neck."

Stuart was bewildered. He looked from McKnight to me, and then at the crestfallen Hotchkiss.

"I haven't any idea what it's all about," he said. "I was arrested as I reached my boarding-house to-night, after the theater, and brought directly here. I told the officer it was a mistake."

Poor Hotchkiss tried bravely to justify the fiasco.

"You can not deny," he contended, "that Mr. Andrew Bronson followed you to your rooms last Monday evening."

Stuart looked at us and flushed.

"No, I don't deny it," he said, "but there was nothing criminal about it, on my part, at least. Mr. Bronson has been trying to induce me to secure the forged notes for him. But I did not even know where they were."

"And you were not on the wrecked Washington Flier?" persisted Hotchkiss. But McKnight interfered.

"There is no use trying to put the other man's identity on Stuart, Mr. Hotchkiss," he protested. "He has been our confidential clerk for six years, and has not been away from the office a day for a year. I am afraid that the beautiful fabric we have pieced out of all these scraps is going to be a crazy quilt." His tone was facetious, but I could detect the undercurrent of real disappointment.

I paid the constable for his trouble, and he departed. Stuart, still indignant, left to go back to Washington Circle. He shook hands with McKnight and myself magnanimously, but he hurled a look of utter hatred at Hotchkiss, sunk crestfallen in his chair.

"As for as I can see," said McKnight dryly, "we're exactly as far along as we were the day we met at the Carter place. We're not a step nearer to finding our man."

"We have one thing that may be of value," I suggested. "He is the husband of a bronze-haired woman at Van Kirk's hospital, and it is just possible we may trace him through her. I hope we are not going to lose your valuable co-operation, Mr. Hotchkiss?" I asked.

He roused at that to feeble interest. "I—oh, of course not, if you still care to have me, I—I was wondering about—the man who just went out, Stuart, you say? I— told his landlady to-night that he wouldn't need the room again. I hope she hasn't rented it to somebody else."

We cheered him as best we could, and I suggested that we go to Baltimore the next day and try to find the real Sullivan through his wife. He left sometime after midnight, and Richey and I were alone.

As George Sees the Peers.

"David Lloyd George," said the miner from Wales, as he emptied his glass of cwrw, "David is a very witty speaker. I've heard him many a time in Carnarvon.

"Speaking in Welsh, he once ridiculed in Carnarvon the house of lords. He said the average peer thought so much of himself that at family prayers he always made one well-known passage run:

"'Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the lords forever!'"—London Globe.

Shillalah Still Useful.

The shillalah, which showed at Louth that it has not entirely lost its old importance as a factor in deciding elections, is no raw limb of a tree. It is almost as much a work of art as a well balanced cricket bat. The old shillalahs were as carefully looked after by their loving owners as is a rifle in the wilds. Cut from the sturdiest of young blackthorns, and showing as little taper as an ebony ruler, it was weighted with lead or iron at the end nearest the grip, so that its center of gravity was about four-fifths of the way from the hitting end. When properly seasoned by being kept in the neighborhood of the farm oven for a few months, it became a thing of supple steel. And the proper pronunciation of the name of this fearsome weapon is the melodious one of "shil-ally," with the accent on the "all."—London Chronicle.

Perhaps Not.

An instructor in a church school where much attention was paid to sacred history, dwelt particularly on the phrase "And Enoch was not, for God took him." So many times was this repeated in connection with the death of Enoch that he thought even the dullest pupil would answer correctly when asked in examination: State in the exact language of the Bible what is said of Enoch's death.

But this was the answer he got:

"Enoch was not what God took him for."—Brooklyn Life.

Why Maria Laughed.

Hiram paused at the door and holding up a steel trap, said:

"Mariar, when you see this trap again it will have a skunk in it."

Fifteen minutes later he reappeared.

"Mariar," he yelled, "you come here and loosen me out of this all-fired trap."

And then he got mad at "Mariar" because she laughed.

Too Costly.

"When I want to flatter a man I ask him for advice."

"I take it for granted that you never want to flatter a lawyer."

THE APACHES OF NEW YORK

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS

COPYRIGHT BY PEARSON PUB. CO.

HE was born somewhere on the banks of the Danube and and came steerage-wise to this country about ten years ago. In what circles he affected he was called "The Bottler." He may have had another name in Austria; but since he is now dead and down under the grass roots, "The Bottler," as a phrase of identification, should serve well enough.

The Bottler was round, inoffensive, well-dressed, affable. He was also generous, as the East side employs the term.

For be it known that The Bottler was a money maker and had Suffolk street position as among its richest capitalists.

What bridge whist is to Fifth avenue so is stuss to the East side. No one save the dealer wins at stuss, and yet the device possesses an alluring feature. When the victim gets up from the table the "bank" under the descriptive of "viggresh" returns his one-tenth of his losings. No one ever leaves a stuss game broke and that final ray of sure sunshine forms indubitably the strong attraction. Stuss licks up as with a tongue of fire a round full fifth of all the East side earns, and to "viggresh" should be given the black glory thereof.

The Bottler owned talents to make money. Morally careless, liking the easy way, with over-all that bent for speculation which sets some folk to dealing in stocks and others to dealing cards, those money-making talents found expression in stuss. Not that the Bottler was so weak minded as to "buck" the game. Wise, prudent, solvent, he went the other way about and dealt it, his theater of operations being 135 Suffolk street.

There are two great gangs on the East side. These are the "Five Points" and the "Monk Eastmans." There are smaller gangs, but each owes allegiance to either the one or the other of the two great gangs, and fights round its standard in event of general gang war.

There is danger in belonging to either of these gangs. But there is still greater danger in not belonging to one of them. I speak of folk of The Bottler's ways and walks. The Five Points and Monk Eastmans are at feud with one another and the fires of their warfare are never permitted to die out. Membership in one gang means that, to the extent of its power, it will buckle you against the other while you live and avenge you should you fall. Membership in neither, however, means that you will be raided and robbed by both.

The Bottler's stuss house was—like every other of its kind—a Castle Dangerous. To the end that the peril of his days and nights be reduced to a minimum, he united himself with the Five Points. True, he could not be counted upon as a "shtocker" or strong-arm; but he had money and would part with it, and gang war like all war demands treasure. Bonds must be given, fines paid, and The Bottler would have his uses. Wherefore the Five Points opened their ranks to receive him.

The Monk Eastmans had suffered a disorganizing setback when the chief who gave the sept his name went up the river for ten years. On the heels of that sorrowful retirement it became a case of York and Lancaster; two rival claimants for the throne stood forth. These were Ritchie Fitzpatrick and Kid Twist, both valorous, both with reputations of having killed, both with clouds of followers at their backs.

Twist, in whom abode the rudiments of a savage diplomacy, proposed a conference. Fitzpatrick at that conference was shot to death and Kid Dahl, a near friend of Twist, "stood for the collar."

AS THE CLOCK STRUCK THE HOUR, HE FIRED TWICE

The police, the gangs and the politicians are not without a sinister wisdom. When life has been taken and to punish the slayer would be an inconvenience, some one who didn't do the killing submits to arrest. This covers the retreat of the guilty. Also, the public is appeased. Later, when the public's memory sleeps, the arrested one—for lack of evidence—is set at liberty.

Thus when Fitzpatrick was killed, to make clear the path to gang leadership to the aspiring feet of Twist, the police took Dahl, who all but volunteered for the sacrifice. Dahl went smilingly to jail, while the real murderer of Fitzpatrick attended that dead gentleman's wake and later appeared at the funeral. This last, however, by the nicer tastes of the East side, was complained of as trenching upon vulgarity.

Fitzpatrick was buried with a cry in his hand and Twist hailed chief of the Eastmans. Dahl remained in the Tombs a reasonable number of weeks and then resumed his position in East side society. It was but natural and to the glory of stumbling human nature that Dahl should dwell warmly in the grateful regards of Twist.

Twist, now chief of the Eastmans, cast about to establish Dahl. There was The Bottler, with his stuss Colconda in Suffolk street. Were not his affiliations with the Five Points? Was he not therefore the enemy? The Bottler was an Egyptian and Twist resolved to spoil him in the interest of Dahl.

Twist, with Dahl, waited upon The Bottler. Argument was short and to the point. Said Twist:

"Bottler, the Kid"—indicating the expectant Dahl—"is in wit' your stuss graft from now on. It's to be an even break."

The news almost checked the beating of The Bottler's heart. Not that he was astonished. What the puissant Twist proposed was a commonest step in East side commerce—the East side, where the Scotch proverb of "Take what you may, keep what you can," retains a former Highland force. The Bottler bowed to the inevitable and accepted Dahl.

For six weeks The Bottler and Dahl settled up, fifty-and-fifty, with the close of each stuss day. Then came a fresh surprise. Dahl presented his friend, the "Nailer," to The Bottler with this terse remark:

"Bottler, you can beat it. The Nailer is goin' to be me partner now. Which lets you out, see?"

The Bottler was at bay. He owned no stomach for battle, but the sentiment of desperation which the announcement of Dahl provoked drove him to make a stand. To lose one-half had been bad. To lose all—to be wholly wiped out in the annals of Suffolk street stuss—was more than even his meekness might bear. No, The Bottler did not dream of going to the police. That would have been to "squeal;" and even his friends of the Five Points had only faces of flint for such tactics of disgrace.

The harassed Bottler barred his doors against Dahl. He would defend his castle and get word to the Five Points. The Bottler's doors having been barred, Dahl for his side at once instituted a siege, despatching the Nailer meanwhile to the nearest knot of Eastmans to bring reinforcements.

TWIST MADE PIOGGI JUMP OUT OF THE WINDOW

At this crisis a central office detective strolled into the equation. He himself was hunting a "loft worker" of more than customary industry and had no thought of either The Bottler or Dahl. Happening, however, upon a situation whereof the striking features were Dahl outside with a gun and The Bottler inside with a gun, he so far recalled his oath of office as to interfere.

With the sure instinct of his Mulberry street caste, he of the central office opened negotiations with Dahl. He knew the latter to be the dangerous angle and began by placing the muzzle of his own pistol against that marauder's back.

"Make a move," observed the central office man, "and I'll shoot you in two."

The sophisticated Dahl, realizing fate, moved not, and with that the central office man collected his armament.

Next The Bottler was ordered to come forth. The Bottler obeyed in a sweat and a tremble. He surrendered his pistol at word of the law and the central office man led both captives off to jail. The two were charged with "disturbance." In the station house, as on the way, Dahl ceased not to threaten The Bottler's life.

"This pinch'll cost a fine of $5," said Dahl, glaring round the central office man at the shaking Bottler. "I'll pay it, an' then I'll get square wit' youse. Once we're footloose you won't last as long as a drink of whiskey!"

The judge yawningly listened, while the central office man told his tale of that "disturbance."

"Five an' costs!" quoth the judge, and called the next case. The Bottler returned to Suffolk street, Dahl sought Twist, while the central office man again took the trail of the loft worker.

Dahl talked things over with Twist. There was but one way: The Bottler must die. Anything short of blood would unsettle popular respect for Twist and without that his leadership of the Eastmans was a farce.

The Bottler's killing, however, must be managed with a decent care for the conventionalities. For either Twist or Dahl to walk in upon that offender and shoot him to death, while feasible, would be foolish.

Twist sent to Williamsburg for his friend and ally, Cyclone Louis. The latter was a bull-necked, highly muscled personage, who was a professional strong man—so far as he was professionally anything—and earned occasionally side-show money at Coney island by bending iron bars about his neck and twisting pokers into corkscrews about his brawny arms.

Louis, Twist and Dahl went into council over mutual beer and Twist explained the imperative call for The Bottler's extermination. Also, he laid bare the delicate position of both himself and Dahl.

Louis did not hesitate, but placed himself at the disposal of Twist and Dahl. The Bottler should die; he, Louis, would see to that.

"But when?"

Twist, replying, felt that the thing should be done at once, and mentioned the following evening, nine o'clock. The place would be The Bottler's establishment in Suffolk street. Louis, of whom The Bottler was unafraid and ignorant, would experience no difficulty in approaching his man. There would be others present; but, practiced in gang moralities, slaves to gang etiquette, no one would open his mouth. Or, if he did, it would be only to pour forth perjuries and say that he saw nothing, heard nothing.

THERE WAS A FLASH AND A ROAR

Having adjusted details, Louis, Twist and Dahl compared watches. Watches? Certainly. Louis, Twist and Dahl were all most fashionably attired and—as became members of a gang nobility—singularly full and accurate in the important element of a "front," videlicet, that list of personal adornments which includes scarf pin, ring and watch. Louis, Dahl and Twist saw to it that their timepieces agreed. This was so that Dahl and Twist might successfully arrange their alibis.

It was the next evening. At 8:55 o'clock Twist was obtrusively in the Delancey street police station, wrangling with the desk sergeant over the release of a follower who had carefully brought about his own arrest.

"Come," quoth Twist to the sergeant, "it's next to nine o'clock now. Fix up the bond; I've got a date over in East Broadway at nine-thirty."

While Twist stood thus enforcing his whereabouts upon the attention of the desk sergeant Dahl was eating a beefsteak in a Houston street restaurant.

"What time have you got?" demanded Dahl of the German who kept the place.

"Five minutes to nine," returned the German, glancing up at the clock.

"Oh, 'tain't no such time as that," retorted Dahl peevishly. "That clock's drunk! Call up the telephone people and find out for sure."

"The 'phone people say it's nine o'clock," reported the German, hanging up the receiver.

"Hully Gee! I didn't think it was more'n half past eight!" and Dahl looked virtuously corrected.

While these fragments of talk were taking place The Bottler was attending to his stuss interests. He looked pale and frightened and his hunted eyes roved here and there. Five minutes went by. The clock pointed to nine. A slouch-hat stranger entered. As the clock struck the hour he placed the muzzle of a pistol against The Bottler's breast and fired twice. Both bullets pierced the heart and The Bottler fell forward on his face—dead without a word. There were twenty people in the room. When the police arrived they found only the dead Bottler.

The police recalled those trade differences which had culminated in the charge of "disturbance" and arrested Dahl.

"You ain't got me right," scoffed Dahl to the police.

There came the inquest and Dahl was set free. The Bottler was buried and Twist and Dahl sent flowers and rode to the grave.

The law slept, a bat-eyed constabulary went its way, but the gangs knew.

Distinguished among the chivalry of the Five Points was an individual known as Kid Pioggi. Only a paucity of years—he was under eighteen—withheld Pioggi from topmost honors.

The winter's snow melted into spring, spring lapsed into early summer. It was a brilliant evening and Pioggi was disporting himself at Coney island. Also Twist and Louis, following some plan of relaxation, were themselves at Coney island.

Pioggi had seated himself at a beer table in the house of call of one "Ding Dong." Twist and Louis came in. Pioggi, being of the Five Points, was recognized as a foe by Twist, who lost no time in mentioning the fact.

Being in a facetious mood, and by way of expressing his contempt for that gentleman, Twist made Pioggi jump out of the window.

Louis and Twist sat down at the table in Ding Dong's from which Pioggi had been driven and demanded refreshment in the guise of wine. Pioggi, rage-swollen as to heart, busied himself at a nearby telephone. Calling up a resort on the Bowery affected by the Five Points, Pioggi got the ear of a Higher Influence of the clan. He told of his abrupt dismissal from Ding Dong's and the then presence of Louis and Twist. The Higher Influence instructed Pioggi to keep the two in sight. The very flower of the Five Points should be at Coney island as fast as cable cars could carry them.

Pioggi pitched upon one whose name and face were unknown to Twist and Louis. The unknown would be the bearer of a blind message—it purported to come from a dancer in one of the cheap theaters of the place—calculated to bring forth Twist and Louis.

"Stall 'em up this way," said Pioggi, indicating a spot within touching distance of that coupe. "It's here we'll put 'em over the jump."

Pioggi's messenger did well his work and Twist and Louis moved magnificently albeit unsteadily into the open. They were sweeping the walk clear of lesser mortals, when the voice of Pioggi arrested their attention.

"Oh, there, Twist; look here!"

The voice came from the rear and to the right; Pioggi's position was one calculated to place the enemy at a double disadvantage.

Twist turned his head. There was a flash and a roar; a bullet struck Twist above the eye. He staggered. The lead now came in a storm. Twist went down; Louis fell across him. There were twelve bullets in Twist and eight in Louis. While the crackling roar of that cannonading still alarmed the ears of men every gangster vanished. Only the dead Twist and the dead Louis remained.

Pioggi went into hiding in Greenwich, where the Five Points had a "hold-out." There were pullings and haulings and whisperings in dark political corners. When conditions had been whispered and hauled and pulled into satisfactory condition Pioggi sent word to a favorite officer to come and arrest him.

Pioggi explained to the court that his life had been threatened; he had shot only that he himself might live. His age was seventeen. Likewise there had been no public loss; the going of Twist and Louis had but raised the average of all respectability. The court pondered the business and decided that justice would be fulfilled by sentencing Pioggi to the Elmira reformatory.

REDEEMING PLEDGES

The announcement by Speaker Clark that "Democratic pledges will be kept" may mean much or little. If he means that some of them will he kept he is probably right, but if he intended to convey the meaning that all will be kept he is wrong. It would be impossible to keep all the pledges.

And it is well for the country that all the pledges made by the Speaker's party can not be kept, for some of them are exceedingly foolish and would prove harmful if kept. In fact it is probably true that the smaller numbers of their pledges that the Democrats keep, the better it will be for them and others. The Democratic congress was not chosen because of the pledges its candidates made, but rather in spite of them and the people knew that many of these pledges were not worth keeping. The change in the politics of the House membership was due to the indifference of Republicans who were discouraged because of the failure of members of their party to work harmoniously to redeem pledges favored by a large majority of the people who considered them worth redemption. The Democratic pledges of today do not differ materially from that party's pledges in other years, when the people were careful to see that Democrats had no opportunity to redeem them. The Democrats would fare better if they would do what President Taft requests them to do than in spending time trying to redeem pledges which they have made.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Very Little "Whitewash" Applied to Browning.

To the Editor of The Republican:

I have read with great interest the decision of the State Board of Education in the Browning case.

As I had read the account of the case as reported in the Democrat and scattered broadcast in this section, I was amazed when I saw the official report.

There is certainly no whitewashing and no politics in this decision. While the petition to oust the superintendent is dismissed, evidently because so few of the charges were tried out and sustained, if these aren't knock-out blows delivered to Browning on the questions of examinations and school visitation I never saw any, the State Board clearly ruling that "this duty of supervision imposed upon the superintendent is the most important work he has to perform and nothing should be permitted to interfere with its thorough consideration and efficient performance," and adjudged him guilty in this respect.

In the light of this interpretation of the school law by the State Board in reference to visiting the schools, we must pass upon all these years of Browning's administration as a failure as he seems to have averaged less than one half of the least number of legal visits required by law.

He has failed to grasp the great essentials of his honorable office and left undone the very things which the state has ordained that the Superintendent shall do and which if properly done would mean so much for our schools.

What more shall be necessary for his removal?

In the matter of an assistant, the State Board failed to realize that the taxpayers of this county for years have been paying a clerk to perform the office duties and what work has the County Superintendent in his office during the school term except to sign the checks and record the minutes of the Board meetings, provided the clerk and the commissioners perform their duties as prescribed by law?

And, Mr. Editor, can you tell me why the Democrat doen't send out another bumper edition containing this time the full text of the decision?

Wildcats in West Virginia.

The story is being told, based on observations made in Pocahontas county, W. Va., recently by Charles Wigal, a traveling man, that wild cats in that county and other counties in the section are becoming so numerous that even whole flocks of sheep have been killed recently and that the county court has offered a reward of $2 for each and every pelt that is produced by the natives. The hunters and trappers have recently caught several of the animals and have been given the promised reward. Wildcats are especially fond of mutton and of chicken. It is likely that the county court of Pocahontas, at the suggestion of the citizens, will increase the amount of the reward for the capture of the dangerous pests, which on several occasions have attacked citizens on the public highway.

THREE COUNTIES GAIN

Allegany, Garrett and Caroline to Have More Delegates.

A proclamation will be issued by Governor Crothers one day this week increasing the representation of Allegany, Garrett and Caroline counties in the House of Delegates by one additional member and reducing by one the membership of Harford and Queen Anne's counties.

The proclamation will be based upon the population given to the United States census report for Maryland, which was recently forwarded to the Governor under the official Government seal by the Department of Commerce and Labor at Washington.

This readjustment of the legislative representation is made mandatory by the State Constitution, which provides that it must be done after each census taken by the Government. The Governor has no discretion in the mattor and is compelled to issue the proclamation before the Legislature subsequent to the taking of the census.

By the provision of the Constitution Baltimore city has six representatives from each of the four legislative districts, making 24 members of the city delegation at Annapolis in the lower branch of the Legislature. The counties get their representation by population. Each county has two representatives regardless of how small its population might be. Those having 18,000 or over get 3; over 28,000 get 4; over 55,000 get 5, and 6 is the maximum.

The following are the reports of population as given in the official returns:

Allegany	62,111	Harford	27,965
Anne Arundel	29,655	Howard	16,166
Baltimore	132,849	Kent	16,957
Baltimore city	558,485	Montgomery	32,089
Calvert	10,324	Prince George's	37,147
Caroline	19,216	Queen Anne's	16,859
Carrol	33,934	St. Mary's	17,039
Cecil	21,759	Somerset	20,455
Charles	16,356	Talbot	16,020
Dorchester	28,663	Washington	49,617
Frederick	52,673	Wicomico	26,815
Garrett	20,106	Worcester	21,841

The counties are subject to change if they show increased population. While many of them did so, there were only three which increased to the point of gaining an additional member. These were Allegany, Garrett and Caroline. Allegany passed the 55,000 mark and will now have six members of the House of Delegates instead of five, Garrett passed the 18,000 mark and will have three instead of two and Caroline will also have three instead of two.

Harford county formerly had four representetives but dropped below the 28,000 mark, where it was previously, and its representation is cut from four to three while Queen Anne's dropped below 18,000 and will now have only two instead of three. In the case of Harford county the Representative was lost by only 35. The figures showed 27,965, while it requires 28,000 to retain its four members.

The State gains only one new legislator by the deal, and no adjustment of lines in the counties are necessary. In all the counties the legislators are elected at large from all parts of the county, and there will be no difficulties in making the changes, the counties either voting on more or fewer men.

The Governor, in discussing the situation said:

"The proclamation will be issued in accord with the State Constitution, which provides for a realignment, and, while I am extremely sorry in the case of the two counties which lose a legislator, it is a duty which I must perform as the law has been laid down. On the whole, our counties have shown an encouraging increase."

THE DEATH RECORD.

E. T. FLEMING.

E. T. Fleming, the son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Haulenbeek of Deer Park, died April 8th at Roselle Park, New Jersey, of brights disease. He brought his family from California last summer, having accepted a position as manager for the Austrian-American Apple Growers association, with headquarters in New York. Mr. Fleming went to London to look over the situation before commencing the shipment of fruit, and was thus in possession of information from personal knowledge touching the character of fruit dealers to whom he might make consignments. The business thrived and Mr. Fleming was much elated over his success. He secured a home on the line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and Mrs. Fleming and the three little children left Deer Park, where they had spent the summer and joined Mr. Fleming in the new home. Illness overtook him, and yet he continued at his post, declining to give up until absolutely unable to make the daily trip into New York and back in the evening.

The funeral services were held on Monday last, all of the family being present save Mrs. Fleming's mother, who by reason of being an invalid was unable to make the journey from Deer Park.

PAULINE NINE.

Last Wednesday, April 5th, Pauline Nine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Nine, of Dodson, was called by death's grim messenger. Her death resulted from diphtheria, with which she had suffered two weeks. Pauline was only nine years and eleven days old, but yet so young it seem strange to us that God, in His wise Providence, has taken from us our precious jewel, yet we know it is for our good and fail to realize these dispensations of providence. She leaves to mourn a father and mother, two sisters and two brothers and a host of friends. The interment was made in the Rose Hill cemetery at North Glade on Thursday.

A FRIEND.

Pronounced Insane.

One of the prisoners held in jail here for complicity in the robbery of the Hinskey tailor shop, which occurred shortly after the grand jury adjourned at the December Term of the Circuit Court, was pronounced insane by Drs. Hinebaugh, of Oakland, and Laughlin, of Deer Park, who were directed by the authorities to conduct the examintion after the queer actions of the man had been made known by the Sheriff. When arrested the man gave his name as Ferguson, but it has since transpired that this is not his true name. The man refuses to eat and will not talk to any of the other prisoners confined in the jail. His condition is such that he cannot receive the proper medical treatment and care at the local jail and as soon as the necessary papers can be arrange the man will be taken to the State institution for the insane.

BITTINGER.

Prof. J. C. Beahm opened a private school at this place last Monday morning with a fair enrollment and a prospect of a considerable increase later.

Amos Linderman, of Meyersdale, Pa., is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Albert Brenneman here this week.

Mr. Feik, of Accident, was visiting friends here recently and enjoying some of the maple sweets produced in our local camps.

Dr. R. Bowen of Grantsville, was called to this village last Sunday morning by the illness of a child in the home of Oliver Beachy.

Mrs. Codam, of Connellsville, who, with her daughter is lodging at the home of Mrs. C. C. Beachy, is reported to be seriously ill and at this time is under the care of a physician and a professional nurse.

Jacob Fresh, of New Germany, purchased a horse from Merchant O. C. Buckel of this village, last Monday afternoon.

Cyrus Stark, of McHenry, was a business caller here last Friday.

It is reported that Simon Beachy has purchased the old Ralston home, in this village, of George Yommer. We will be glad to welcome Mr. Beachy in our midst, but at the same time sorry to lose Mr. Yommer.

Jacob Brenneman unloaded and distributed two carloads of fertilizer among his customers at this place last week.

Miss Huldah Wiley, of this place, but who has been employed in Meyersdale, Pa., for some time past, was taken to a hospital in Pittsburg last week where she will be treated for appendicitis.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Spring seems to be here and the prospects are for a good fruit year.

George F. Frazee was running his automobile around town on Monday.

Miss Irene Wetstone is recovering from an attack of typhoid fever.

One of Pheneous Miller's children has taken the fever. We trust he may soon recover.

Miss Maria McCollough returned home from college on Saturday last.

John Holman returned to spend his Easter holidays at home with his parents. He will return to College the following Monday.

Rev. O. Dean arrived here on Saturday. He has accepted the charge as Lutheran minister and preached on Sunday evening. There will be communion services on Easter Sunday evening.

Services were held in the Christian church last Sunday morning. Rev. Browell resigned as pastor, we are informed.

William Dunham has moved into the Schlossnagel property on First avenue, next to the First National Bank.

John W. McCollough returned home last week.

George D. Browning has been spending some days in town. The last two named gentlemen, with Walter W. Savage, comprise the new lumber company that have bought large tracts of land on the right fork of Bear Creek near the proposed new road. They have held several meetings and work will be pushed right away. We hear they have purchased the saw mill of the Johnstown Planing Mill Co., in town and will shortly fix it up in number one fashion.

We hear that several persons around Cove, Md., are making fun of the proposed new road to Accident. We would say those that laugh last laugh best, and just as sure as anything can be, we are going to have that road.

The proposed canning factory seems to be rather quiet this week. The farming community has not been heard from yet, but just the same it is a sure thing. If the people here don't want to take hold of it there are outsiders ready for the chance to come in and build it up.

Lloyd Umble left Monday for Cumberland where he will represent the local lodge Knights of Pythias. This lodge is increasing its membership right along.

Among others visiting our city last week, we must not forget Mr. C. Horter, who was formerly manager here of the Lock Haven Co. His many friends were glad to shake his hand once more.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Read left last week for Belington, W. Va., where Mr. Read has an engagement with a lumber company.

If Christianity would travel from one to the other as fast as evil speaking, what a happy world this would be.

John Friend has rented the house owned and lately occupied by Mrs. Read.

Mrs. Charles Frederick, who was sick, is greatly improved.

We hear the Milling Co., are curtailing expenses. They will work less hands and are going to sell their big horse.

The following persons registered at the Crawford Hotel last week: C. C. Beachy, Accident, Md; H. C. Peddicord, Gary, Md.; H. G. Maugans, Hagerstown; W. D. Claycomb, Johnstown, Pa.; J. G. Mealy, Baltimore, Md.; J. C. S. Love, Pittsburg, Pa.; A. N. Lingamfiller, Cumberland; R. C. Turney, Accident; M. H. Fike, Pittsburg; C. S. Norter, Lock Haven; N. Long and J. E. Emmerick, Meyersdale; G. F. Ault, Accident; R. J. Horton, Ohio Pyle; L. E. Holord, Mishawake, Ind.; Y. A. Fike, Oakland; A. F. Zimmerman, Ursina; J. C. Kendall, Kendall; J. C. Turner, Oakland; C. D. Guthrie, Hazelton.

Mr. Roy Litzinger with his sister and cousin Miss Blanche Speicher, of Indiana county, Pa., are the guests of J. W. McCollough and family at present.

Mr. John Lee Harne, formerly of Oakland, who has been engaged in the banking business in numerous towns of West Virginia for a number of years, his last position being with the Fidelity Banking and Trust Company at Bluefield, has severed his connection with that concern and will hereafter be connected with the Dollar Savings Bank at Bluefield, a charter for which was granted last week. Of Mr. Harne the Bluefield Telegram in a recent issue said: "Mr. Harne is a practical banker, having been in the business for eighteen years, and he is highly regarded in banking circles."

A serious wreck occurred in Kingwood tunnel at Tunnelton on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad Sunday afternoon. A train was taking three of the new 16-wheel Mallet engines west, and at a point about 125 feet east of the portal of the tunnel a rail turned or a big engine working stiff left the track. It was dragged all the way through the tunnel before the accident was discovered, and the single track was so badly torn and twisted that traffic was delayed on the main line about 12 hours.

Deputy Sheriff Clyde Shartzer left Oakland Tuesday morning having in charge Mike Bell, the Austrian convicted and sentenced by Justice Teats to serve a term of eight months in the House of Correction for selling liquor unlawfully at Stricker's Siding, a point on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. A bold hold-up is reported from Garrett county on Saturday night. Our informant states that while Oscar Broadwater was returning from Charley Frost's home at Wolf Swamp he was held up and robbed near Swanger's dam by a lone highwayman. He was relieved of eight hundred dollars in cash and several drafts. Oscar claims to have been struck on the head with some blunt instrument and knocked unconscious. He was found later by Dr. Frost in a serious condition and conveyed to his home on Red Hill. A reward of five hundred dollars is offered for the arrest of the highwaymen.—Lonaconing Cor. Cumb. News.

The sale of the personal property at the farm of the late John T. Bowers, which was conducted last Thursday by Mr. Edward E. Sollars, the executor under the will of the decadent, was largely attended by interested buyers. The property generally brought good prices. The farm was offered and withdrawn by the executor after a bid of $10,600 had been made for it. Since the sale a number of offers have been made Mr. Sollars for the purchase of the farm and it is more than probable that it will be sold at private sale within a few days.

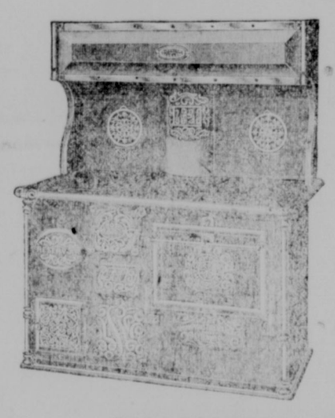
THIS HIGH GRADE STEEL RANGE COSTS YOU NOTHING



as compared with any other range of any make whatsoever, that you might buy.

¶ Any other range; any range you ever saw takes its draft through the front end, next to the fire and right underneath the grate.

¶ This air is about 50 to 70 degrees in temperature. The range must burn enough coal to bring the temperature up to 700 degrees, or baking heat

¶ Notice that-ordinary ranges have to burn enough coal to raise the air from 70 to 700 or 630 degrees.

CHAMPION RANGES

take the draft in at the opposite end, pass it under the bottom before it goes under the grate, and the air picks up enough from the waste heat under the bottom to reach about 250 degrees.

¶ The fire has to burn only enough coal to raise it from 250 to 700—450 degrees, as against 630 in ordinary ranges.

¶ CHAMPION RANGES save about 1-3 in fuel, every day they are used. This will pay the full cost of ther ange in 3 to 5 years, making it cheaper to you than any other.

¶ No experiment; been made and used for 18 years by thousands. Patented; can only be had from our agents. Guaranteed as represented or money back.

G. A. SHIRER & CO.

For Early Spring

THE two small hats shown here are designed on novel frames, made of shirring wire. The frames are covered with mull first and then with a light silk fibre braid in a fancy weave. The braid is sewed to the shapes, beginning at the top of the crown, in the simplest manner. As the crowns and brims are separate, they are covered separately, the crowns set on and sewed to place after both are covered with braid.

In Fig. 1 the braid is sewed row after row with silk thread matching it in color. It is sewed to both upper and under brim following the lines of the wire frame. This is one of the few shapes which can be successfully covered by the home milliner. As a rule, hats are difficult this spring and require the knowledge of the professional milliner to make them successfully. As the braid is very light in weight, a heavier braid requires that the facing be of another material, such as chiffon or light weight silk or ribbon, which should, to get the best effect, be shirred on.

Fig. 2 shows strips of ribbon and braid alternated about the brim. The ribbon is a light weight, satin surface, in the same color as the braid. Short lengths are shirred over the upper and under brim, alternating with strips of the braid sewed row on row together. A length of ribbon, and a length of braid consisting of three rows sewed together in a strip a yard long is used as a drape about the hat. A big rosette made of loops of ribbon at the side, toward the back, finishes a smart and practical hat for general wear.

In Fig. 1 a band of velvet ribbon or of crushed silk is draped in a sash over the place where the crown sets on the brim. This shape admits of quite a variety of finishes. For youthful wearers the single long jaunty quill has a lot of dash and go. It is the best solution for the simplest and smartest effects, but not appropriate for any one except young wearers. A tuft of upstanding plumes or fancy feathers for older women, or loops of lace or ribbon, or any of the mountains of flowers which form a complete trimming ready to adjust, will help out the home milliner in making her Easter headwear.

WIDE CHOICE OF MATERIAL

Many Charming Textures in Which This Costume for Spring Would Be Effective.

There are many charming materials among those prepared for spring dresses that would make up successfully in this style.

The skirt is slightly full at the waist and is trimmed effectively at the lower part by silk strapping and scallops formed of silk, which gives the effect of an added and wrapped-over lower part; a silk-covered button is sewn in each scallop.

The bolero is cut like a Magyar blouse, and is trimmed to match the skirt. The underslip is of crepe-de-chine, tucked for the under-sleeves.

Hat of fine straw trimmed with a handsome ostrich feather.

Materials required for the dress: 5 yards 46 inches wide, 2 yards silk 22 inches wide.

The Overdressed Woman.

By the way, Parisians are now declaring that the conservative woman is the only really well-dressed woman; that those who rush to the front with the latest eccentricity of hat, or coat, or skirt, in order to attract attention, are not only not smart in its fashionable acceptation, but over and objectionably smart. They have invented a term, a contemptuous one, too, by which to express their disapproval. Unfortunately, the term itself is objectionable to English ears, and loses its point entirely in translation.—Harper's Bazar.

Stitching.

When sewing on the sewing machine, if the thread breaks easily, soak spool and all in water for about two minutes. This rule applies to any quality of thread.

NEW STYLES IN LINGERIE

Underwear Takes on More Attractions Than Usual in Offerings for This Season.

In the struggle for life this season, for at some time the lingerie has been reduced to a minimum, underwear has taken on more attractions than usual. The well-fitted models, the exquisite embroidery and the fine materials of which lingerie is now made are convincing to the woman who is searching for bargains.

For brides especially has the new lingerie decided attractions. The fine muslins without stiffening are as varied as the morning hours are from the evening. They should be kept so, too, which point is worth remembering. They are most durable when lace is absent. In other words, if you are planning a sensible outfit to last more than one year, use embroidery. Even the finest swiss and batiste embroidery outlasts lace. It can be used a second time in many cases.

Flounces should not be too full for the spring and summer. The straight skirt is slightly fuller, but does not flare. Its straight lines must not be interfered with by any underflounce.

Corset covers of allover embroidery or wide flouncing are very sensible for the dressy kind. They should be cut with little fullness at the waist, for the same reason that bulk has been eliminated from the petticoat. The fitted corset cover with the circular peplum is the most satisfactory.

Nightgowns made on empire lines are probably moving toward first place. The short upper portion is gathered into a straight band of embroidery or beading. Flowing or puffed sleeves are quite short.

As usual, the handmade lingerie has a value not to be gainsaid. The French importations will always be favored by the woman with money to indulge her longings.

The extremely plain lingerie with tape drawing strings and a plain scalloped edge is the kind that should appeal to practical minds. They combine daintiness with excellent wearing qualities, and they are inexpensive.

Demand a good-fitting model and a high quality of material, and your lingerie will always be in good style.

A Novel Relish.

Guests at an informal luncheon were at first puzzled by a dainty-looking relish brought on with the meat. Not until tasted was the secret revealed, when they discovered that the crisp, brown little tubes, about two inches in length, were of celery. Large, firm stalks were chosen, and after being cut were dipped in egg and cracker crumbs, fried in deep fat or sauteed in butter, and were served with a brown sauce. In the original instance this vegetable was served with fowl. It is also nice with fish creamed in the chafing dish, with oysters, etc.

The Spring Blouses.

With the influx of new waists of sheer cotton material, the veiled blouse has not been forgotten. These, in simple lines, are made to have a new air and a suggestion of warmer days by a relieving touch of embroidered batiste or linen used in place of laces.

A yoke and cuffs, with an insertion in the front and back, give a springlike air. The lovely new bordered chiffon, marquisettes and crepes are also pressed into blouse service with excellent results.

The KITCHEN CABINET

BEAUTY without virtue is like a flower without fragrance.

Labor conquers everything.

Cocktails.

The cocktail is a very popular beginning to a dinner, the object of which is to stimulate the appetite for the heavier dishes which are to follow. The gustatory nerves are very sensitive, and if abused by too highly-seasoned foods, lose the power to appreciate the more delicate and flower-like flavors which it should be our pleasure to enjoy.

Mint and Lemon Cocktail.—To one quart of strong lemonade, made with four lemons, add one cup of tea infusion, a few sprigs of fresh mint and a sprinkling of red pepper. Sweeten to taste, pour over crushed ice and serve with a lemon curl on top of the glass.

Clam Cocktail.—For every cocktail required, take one teaspoonful of lemon juice, one teaspoonful of vinegar, a quarter of a teaspoonful of walnut sauce, one-half a teaspoonful of mushroom catsup, a pinch of salt, and a dash of tabasco sauce. Pour this mixture over eight little neck clams and serve in a well-chilled glass. This cocktail is favored for luncheon and suppers.

Pineapple Cocktail.—For each glass take a tablespoonful of pine apple and lemon or orange juice and one-half of a tablespoon of grated orange peel. Sweeten to taste. Pour over a little chipped ice in the bottom of the glass and add a little iced water.

Lemon Cocktail in Lemon Cups.—Prepare as many lemons as there are guests to be served by cutting off the round end until they will stand firmly, and then cutting off the pointed end about a quarter of the way down. Empty the lemons and scrape well. Make a strong lemonade, and add an equal quantity of grape juice. Chill and fill the cups with the mixture. Place the lemon cups on a paper doily on a small plate.

Sauces for Oyster Cocktails—One teaspoonful each of horseradish and tomato catsup, salt, pepper and tabasco to taste and two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Mix well, chill and serve on oysters.

Catsup, horseradish, walnut and mushroom catsup with lemon juice makes a sauce well liked.

THE child who grows up with no memory of a kitchen in which it was privileged to "play cook" has lost part of the joy of life."

Little Housekeepers.

The mother who will not be bothered with a child "messing around in the kitchen," as she may call it, has only herself to thank when the child, a young woman, refuses to interest herself in cooking and household affairs. It is natural for a little girl to want to make things, and when cooking is being done to want to share in the work. Of course, the cook or mother may not want to be bothered, but when she remembers that a child well started and interested in work will make a difference in her whole life, she surely would not call it bother.

Let them have their own small utensils, use them and keep them in order. They will learn many more valuable lessons besides the knowledge they gain in cookery.

Household Hints.

Keep small cloths for wiping meat and washing fish. These may be burned after using, and thus save the laundering of them. Many careful housewives have these rags hemmed and marked, and so kept for its especial purpose, but time is more valuable to most women, and rags are usually plentiful.

To remove mildew, soak the article in a weak solution of chloride of lime for several hours. Rinse in cold water.

When grating a new nutmeg begin at the opposite end from the stalk, as it will prove hollow.

To remove the odor of onion from the breath, eat a banana.

The odor of fish or onion on the hands may be removed by a little hot vinegar.

Dishes may be cleansed with vinegar after using them for fish.

A few drops of onion juice and a garnish of a few pieces of lemon adds to beefsteak.

When roasting spareribs baste them with sweet cider.

The colder eggs are the more quickly they will beat up.

Mustard in England.

Mustard is grown in England to a considerable extent in the eastern countries and the Fen district and to some extent in the Midlands. It is ordinarily grown in heavy black soil, but it is generally believed that the crop draws a great deal of strength from the soil. For that reason it is not especially popular. The yield an acre is variable, ranging from twenty to thirty bushels, but twenty bushels is usually considered a fair yield. The seed rate is usually about three to four pounds an acre when drilled in rows from ten to twelve inches apart.

Keep Watch on the Tuberculosis.

The Italian government, on account of the number of tuberculosis cases among the Italian emigrants sent back from America, has appointed boards of examiners in the seaports, whose duty it is to report the arrival of tuberculous persons. These are then kept under observation in those places where they settle, to prevent further spread of the disease. The erection of new sanitoria and other tuberculosis institutions is being urged in Italy, and the number of beds for consumptives has been considerably increased in different places.

Parental Tactics.

A worried parent is sometimes obliged to do something like this:

"Pa, what is a transcendentalist?"

"Have you chained up the dog as I told you?"

"Not yet, pa."

"Well, do that, and when you come back I will tell you what a transcendentalist is."

While Bobby was gone his astute parent dug the needed information out of a dictionary.

It Depends on the Liver.

"Is life worth living?—that depends upon the liver." Yes, and that again depends upon what you eat, and how you eat.

Henry Ward Beecher once said: "A man with a bad liver cannot be a good Christian." Henry made some mistakes, but in this statement he was eminently correct. It is only another version of a phrase frequently used by the editor of the Care of the Body: "As a man eateth so is he."—Los Angeles Times.

The Question of Personality

By REV. HUGH T. KERR
Pastor Fullerton Ave. Presbyterian Church, Chicago

TEXT—Where art thou?—Genesis 3:9.

This question whispered by God into the heart of man is the first and the last question of life. After we have traced the working of God's hand in creation and beheld the fashioning of sun and moon and stars and seen the furnishing of the earth with cattle and every creeping thing and beheld Eden blossoming with love until sin's sting shriveled innocence as in a fire, then God speaks out of the silence of his own omnipotence and demands an answer from the man into whom he has breathed the breath of a divine life: "Where art thou?"

It lifts man out from the rest of God's creation. Not of the heaven or the earth of the sea or the air does he ask this question. Not of the birds or beasts of the field. They are part and parcel of a great dumb creation that works the will of him who ordered their coming and determines their going.

Not so with man. He stands as sentinel. Into his hands dominion is given. He is not part of the great creation procession. He is the master, the arbiter, the spectator. It is the first question asked in the beginning of worlds. It will be the last question asked when the worlds are rolled up as a scroll and all things pass away. Then, too, the question will be heard: "Where art thou?"

How diverse and different have been the answers. We have heard many stories. Even the Bible tells us two stories. On the one hand, we are told that he stands where the shadows come and go. He is as a vapor, a dream, a sleep, a story, a tale that is told, water spilled upon the ground, a thread of the weaver that is cut, a flower that faded, grass that withereth, a shepherd's tent that is removed. Then, too, we are told that he is clothed in light and immortality as with a garment and crowned with glory and honor.

"Here lies a man whose name was writ in water," so runs the epitaph on the stone of one whose name is still remembered. What is man? What is personality? Physicians tell us that the body changes every seven years. Once we were children, now we are men and women, yet we believe we are the same now that we were then, with all the changes akin to the death of the physical.

There have been two of us, perhaps more. One of the past, one of the present and still one of the men that is to be. Which is the real Paul, the one that breathed out slaughter or the one that worshiped at Christ's feet? Which is the true Judas, the one that listened to the call of Jesus or the one that betrayed him with a kiss? You remember how Oliver Wendell Holmes pictures three men in each man—the man that one thinks he is, the man his friends think him to be and the man whom God sees, the real man.

Yet through it all there is one continuing personality. The Adam of Eden is linked with the Adam without the gate. It belongs to the realm of the soul, the mind, the memory. "Son remember," is the verdict of heaven and the doom of hell. John Quincy Adams at the extreme limit of old age when asked about his health replied: "Thank you, John Quincy Adams is quite well. But the house in which he lives is dilapidated. It is tottering. Times and seasons have made their mark upon it. It is well nigh worn out. Some day soon I shall move out. But John Quincy Adams is quite well, sir, I thank you."

God's voice is ever calling to the consciences of men. He is ever searching to discover the best that is in man and to reawaken the hope that has been buried. A good painter depicts the best. A friend viewing a portrait of his friend by Sargent said it looked like the portrait of a dissipated man. The man said yes, and that's what I have in me which I have always baffled and fought and conquered. Said his friend, "It is that better man, the victor, the conqueror, that the painter should have painted."

Yes, and God always calls us to our best and sees far off the man who ought to be. In Simon he sees Peter. In Saul he sees Paul. In Jacob he sees the wrestling prince with God. God is not a cynic hunting like Diogenes for the doubtful discovery of a man. God is like the shepherd who knows the sheep are lost. He is like the father who knows the son is better than he pretends. He is like the loser of the coin who knows its value and has faith in its recovery.

So with the Lord he takes and he refuses,
Finds him ambassadors whom men deny,
Wise men nor mighty for his saints he chooses,
No, such as John or Gideon or I.

It is bad business to try to hide from God. Personality receives its true perfection only in God. He is the atmosphere in which life flourishes and abides. He is the light in which the flower of a right life blooms. He is the country in which the true fruit of faith comes to a beautiful maturity. We are all in his great garden. He still walks its path and calls for its beauty.

Why should we hide? To see his smile means heaven for us. To miss him is to miss the best.

There is only one safe hiding place, and that is the Rock of Ages, the lover of the souls of men. "In him is life and the life is the light of men."

TEMPERANCE NOTES

DRINKING HABIT IN FRANCE

Number of Cabarets Grown Excessively and in Some Districts Alcoholism Is Menace.

The French Senate is now engaged in discussing a measure which will be instrumental in lessening the danger of the republic becoming a drunken nation, says a Paris correspondent. Since the passing of the law of 1880 the number of carbarets had grown excessive, and in some districts alcoholism had reached a danger state. Statistics show that 30 years ago there were more than 300,000 carbarets in Paris and the provinces; the figure is now close on 500,000, with an average of one per eighty inhabitants, or one for thirty grownup men. And it is not the workmen alone who consumes alcohol, but also his wife and children. The figures further show that the divisions in which alcoholism is most prevalent furnish the greatest number of young men who cannot be admitted to service with the colors or who have to be sent home pending their return after awhile for another medical examination.

That French statesmen are conscious of the national menace of alcohol is revealed by the debate in the senate. Said M. Briand:

"The present situation is terrible. This is a question of national interest; the life of the nation is at stake." He went on to say that he agreed with the words of M. Julien Goujon, a previous speaker, that "the nation has a duty of legitimate defense, which its representatives must undertake on its behalf," and the government must accordingly take the responsibility of action. It remained to be seen whether the proposal now brought forward would prove as effective as was hoped, but if it had any prospect of doing good parliament ought to vote for it.

The government would be incurring a grave responsibility if it did not associate itself with this proposal. The government indeed earnestly desired that the senate should pass to the discussion of the clauses of the bill, and it had decided to accept and support all measures which were calculated to safeguard the country from the perils of alcoholism, to enforce the law against drunkenness and to protect all societies which promoted the anti-alcohol propaganda.

In the general discussion the views of those who opposed the bill were expressed by M. Berard, who declared that it would tend to create a new monopoly in favor of the establishments already in existence. M. Goujon, on the other hand, maintained that the "liberty of industry and commerce" invoked by the opponents of the measure was not absolute, and must be subordinated to the interests of the nation.

ALCOHOL AN AID TO CANCER

English Scientist Makes Some Striking Statements on Influence of Drink to Disease.

Sir Alfred Pearce Gould, senior surgeon of the Middlesex hospital in England, recently delivered before the Royal College of Surgeons of England the twenty-ninth annual Bradshaw lecture, the subject being "Cancer," and made striking statements as to the influence of alcohol in this dread disease.

In the course of the lecture the great scientist said that the influence of alcohol on the incidence of cancer was very important. It was a factor in producing cancer by directly or indirectly causing chronic irritation. It was a protoplasmic poison, which directly interfered with, and mars all cell life. Statistics showed that the disease was twice as frequent among brewers and publicans as among clergymen, and that the cancer incidence in any trade varied with the attendant habits as regarded alcohol.

With regard to these various conditions, Sir Alfred expressed the opinion that clinical experience and experimental pathology threw some ray of hope across the dark sea of malignant disease. The deep impress of the primal laws of development held the cells of tissue in true and loyal obedience to the very end in the almost infinite majority of cases, and made them more liable to cancer. Like age, chronic irritation and prolonged use of X-rays, alcohol wore out the cells of a part and deteriorated the evolution of the individual cell. The lecturer stated that 10 per cent. of all people contract cancer.

What Alcohol Does.

In the Comptes Rendu de la Societe de Biologie, Messrs. Glehaut and Quinquand publish a series of interesting experiments showing the effect of alcohol on the working power of muscle. The experiments were upon dogs, the details of which are given, showing that as the dogs came more and more under the influence of alcohol the muscular power diminished notably, "sinking in one instance from 1,221 to 921 grammes, and in another from 1,021 to 721 grammes." The Quarterly Journal of Inebriety, by way of comment says: "These experiments made direct on muscle confirm the results of observations on miners and soldiers,—that when an extra amount of work was to be done, coffee, and not alcohol, was the stimulant to administer."

Mrs. Joskins—Um. Must have kept late hours, then!

DISFIGURED WITH ECZEMA

"Our little boy Gilbert was troubled with eczema when but a few weeks old. His little face was covered with sores even to back of his ears. The poor little fellow suffered very much. The sores began as pimples, his little face was disfigured very much. We hardly knew what he looked like. The face looked like raw meat. We tied little bags of cloth over his hands to prevent him from scratching. He was very restless at night, his little face itched.

"We consulted two doctors at Chicago, where we resided at that time. After trying all the medicine of the two doctors without any result, we read of the Cuticura Remedies, and at once bought the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Following the directions carefully and promptly we saw the result, and after four weeks the dear child's face was as fine and clean as any little baby's face. Every one who saw Gilbert after using the Cuticura Remedies was surprised. He has a head of hair which is a pride for any boy of his age, three years. We can only recommend the Cuticura Remedies to everybody." (Signed) Mrs. H. Albrecht, Box 883, West Point, Neb., Oct. 26, 1910.

WHEN IT REALLY WAS WARM

Incident Related by Mr. Bings Put an End to the Hot Weather. Stories.

"Hot in Brazil!" said the young man who had just returned from a trip to South America, according to the Chicago Daily News. "Well, I should say so. Do you know, for days at a time we couldn't take our after dinner siesta on account of the peculiar noises." "What noises?" asked the blonde stenographer, innocently. "Why, the coffee popping on the trees. You see, the sun was so hot the grains just roasted before they were picked." The old traveler yawned. "Rather warm down there, bub," he rejoined, laconically, "but when I was down there you couldn't sleep at night. Every once in a while there would sound the most extraordinary crackling noise that ever fell upon the human ear." "What were the sounds, Mr. Bings?" And Mr. Bings yawned again and replied: "The rubber trees stretching themselves."

A Fair Return.

Minister (arousing himself in barber's chair)—All through yet.

Barber—Aye, lang syne.

Minister—Then I must have been indulging in a quiet nap?

Barber—Ye wis that, sir.

Barber—Hoots, man, haud yer tongue; it's only a fair return. I slept all through your sermon last Sawbath.—London Tit-Bits.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Colds and Chills Bring Kidney Ills

February, March and April are the backache months, because they are months of colds, chills, grip and pneumonia, with their congesting, weakening influence on the kidneys. Colds, chills, or grip strain the kidneys and start backache, urinary disorders and uric acid troubles. You feel lame, weak and tired and have headache, dizzy feelings, achy muscles and joints; too frequent, painful urinary passages, sediment, etc. Chills hurt the kidneys. Likewise well kidneys often prevent taking cold, by helping to pass off the waste matters of cold congestion. Doan's Kidney Pills are very useful in the raw winter and spring months. They stop backache and urinary disorders, keep the kidneys well and prevent colds from settling on the kidneys. Strong testimony proves it. What better evidence could you ask?

TERRIBLE CASE OF DROPSY.

Lebanon, Ind., Man Gives Vivid Description of His Suffering.

John T. Anderson, 613 W. Main St., Lebanon, Ind., says: "I was taken suddenly with agonizing pains through my kidneys, followed by a stoppage of the urine. I called in a physician, but he gave me only temporary relief, by drawing the urine with a catheter. I was soon in such agony I could not lie in bed, and for four weeks sat in a chair, propped up by pillows. After about a month, it seemed as if something burst and I passed a regular flood of water, mixed with blood and mucus. After that I had not a particle of control over the secretions. The doctor said he could do no more for me, and everyone thought I would die. My friends marvel at my recovery. Nine boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life and made a permanent cure. I gained 28 pounds and have had no trouble since."

TEN YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Restored at Last to Perfect Health by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Narcissa Waggoner, Carterville, Ill., R. F. D. No. 2, says: "For over ten years I suffered terribly with backaches, headaches, nervous and dizzy spells. I was restless at night and in the morning arose so tired as to be almost unable to do my housework. The kidney secretions were unnatural and gave me a great deal of trouble. One day I suddenly fell to the floor where I lay for a long time unconscious. Three doctors who treated me diagnosed my case as paralysis and said they could do nothing for me. As a last resort I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was permanently cured. I am stronger than before in many years and my kidneys are in perfect condition."

CRELLIN.

Not seeing any items from our thriving little town I will send in a few.

The Kendall Lumber Company is doing a thriving business and are running full blast and have quite a number of men employed.

Mr. Nelson Clark was a visitor to Oakland last Friday.

Mr. W. L. Loomis spent last week in Oakland organizing a camp of the Woodmen of the World.

Mrs. L. Loomis and son Arthur visited Mr. amd Mrs. W. L. Loomis at this place for several days on their way to their new home near Baltimore.

Mrs. Milton Hann was visiting relatives in Clarksburg, W. Va., part of last week.

Mrs. Nelson Clark, who went to the Western Maryland Hospital at Cumberland to undergo a serious operation, has returned home greatly improved. Dr. N. I. Broadwater, of Oakland, accompanied her to that institution.

The stork visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russel Durst and left a little daughter; and also the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Reams leaving a daughter.

The little child of Geary Black is seriously ill with whopping cough and pneumonia.

Whooping cough and chickenpox have not slighted any one here in the past few months.

Mr. Frank Blake is on the sick list. His many friends hope for a speedy recovery.

Mr. E. M. Spedden was in Oakland last Saturday on business.

It is rumored we are to have a wedding in our little town soon.

We all hope the winter is over and the beautiful spring months will waken every thing up from its winter slumber. Snow and rain have been frequent.

GRANTSVILLE.

A modern meat market is to be opened in this town on May 1st. Mr. Wm. Winterberg expects to convert his building on the corner opposite the First National Bank into a market house. A good meat market has been needed in Grantsville and we presage success for the man or firm who launches in the business.

Last Friday night Mr. Jacob Folk, a prominent farmer and lumberman, lost his most valuable horse, death being caused by an affection of the pleura, a disease which has been pronounced contagious and which has but recently made its appearance in this locality. This is the second horse Mr. Folk has lost in the last six months, the one which previously died having been valued at $300.00.

D. J. Stevanus was in Elk Lick last week and purchased a horse from his brother Bert.

Mr. O. Blocher is erecting a stable on his property which he purchased from Mr. J. L. Augustine last fall.

The newly elected Council organized on Monday evening. Wm. Winterberg was elected president, and T. H. Bitninger clerk.

For several years a number of property owners have been improving their properties in this village by laying brick and concrete sidewalks. We trust these improvements will continue during the coming summer, at least until all the really dangerous places are eliminated. Some of our plank walks are a menace to the public safety and the earlier we realize this fact and insist upon proper repairs the better will it be for all concerned.

Mr. David Keim, of Springs, Pa., was noticed in Grantsville on Friday.

Mr. Olin Broadwater, of this place, who is a student at St. John's College, Annapolis, Md., is home for the Easter holidays.

Miss Lizzie Orendorf has been quite ill at the home of her sister, Mrs. Earl Stanton.

Mr. John Johnson is here visiting friends and relatives.

Miss Blanche Miller, who has been teaching in the public schools at Hutton, Md., returned home last week.

The stork has been very busy the past week. Surely T. R. will offer no criticism concerning this community.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Swauger, a daughter; to Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Miller, a daughter; to Mr. and Mrs. Joel Kinsinger, a son; to Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Rodamer, of Springs, a son; to Mr. and Mrs. John Hutzel, a daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bill will leave today—Tuesday—on an extended western tour, with Benton Harbor, Mich., as the first stop; thence they go to Racine, Wis., where Mr. Bill was for upward twenty years prominently identified in business circles. After visiting friends and business associates in Racine for an indefinite time Mr. and Mrs. Bill purpose journeying to the western coast ere returning home.

SWALLOW FALLS.

Mr. Newton A. Reams, who has been cutting timber on contract for the Kendall Lumber Company near here, has completed the work and will move the mill to another tract owned by the same corporation which is located near Cranesville, West Va. About 300,000 feet of timber is standing on the new tract and Mr. Reams expects to have his mill at work there within two weeks.

Mr. Walter Lewis was at W. L. DeWitt's Sunday.

Mr. Robert DeWitt spent Sunday at Bray.

Mr. Alvin Sines, who is a violinist of no mean merit, spent Sunday evening with one of his neighbors where he furnished some excellent music.

Purchased Livery.

Mr. Blaine Giessman has purchased the horses, carriages, etc., contained in the DeWitt & Delawder stable, and will continue the business of the above named firm at the old stand.

Need Plenty of Land for this Growing Family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scott of Highland, Kan., are seeking a home in Oklahoma with plenty of land.

They will need it, for although they have been married not quite ten years they are the parents of nineteen children, all boys, and thirteen of them living. They hold the record for triplets, having five sets to their credit, and two sets of twins. All of the thirteen boys living are under five years.

Recently the Scotts decided that they must have more land and went to Alberta, Canada. They were not satisfied there and returned.

On the return trip Mrs. Scott and her thirteen children all rode on one first class ticket. At Omaha the conductor made a vigorous protest.

"Madam, you cannot carry a whole Sunday school along with you on that one ticket," he said, "and you need not tell me those are all yours. You will have to pay for some of them."

"The rules of this railroad provide that a child under five years may ride free when accompanied by its parent with a first class ticket, don't they?" retorted Mrs. Scott.

"They do, but you will have to show me."

Mrs. Scott dug down into her valise and brought out the family Bible in which was recorded the name and age of each of the children. The conductor had to give in. The mother and children occupied five double seats in the homeseekers' car and paid for only one.

The names and ages of the children are: Ashbell, Archer and Austin, triplets, four and a half years old; Arthur and Arnold, twins, three and a half; Allan, Almon and Albin, triplets, two and a half; Albert, Albion and Adolph, triplets, eighteen months; Abel and Abner, twins, six months. Mrs. Scott is thirty years old and her husband is only a year her senior.

The mother and children are now in Highland, Kan., while the father is in Oklahoma, seeking a location. He probably will buy some cheap Indian land.

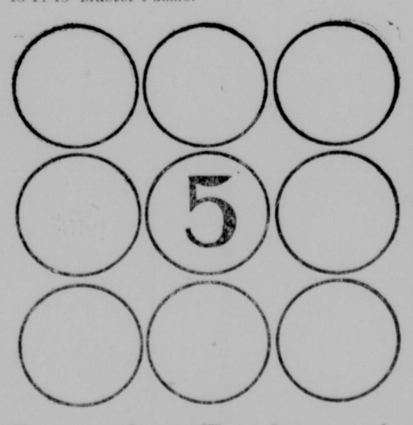
"MAGIC 15 PUZZLE"

Try This. It Can Be Done

A few years ago the 13-14-13 puzzle was occupying the minds of every one. It was generally admitted to be the hardest puzzle to solve ever invented—the inventor going crazy in trying to find a fixed rule for solving it. The "Magic 15" Puzzls is an outgrowth of that celebrated puzzle—it being discovered while trying to solve the 13-14-15- Master Puzzle.



Can You Solve This Puzzle? It Can Be Done

DIRECTIONS—Place any number from 1 to 9, inclusive, in the eight vacant circles on the above or any similarly arranged sheet of paper or other material in such a manner that any way the numbers are added, perpendicularly, horizontally and diagonally (including the number in centre circle) the total will be 15. The same number cannot be used more than once. Few will get all 8 columns. Some will possibly get 6 columns. Write your name and address neatly, accurately and plainly on your answer and mail or deliver your solution before 6 P. M., Tuesday, April 25th, 1911, to the Contest Department, Greater Pittsburg Piano Co., 633 Smithfield St., Pittsburg, Pa.

Any answer mailed in an envelope whose postmark shows it to have been mailed before 6 P. M., April 25th, will be accepted.

Only one member of a family may enter.

Only one solution will be accepted from the same contestant.

No one connected with the music trade, nor first prize winners in previous Contests, may enter.

Neatness, besides the correctness of the reply sent us, will be taken into consideration in awarding the prizes.

Contest closes Tuesday evening, April 25th, at 6 P. M. Try it now. It can be done. Send your replies as early as possible.

MUSICAL RECITAL

To be Given By the Juvenile Choral Society of Oakland May 2nd.

We are pleased to announce that the Juvenile Choral Society of Oakland, which is composed of fifteen or more youths who have been studiously trained by Dr. Robinson during the months of the past winter, will give a recital in the basement of the Lutheran church in Oakland on Tuesday evening, May 2nd.

A varied program of high class music, consisting of solos and choruses, violin and piano duets and other musical selections will be rendered by the boys. The society, which has been favorably received in its public appearances at both the Lutheran and Methodist churches, feel the need of additional equipment to more thoroughly perfect their work, and to this end the patronage of the public is earnestly sought and will be highly appreciated.

An Awful Mine Horror

NEAR KITZMILLER WHEN 23 MEN WERE KILLED BY EXPLOSION OF GAS

Bodies of All the Unfortunates Recovered. the Last One Yesterday Morning—Unrecognizable Masses

Twenty-three men were killed by an explosion in mine No. 20 of the Davis Coal and Coke Company, at Ott, near Kitzmiller, on the Western Maryland railway about 16 miles southeast of Oakland Monday morning at 8.30 o'clock. The men were: Leo Dempsey, Wm. Hetzel, Od. Hershberger, Wm. Buski, Thomas Yost, Charles Wilson, Jas. Dempsey, Harry Trainum, Wilbur Shears, John White, Wm. Pearson, G. White, Thomas Wilson, Hawthorn Patton, Frank Pugh, Wm. Pugh, Jr., Lester Wilson, Ray Wilson, John R. Wilson, James Brown, Seymour Runion, Oscar Pritchard, John Pritchard.

All are Americans except Buski. The body of Shears was taken out early Monday evening. It was easily identified.

About half the men were married with families. The rescuers worked at great risk. There were two large parties under the direction of Robert Grant, the superintendent of the mine. Practically all hope was abandoned at the start of reaching the men alive. The smoke in the mine was stifling and this greatly impeded the progress of the workers. Many headings were filled by falls of coal and the way to the place where the men were working was entirely closed. Superintendant Grant took his men through another slope and into a heading near the sealed rooms. Work is in progress making a crosscut through the wall of coal toward the entombed men, nearly two miles back in the earth. The gas or vapor lingered heavily in the mine and the work was possible only at short intervals and the strain on the rescuers was terrific. There were, however, willing relays and by a constant force of fresh men rapid progress was made. Late in the afternoon the rescuers had penetrated the mine about 4,000 feet and it was estimated at that time they still had that distance to go to reach the men. As the way progressed the work grew harder. There had been no sound from the inside. It was the general belief that the men, even if alive, could not be reached in time to save their lives.

It is not yet known whether the explosion came from dust or gas. It is uncommon for gas to gather in the mines of the upper Potomac region, which are a continuation of the mines of the Georges Creek region. The Ott mine is in the upper Potomac field near the headwaters of the river. It is a low vein mine, employing about one hundred men, but owing to the slump in the coal trade, only about one-fourth of the regular force went to work and they were engaged in cleaning up the mine.

The entrance to the mine is on top of the hill several hundred yards from the main line of the Western Maryland. The coal is dumped on cars on the main line, being carried to the tipple along the tracks. The mine is nearly two miles miles long and the heading runs back almost to the village of Elk Garden. The railway station for the mine is Blaine. Immediately after the explosion the whole country on both sides of the river was thrown into the greatest excitement and hundreds of men, women and children gathered about the mouth of the mine. Many were parents, brothers, sisters or wives of those entombed and great feeling was shown. Not a few were wringing their hands and crying aloud, while others more courageous set about planning the rescue. It was fortunate that the mine was not working full or there would have been few in the immediate neighborhood to help effect rescue. Words was telegraphed Thomas, W. Va., and two engines with rescue crews and appliances were rushed over the Western Maryland railway. The Ott mine is isolated from the other mines of the company and as a result the work of rescue was slow in getting started.

Charred and mutilated the bodies of the men were recovered by frantic fellow-workers, who dug their way into the mine in their efforts to save the entombed men from death by suffocation, the last body being brought out yesterday at noon. The remains were those of John White.

It was a strange picture. In the early morning the brawny mine workers went into the slope. Toward evening these men of strong arm and nerve about broke down as they tucked in a sheet the bodies of their fellow-workmen, placed them in dump cars and pushed the bodies through the mine for a distance of more than a mile to the main entrance.

Elk Garden is located upon the crest of a mountain, while the mine runs about 300 feet below the plateau. The miners who were entombed lost their lives directly under their homes, for the slopes run in the middle of the mountains, it being necessary to climb nearly 500 feet to the openings.

During the work of rescue George May, one of the mine workers, was overcome while attempting to drag out of the mine the body of one of the victims of the explosion. May was with a corps of seachers, including Herbert Hanbaugh, Jacob Gregory and W. B. Roberts, of the United States Bureau of Mines Rescue service, who with George F. Kallum, hurried to the scene of the disaster on a special train, arriving at Elk Garden at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning. May is in a critical condition, as his lungs are full of considerable monoxide poisoning.

William Willis another one of those who volunteered to search the mine for his fellow-workers entombed, was also overcome from the gaseous poisoning. Physicians worked over him for several hours to resuscitate him, but there is little hope of freeing his system of the poison.

The hero of the day was M. L. Garvey, superintendent of the Davis mine at Thomas, who rushed into the opening when he heard Willis shout for help. Mr. Garvey was carried out unconscious, and P. S. Klein and H. P. Copeland, surgeons for the company, brought him back to consciousness. After he had revived he again went to the mine and directed a corps of workers searching for the bodies. He had been in the mine for many hours during the early part of the day, but at no time did he feel the effects of the poisonous gas until he attempted to rescue Willis.

Supt. J. W. Paul, of the Government Bureau of Mines, of Pittsburg, was overcome, although he wore an oxygen helmet. He was revived at the mouth of the mine.

France is flying well to the front.

Fashion is willing to be hobbled but not haremed.

The harem-scarem skirt has certainly been well advertised.

"Man wants but little here below." The poet didn't mention women.

There are 411,322 federal offices and still not enough to go around.

"It has been found that radium will kill a cat." But drowning is cheaper.

The harem skirt may be something to wear besides being something to talk about.

New York's 52-story building is carrying the elevator business to a limit and almost to the stars.

These government statistics will convince even the farmers before long that agriculture is profitable.

Our idea of no place to start an umbrella factory is on Mars. Prof. Lowell says it never rains there.

"Don't eat when you're tired," says a magazine writer. That's the kind of advice that makes us tired.

And if they put pockets in the pantaloon skirt it's our bet that she'll stand with her hands in 'em, too.

That Chicago lawgiver who wants to legislate against the harem skirt must never have tripped over a fair woman's train.

Now that a high-browed professor has escertained that colds cost only $44.34 this spring, look out for a bargain-counter rush.

Profanity is not to be legislated from the New York stage. In other words, in some of the plays all of the jokes are not to be cut out.

Are there not small, rocky islands where powder mills might go away by themselves and explode without interfering with the neighbors?

The proposed law to prevent loveless marriages recalls the ancient question: "What is love?" Likewise, how can it be made permanent?

Twenty-one professors at the University of Moscow have been forced to resign by striking students. Russia must be a gladsome place for a student.

American heiresses are waiting for an advance list of King George's appointments of 500 new radical peers. Some of them will be laborites, no doubt.

An eastern savant tells us fat men rarely are criminals. Julius Caesar had the same idea—at least according to Shakespeare, or Bacon, or whoever it was.

A skeleton found in England is said to be 100,000 years old. This may be remarkable, but is there any limit to the age that a skeleton may eventually attain?

The Chicago girl who got into print on the assumption that she wanted to marry an Indian has gone on the vaudeville stage. Might have known it from the start.

A New Jersey dog catcher proposes to get 'em with an aeroplane. Then to the other triumphs of aeronautics will be added that of a bark sailing through the air.

The coronation of King George will introduce special styles in hats, says an exchange, which is tough luck for the man who was planning to wear last year's straw again.

A woman who was described by her artist husband as a "modern Venus" has just been awarded $25 a month alimony. Well, all Venuses are supposed to be more or less broke.

If the day of the harem skirt has arrived it will come in regardless of jeers and friendly or unfriendly legislation. If it has not come then all the advanced women in the world cannot force it.

A Massachusetts chief of police wants the ducking-stool revived for feminine scolds. He will want it still more when the tongues he would thus restrain have finished their assaults upon him.

A Chicago matron avers that a breach of promise suit against her husband merely amuses her. However, that form of amusement is not likely to become generally popular among the matrons.

A New Jersey woman in an alienation-of-affections suit recently recovered $2,000 for the loss of her husband's love. And many of her sisters will probably consider her a lucky woman, more to be envied than pitied.

Now a woman speaker comes forward to say that it is the icebox, not the ballot box, which should interest women. To the average woman who wants to enlarge her sphere, encouraged by warm enthusiasm, this will seem but cold advice.

FOR PUBLIC CONTROL

VAIL FOR REGULATION AS WELL AS PUBLICITY.

SAYS BOTH HERE TO STAY

Frank Recognition of Public Rights by the President of Western Union and Telephone Companies.

Public regulation of public service corporations has come to stay. It ought to have come and it ought to stay. That is the flat and unequivocal assertion of Theodore N. Vail, president of both the American Telephone and Telegraph company and the Western Union Telegraph company. It came in the form of his annual report to the seventy thousand stockholders of the two great corporations. Although Mr. Vail's advocacy of full publicity in connection with the affairs of such concerns was well understood, nobody in financial circles had anticipated so frank an avowal of full public rights in the shaping of their general conduct. It came consequently as a surprise, not only because of its novelty and squareness, but also on account of the unqualified acquiescence of a board of directors comprising such eminent and conservative financiers as Robert Winson of Kidder, Peabody & Co., and Henry L. Higginson of Boston, Henry P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co.; Senator W. Murray Crane, George F. Baer, T. Jefferson Coolidge Jr., Norman W. Harris, John I. Waterbury and others.

President Vail's declaration is heralded as the first recognition by those in high corporate authority of the justice of the demand that the public be regarded as virtual partners in all matters that pertain to the common welfare. He goes directly to the point.

"Public control or regulation of public service corporations by permanent commissions," he says, "has come and come to stay. Control, or regulation, to be effective means publicity; it means semi-public discussion and consideration before action; it means everything which is the opposite of and inconsistent with effective competition. Competition—aggressive, effective competition—means strife, industrial warfare; it means contention; it oftentimes means taking advantage of or resorting to any means that the conscience of the contestants or the degree of the enforcement of the laws will permit.

"Aggressive competition means duplication of plant and investment. The ultimate object of such competition is the possession of the field wholly or partially; therefore it means either ultimate combination on such basis and with such prices as will cover past losses, or it means loss of return on investment, and eventual loss of capital. However it results, all costs of aggressive, uncontrolled competition are eventually borne, directly or indirectly, by the public. Competition which is not aggressive, presupposes co-operative action, understandings, agreements, which result in general uniformity or harmony of action, which, in fact, is not competition but is combination, unstable, but for the time effective. When thoroughly understood it will be found that "control" will give more of the benefits and public advantages, which are expected to be obtained through such ownership, and will obtain them without the public burden of either the public officeholder or public debt or operating deficit.

"When through a wise and judicious state control and regulation all the advantages without any of the disadvantages of state ownership are secured, state ownership is doomed."

"If Mr. Vail is right," says Harper's Weekly, in a concise summing-up, "then it seems pretty plain that we are entered upon a new era in both economics and politics. And it is high time we did if evolution is to supplant revolution as an efficient force in the development of civilization."

Unreliable Physiognomy.

I am a profound disbeliever in physiognomy. Features are false witnesses. Stupidity frequently wears a mask of intelligence. I know business men who look like poets and poets who look like business men. Men of genius invariably look like idiots, and if you pick out the man who looks most eminent in a party you are sure to find he is a nobody. I always distrust men who look magnificent. Nature is a stingy creature. She seldom gives a man the double gift of being great and looking great. She took care to lame Byron and deform Pope and disfigure Johnson. But the crowning example of her jealous parsimony is Shakespeare. I have always been disappointed with Shakespeare's face. It does not live up to his poetry. It is dull, heavy and commonplace.—Adventures in London.

Vegetable Fancy Work.

Little Mrs. Bride had almost everything to learn about housekeeping, but she was so enthusiastic in her interest that every one was glad to help her.

"I have some particularly fine asparagus," the marketman told her one day, and he displayed a bunch for her admiration. "Picked not three hours ago," he added.

Mrs. Bride looked at it with unaffected amazement.

"Does it grow like that?" she asked. "I always supposed the cook braided the ends of it."—Youth's Companion.

A PRAYER FOR YOU

By REV. STEPHEN PAULSON

TEXT—For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father . . . that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith.—Eph. III: 14-17.

This is part of a prayer of St. Paul for his people. Paul was in a Roman prison. The liberty of his movements was restrained; he was in a stone cell, and he was chained to a Roman soldier—but his prayers were not chained.

St. Paul says: "The prayer of a righteous man availeth much;" and there are surely more things wrought by prayer than we ever imagine. I tell you it is worth while having one who carries you on his heart to such an extent that he prays for your safety and welfare. When Lot's family was in danger Abraham prayed until God promised them safety. When the Ephesian church was going through the fires of persecution, Paul sent up prayers in their behalf from his prison cell. When Peter was in danger of backsliding, Jesus prayed for him: "Simon, Simon, behold Satan hath desired to have thee, but I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not."

Do not many faithful pastors send up prayers, as Paul did, for the churches committed to their care? Do they not pray for the homes of the congregation and for individuals who are going through some trial and for the young people who are starting out into life? And now as of old, the prayer of a true, sincere man availeth much. It is a part of a faithful minister's service which is very often overlooked and yet is of the first importance. What a fine thing it was for the Ephesians to have St. Paul praying for them upon every remembrance. Although he was far away, he was still their pastor, the shepherd of their souls.

But for what did he pray? Did he pray that they might live in comfort and ease and have plenty? Did he pray that they might be free from persecution and that the church might grow without hindrance? That, probably would have been our prayer under like circumstances. But his prayer was "That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith."

How wonderfully comprehensive that prayer is when we begin to analyze it. Oh, it takes the inspiration of the Holy Spirit to make a prayer like that. It takes insight into the deep things of God, and into the needs of the human hearts.

Do you think that there is anything you need more than that? Do you not honestly think that that would make most things right which are wrong, would bind up broken hearts, would heal things that hurt, and drive out evil things which are spoiling your life? Yes, you know it, and I know it, so let our prayers be that Christ may dwell in our hearts by faith.

This is the substance of your faith. A better and more comprehensible definition of our religion could not be given. It contains the whole of Christianity as the acorn contains the oak.

The whole Jewish law had its divine inspiration, its secret spirit, but it was hidden in a vast system of forms. Christ said, "I come not to destroy but to fulfill," and the true spirit of the law was seen in him. In winter an old apple tree is homely, gnarled and twisted. But in spring when it is covered with blossoms there is nothing more beautiful. So the old Jewish law blossoms into beauty and comes to fruit in Jesus Christ.

Christianity is not a system of laws, but a state of the heart. Christ in a man—that is the Christian religion. It is Christ dwelling in the heart by faith, and then a man begins to know the length and the breadth and height and depth of the love of Christ which passeth knowledge. Outside of personal experience, Christianity is pale as a lunar rainbow.

There are three avenues of experience by which Christ may come to man—sight, intellect, the heart. To have seen Christ was deemed of great importance in the early days. Those who had seen Jesus possessed a certain distinction, Paul, defending his apostleship, says, "Have I not seen him?" But how meager was the Christian life of those days compared with that of later ages, and did not Jesus pronounce a blessing on those who had not seen and yet believed?

Christ may be presented to a man's intellect. There are certain facts to be known and understood concerning him, but there are also many that are beyond our understanding. Creeds sum up a few great facts of our religion. Not that the repetition of a creed will make anyone a Christian, but a creed is like the astronomer's telescope. He sweeps the heavens to find a particular star. By and by the telescope brings it to his eye. It is not the instrument that sees the star, but the man's eye. A blind man could not see the heavenly bodies with a telescope, no matter how powerful it might be. So a creed may bring facts to your intellect, but it takes the heart to apprehend and interpret them.

Therefore Paul prayed for the Ephesians not greater knowledge, but that Christ might dwell in their hearts by faith. For the heart may embrace Christ with an enthusiasm of love, even though the intellectual perception be imperfect and vague.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

PROGRESS IN GREAT BRITAIN

Brief but Striking Summary of Temperance Work in England During Past Ten Years.

A brief but striking summary of the last ten years' advance of the temperance cause in Great Britain forms part of an interesting article entitled, "The Outlook," published recently in one of the foremost organs of the temperance cause in England. The facts are forcibly summarized in the following paragraphs:

"The decade which has just closed will always be memorable for the enormous advances which the temperance movement has made in every part of the civilized world. It is always difficult to estimate progress in any political or moral agitation. As the seaman can judge of the strength and direction of a current only by fixing his eye on some remote or stationary object and observing its approach or recession, so on the broad ocean of public opinion a judgment of the power of the current which is floating forward the temperance question can be formed only by noting the landmarks which have been passed or the rapidity with which others are being approached.

"The greatness of that advance in the United Kingdom is indicated, though by no means measured, by the marked reduction in the consumption of and expenditure on drink which has taken place. Between December, 1899, and December, 1909, there has been a fall in annual consumption of over 4,000,000 barrels of beer and over 13,000,000 gallons of spirits, and there has been a drop in the annual expenditure during the same period of no less than £30,000,000.

"This, however, is not the full measure of the real advance. During the past ten years the national attitude to the liquor evil has greatly changed, and nowhere more remarkably than among the working classes, a result largely due to the splendid "lead" given by their leaders on this question.

Social reformers of every school are now realizing that behind all the abuses which they are attacking stands the great ally of every social evil which curses the land—the liquor traffic. Educationists have learned at last that it is idle to attempt to educate the child and leave him unwarned against a drug which is the most potent destroyer of physical, mental, and moral control, and the testimony of the medical profession against alcohol grows louder and more united every year.

"In the realm of political activity the advance has been great. In January, 1911, there was in power a government which was content to be the servant of the liquor trade. In January, 1911, a government holds office which has shaken itself free from "the Trade," which has dared to defy "the Trade," and yet today is in power by the people's will with a great majority—a government elected by the people with full knowledge that temperance legislation of an advanced kind will be among the first fruits of the legislative harvest.

RUM PROVES COSTLY TO MAN

Once Member of New York Stock and Produce Exchanges Brought to Ruination by Drink.

A pitiable instance of how strong drink will drag a man down was furnished a few days ago when a Salvation Army officer took to Bellevue hospital as a victim of nephritis a man of fifty-five who was penniless, broken and cast off by his family and friends. This victim of rum is the son of one of the world's most famous men. As a young man he went abroad with his father and met royalty. After a college education he was a member of the New York Stock and Produce exchanges. He was a member of the most exclusive clubs, and had a wife and four children. He became involved in a financial scandal, was for a time in an asylum, and then dropped far down in the social scale. It was impossible for his family to aid him other than to pay his board in places where he could not obtain money or credit. He became familiar to men who frequent resorts late at night. He was often seen sweeping out saloons, doing errands, happy to acquire liquor. Disheveled, ragged, unkempt, he was almost unrecognizable. Now he is apparently near a pauper's grave. And he, alas! is but one of the many thousands who go the same career. Can rum have a stronger arraignment?—Christian Work and Evangelist.

The War on Alcohol.

The celebrated Italian writer and anti-alcoholist, Dr. Francesco Ferrari, writing in one of the great journals of his country, says:

"To fight a prejudice of any sort is always to give good battle, but to fight a belief (e.g. the superstition as to the value of wine) in the name of which humanity is being poisoned by the wholesale, degenerated and given over to crime, is a work which should be taken up by everyone with social spirit and love for his fellows. For this reason we believe that no war should stir such noble energies and gather about our flag so many serious men as that on alcohol."

REASONED IT OUT

And Found a Change in Food Put Him Right.

A man does not count as wasted the time he spends in thinking over his business, but he seems loth to give the same sort of careful attention to himself and to his health. And yet his business would be worth little without good health to care for it. A business man tells how he did himself good by carefully thinking over his physical condition, investigating to find out what was needed, and then changing to the right food.

"For some years I had been bothered a great deal after meals. My food seemed to lay like lead in my stomach, producing heaviness and dullness and sometimes positive pain. Of course this rendered me more or less unfit for business, and I made up my mind that something would have to be done.

"Reflection led me to the conclusion that over-eating, filling the stomach with indigestible food, was responsible for many of the ills that human flesh endures, and that I was punishing myself in that way—that was what was making me so dull, heavy and uncomfortable, and unfit for business after meals. I concluded to try Grape-Nuts food to see what it could do for me.

"I have been using it for some months now, and am glad to say that I do not suffer any longer after meals; my food seems to assimilate easily and perfectly, and to do the work for which it was intended.

"I have regained my normal weight, and find that business is a pleasure once more—can take more interest in it, and my mind is clearer and more alert."

MUNYON'S PAW-PAW PILLS

TRADE MARK

A trial package of Munyon's Paw Paw Pills will be sent free to anyone on request. Address Professor Munyon, 53d & Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa. If you are in need of medical advice, do not fail to write Professor Munyon. Your communication will be treated in strict confidence, and your case will be diagnosed as carefully as though you had a personal interview.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour, they do not gripe, they do not weaken, but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. In my opinion constipation is responsible for most ailments. There are 26 feet of human bowels, which is really a sewer pipe. When this pipe becomes clogged the whole system becomes poisoned, causing biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produce rheumatism and kidney ailments. No woman who suffers with constipation or any liver ailment can expect to have a clear complexion or enjoy good health. If I had my way I would prohibit the sale of nine-tenths of the cathartics that are now being sold for the reason that they soon destroy the lining of the stomach, setting up serious forms of indigestion, and so paralyze the bowels that they refuse to act unless forced by strong purgatives.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverish it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope; they are soothing, healing and stimulating. They school the bowels to act without physic.

Regular size bottle, containing 45 pills, 25 cents. Munyon's Laboratory, 53d & Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia.

MARVELS of THE EARTH

CURIOUS, ODD AND INTERESTING OBJECTS AND PLACES

"Center of the Earth" in Pekin

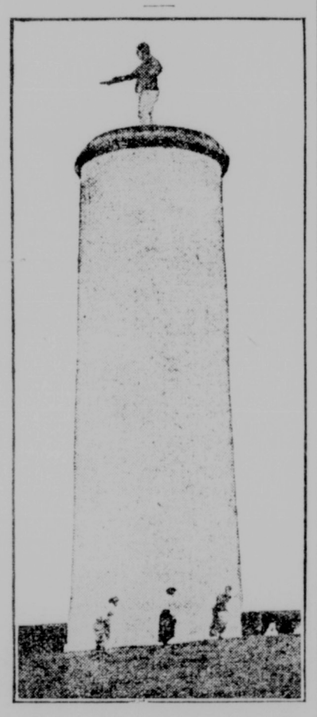
HOPPING FOR HUSBANDS.



At the Irish seaside resort of Tramore, about seven miles from Waterford, stands a curious pillar surmounted by the metal figure of a man. It was built to enable mariners to distinguish between Tramore bay and Waterford harbor, but it has another and more peculiar use. Local tradition has it that if any unmarried woman succeeds in hopping round it three times she will get a husband within a year. Many women visitors are attracted to the place to test the value of the legend.

MEDAL FOR DOUBLE RESCUE

For a double rescue from a river infested with crocodiles Trooper Patrick C. McEwan of the Natal police has been awarded the medal of the Royal Humane society.

A boat with four men of the police and a native boy on board was capsized on Lake Sibayi in North Zululand. Two men trying to swim ashore were drowned or pulled down by crocodiles, which are numerous in the river. McEwan managed to reach land and hastily constructed a frail raft which he paddled out with his hands and took the boy ashore. Again paddling out about 300 yards he also saved the last man left alive.

BITE OF THE ELECTRIC ANT

When you happen to sit down to rest or take notes near a colony of electric ants, says a writer in the Atlantic Monthly, some wandering hunter is sure to find you and come cautiously forward to discover the nature of the intruder and what ought to be done.

If you are not too near the town and keep perfectly still he may run across your feet a few times, over your legs and hands and face, up your trousers, as if taking your measure and getting comprehensive views, then go in peace without raising an alarm.

If, however, a tempting spot is offered or some suspicious movement excites him a bite follows, and such a bite! I fancy that a bear or wolf bite is not to be compared with it.

A quick electric flame of pain flashes along the outraged nerves, and you discover for the first time how great is the capacity for sensation you are possessed of. A shriek, a grab for the animal, and a bewildered stare follow this bite of bites as one comes back to consciousness from sudden eclipse. Fortunately if careful one need not be bitten oftener than once or twice in a lifetime.

HAS TWO "DRY" BATTLESHIPS

The British navy has just taken a step unprecedented in its history. The two cruisers Rainbow and Niobe are to be teetotal men of war, contrary to all marine traditions.

Grog has always been a part of the standard ration, being a concoction of one part rum to three parts water, but no such luxury is to be permitted on the two ships above mentioned. In the old days, in fact down to 1830, the daily allowance to each man was a gallon of ale and half a pint of rum. The quantity has been greatly modified, but it certainly never entered any tar's head that the time was coming for total abstinence.

ADOPTS GOOSE AS A PET

During a recent visit to Bridlington, writes a correspondent of Country Life, I was much amused to come across a large goose that had been adopted as the pet of a small home in the older part of the town. It frequently followed its master on the pier and in the streets and might often be seen waddling after him with slow, measured steps along the country lanes, sometimes walking eight and ten miles at a stretch.

Two years ago the live goose was sent in November for the Christmas day dinner, a destiny which was never fulfilled, as before a week had passed it had become the pet of the family, walking in and out of the house at its leisure. It now often takes its food from the children's hands at the dinner table and constantly perches on the man's shoulder as he sits and reads. The old bird is a popular favorite in Bridlington, where it is well known by the name of John Willie.

STRANGE WAY OF SWEARING

A strange way of cussing is that of the Corean. His ordinary swear word is "Oenuma!" or "You brute!" The Japanese have the same partiality for this term of endearment. But according to the Oriental Economic Review the Corean considers himself especially abusive when he calls a person his child or grandchild.

When he wants to call somebody down the Corean demands hotly: "Are you not my child?" And the angry retort is: "What! I your child? You are my grandchild!"

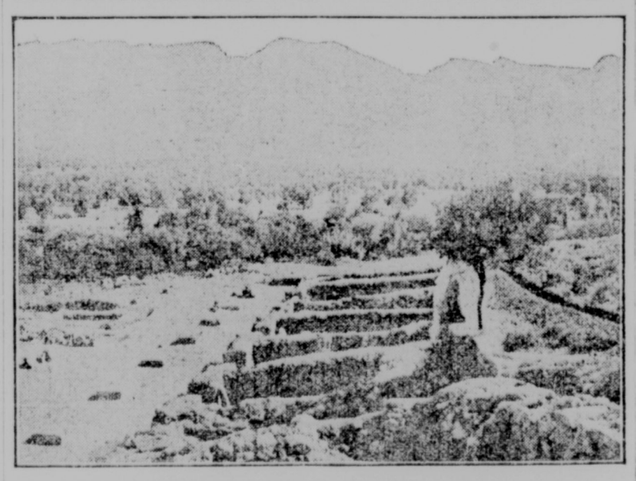
Then the first goes a step further and cries, "You are a grandchild of my grandchild!" to which the rejoinder is, "You conceited fellow, have you forgotten that you are a grandchild of a grandchild of my grandchild?"

When their vituperation reaches its climax, the people of Chosen at last come to the occidental standard of exclaiming, "You grandchild of a dog!"

WANDERING BUILA MUSICIAN.

The photograph above is of a wandering musician of the Bulla district, British East Africa, who closely corresponds to the ancient minstrel. He is the tribal historian and has in his knowledge all the traditions and songs of his people, and is held in great repute and treated with all respect. His instrument consists of iron keys, each separately attached to hollow gourds of varying lengths. The white mark on each gourd is a hole very skillfully covered over with the web of a particular spider, and is said to add greatly to the melodious sound of the instrument. The keys are struck with a stick, and this particular instrument was in perfect harmony.

Ancient Greek Market Place



The Italian Archaeological Mission in Crete has been making some remarkable and interesting excavations in that island. At Phaestus and Haghia Triada the excavations of the Minoan palace and the royal villa have been completed, with the discovery of new important parts of both buildings and that of the Minoan agora, the oldest market place ever found on Greek soil. At Labena, on the south coast of the island, the Graeco-Roman temple of Aesculapius with its surroundings was entirely unearthed, while new researches have been carried on at Gortyna, near the Pythian temple and the Greek agora, and at Prinia, on the eastern slopes of Mount Ida. The excavations at Prinia have brought to light the remains of two archaic Greek shrines with very remarkable pieces of sculpture of the most primitive style.

SELECT MOST POPULAR BREED IN COMMUNITY

So Much Depends Upon Tastes of Individual, Environment and Requirements of Neighborhood, Useless to Name One Breed.

Yearling Poland-China Boar.

Many communications are received by this paper during the year asking for information on the best breeds of live stock. Sometimes these inquiries relate to draft horses, at other times to beef cattle, frequently concerning the breeds of dairy cattle and the last one received asks for information concerning the best breed of hogs.

We have repeatedly stated in these columns that it is strictly impossible to give advice on the question of breeds as applied to any class of live stock, says the Homestead. So much depends upon the tastes of the individual, upon the environment and upon the requirements of neighboring farmers that it would be time wasted to mention specifically one breed and then undertake to prove that it was better than any or all others.

We take it for granted that in this case it is the intention of the subscriber to handle pure-bred hogs and we presume he is a beginner in the business and under these circumstances something may be said on the topic that will throw a little light on the subject for those just starting. The average man will do a little better right from the start if he takes up the breed that is popular in his community. The reason for this is that he will have less difficulty in disposing of his surplus males early in the season than if he starts in with a breed with which his neighbors are unfamiliar. We mean by this that if the bulk of the hogs in a particular locality were grade Poland Chinas we would by no means take up that breed and likewise if they were Durocs we would start up business as a breeder of the red hog, and the same might be said of the Chester Whites or Berkshires. As a rule the beginner in the pure-bred hog business has his hardest sledding the first two years and many a man becomes disgusted when he finds that he has kept over a big bunch of males that he cannot dispose of, thus making it necessary for him to dispose of them later on as stags and thereby incur an actual loss.

It must be admitted that there are exceptional cases and sometimes the best profits are realized in handling a new breed. A good example of this could be found in popularity of the Hampshire hog. On account of the growthiness of this breed, their prolific character and their general constitutional hardiness these hogs have rapidly grown in popularity and in every instance that has been called to our attention where a beginner has started in with the right foundation and handled them properly he has had a brisk demand for his surplus hogs that were good enough to go into the breeding pen.

Salt for the Calves.

Salt should be kept before the calves all the time, the same as before the older stock.

GUINEA HENS ARE PROFITABLE

Bakers Always Glad to Get Their Eggs Because They Can be Used to Good Advantage in Cake Baking.

By WALTER B. LEUTZ.

There is no doubt that if the guinea hen is properly cared for at all times that it will prove almost as profitable as any of the ordinary breeds of chickens.

Guinea eggs are not always saluable to country merchants because many people say they are not palatable and their color is against them, but bakers are always glad to get guinea eggs because it is claimed they can be used to better advantage in cake baking than any other, except duck eggs.

If the eggs can be obtained from guinea hens that have been confined for a season or whose ancestors have been treated as domestic fowls, the birds will, in time, become almost as tame as chickens.

When the hens are left out in the open they make their nests in brush heaps or out-of-the-way places, and when their nest is once located they rarely leave the vicinity, and it is, therefore, easy to find the nests. It is always better to place the eggs under a chicken hen for hatching unless the guinea hen has been confined.

Unless the guinea hen is confined she will take her brood on long journeys through the damp grass, and many are likely to die from this cause.

One difficulty about raising guineas is that the young birds are very easily killed by mites and lice. They are apparently more tender than the chickens and many will quickly die, particularly if the big head louse attacks them. The utmost care as to cleanliness must be taken if the guineas are raised in confinement.

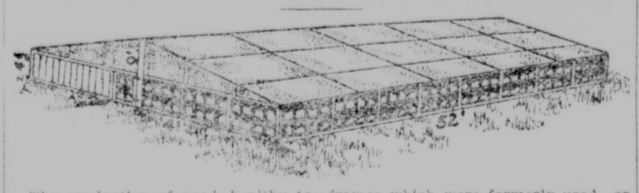
Feeding Draft Colts.

Feed the draft colts strong for all the growth and development possible in the early maturity to get into the big gelding market as soon as possible, where prices are high, but do not feed corn and oil meal to fatten the colts and young horses as you would to a fat steer. Horses want bone and muscle along with their large size. With the run of the pasture every day for vigorous exercise, and as soon as old enough give them careful work; then you can increase the feed and get them in good show condition, and with work enough to keep them in the best condition the buyers will pay you $25 to $50 more than for the thin horse.

Care of Pigs.

Feed and water regularly and see that every pig comes to his feed. If any of the little fellows seem to be sick, put them out and give a small ration for a while, and the chances are that they will come out all right, without any further treatment.

COVER FOR TOBACCO PLANTS



The production of good, healthy tobacco plants fit for transplanting in the field is one of the most important operations of tobacco growing, says the Orange Judd Farmer. It is the well-known policy of most tobacco growers to plant more seed and have larger beds than necessary when the weather and everything are favorable to production of good, strong, healthy plants. W. S. Belmer of Connecticut, after losing several years in succession his crop of small plants by freezing, decided to make a bed this spring in which he was sure to grow as many and healthy plants as he wished. The cost of this bed, he claims, is about one and one-half day's extra labor, or three dollars more than what his old beds cost him. This seed bed, as illustrated above, is 41 feet wide, 52 feet long and four and one-half feet high to the eaves and about nine feet high in the center. On the west and south sides are placed the glass frames which were formerly used on the old beds. When placed in this manner, the sun shines into the tent from some direction at all times of day. The ridge wire is stretched from one center post to the other; then extending from one side to the other across this ridge wire every four feet is a rope, and every ten feet a wire. Mr. Belmer says if he were to build it over, he would place ropes every two or three feet. In dry weather the tent tends to sag, but when it rains or in damp weather the ropes tighten and hold the top of the tent well in position.

Making Butter.

Butter should come in 20 minutes of churning, and never longer than in half an hour. Good salt should be used, and great care taken that it is well worked in. When butter is gathered in the cream in granular form it is never overworked.

TRAIN LOAD AFTER TRAIN LOAD OF SETTLERS

ARE GOING TO CENTRAL CANADA.

The question of reciprocal trade relations between the United States and Canada has provoked considerable discussion and interest. Whatever else the discussion may have done, it has brought out the fact that on the Canadian side of the line the agricultural situation is one that forces attention, and it has also brought forth the fact which it is well to face, that on the American side of the border, there is a vastly increasing population to be fed with a somewhat decreasing proportion of food products. This article is intended to point out to those who may wish to become of those who can raise wheat, oats, barley, flax, cattle and hogs at the least cost that the opportunities in Central Canada are what they are seeking. During the past year the official figures show that upwards of 130,000 Americans located in Canada, and the greatest majority of these have settled on farms, and when the time comes, which it will within a few years, they will be ready to help serve their parent country with the food stuffs that its increasing population will require. The immigration for the spring has now set in in great earnest, and train load after train load of a splendid class of settlers leave weekly from Kansas City, Omaha, Chicago, Detroit, St. Paul and other points. Most of these are destined through to points in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. The reports that come from the different farming districts there are that the spring is opening up well, and the prospects for a splendid crop this year are very good. In some districts good homesteads are yet available. The price of all farm lands has naturally had an increase, but it is still away below its earning capacity. The immigration branch of the Dominion Government has just published its 1911 illustrated pamphlet, which may be secured on application to the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada, or any of the agents of the Dominion Government, whose advertisement may appear elsewhere in this paper.

No Excuse at All.

N. C. Goodwin, the comedian, was condemning a new comedy at a dinner in New York.

"Its climax," he said, "is false and unsatisfactory—as false and unsatisfactory as Rowndar's excuse.

FARMER MOST INDEPENDENT.

As industry develops we get more and more dependent on each other. The farmer, however, remains the most independent, and again the way he carries on the work is of the most vital importance to us all. The soil is the source of everything that calls forth the efforts of industry. The people who till the soil have charge of the source of supply and the rest have to go accordingly. Do we want more to do with? Then the farmer must produce more. To do that he must have more knowledge and skill in his work.

Who is most interested in the man who tills the soil being trained for his work? Without a doubt it is the man in the city. He is the one who should be the most insistent on agriculture being taught in the puuile schools, and that the agricultural college be given liberal support. The railroads are doing a great deal in encouraging the teaching of agriculture. Many have placed trains at the services of the agricultural colleges that they might equip them with apparatus, appliances and instructors and thus carry the teachings of better farming to a great many people in a short time. Bankers are also active in encouraging the spread of better farming.

SPRING IN THE COUNTRY.

It is a fine thing to live in the country and to witness the renewing influence of nature in green fields and budding trees, with singing birds and the sun giving forth its genial warmth. The farmer is preparing the soil for spring seeding and all nature is awakening from its winter slumber. Dwellers in great cities, especially those living in crowded tenements, know nothing of the beauty and joy of living in God's great out-of-doors, where one may breathe fresh, pure air and the life be enriched by living near the heart of nature. Soon lovely flowers will be blooming out-of-doors and all nature will be adorned in its most attractive raiment. Spring in the country makes one think deeply and broadly and to the open heart and receptive mind it tells of the bountiful Giver of all good gifts; that it is good to live and to learn something from nature at its best.

THE PEOPLES' FORUM

School Affairs and the Man Who Controls the Destinies of the Children and Teachers.

To the Editor of The Republican:

In looking over the decision of the State Board in the Browning case, it will be noticed that he was convicted in what the Board deems the most important charges, towit, one and eight, but the Board did not dismiss him because it says there was no evidence of wilful neglect. We are not criticising the Board for this, but it would seem easy enough to satisfy the Board of the wilfulness of such neglect if the people had a chance to show how long Browning stayed around Oakland last fall during all the fine weather we had at that time instead of visiting the schools.

In the eighth charge, however, he was convicted without any excuse whatever for not holding examinations according to law. Would it not be a good thing for the people to draft new charges and leave these two out, except to show the wilfullness of the neglect in charge one so as to satisfy the Board on that point? If the Board does not wish to come to Oakland to hear them, the evidence could easily be taken down by calling two or three witnesses a day until it is all done and then send attorneys before the Board for the argument.

It certainly should not be difficult to diffiucit to convict him on charge five in which he is charged with unjust and unfair treatment of teachers.

It is a difficult thing to get correct information about these matters, if it is true that Browning turned Mr. Semmes down when he requested Mr. Browning to allow him to examine the books of the School Board's office, but from what can be gathered from Mr. Browning's reports to the State Board and from other outside information, it appears that Miss Gertrude Browning, a relative of Browning, was paid $335.25 for the year ending 1909, which is $45 per month, lacking one day which was probably missed. Mr. W. L. Thomas taught the same school the following year and received $298 or one day short of $40 per month, which was probably missed also. Mr. Asa Lewis succeeded Mr. Thomas in the same school for the year ending 1911 and received, we are told, $30 per month. We are also informed that Browning's niece, Miss Mary L. Browning received $40 per month for the year 1911.

Compare these also with Miss Alice Wolfe's salary of $30 per month, and she has taught school for ten years. Now, follow these comparisons as far as you like and see if they do not result favorably to some relative or particular friend of Browning. What are the results? A difference of $10 a month for one year is $75 for one teacher, and forty teachers, $3,000 for one year, and ten years at this rate would be $30,000 of the tax payer's money. This shows the power of the school officials over the teachers and taxpayers. Let them explain the reasons for these differences of salary and we will leave it to the people whether or not they are satisfactory.

It now seems that they are after Prof. Palmer again and will probably not be satisfied until they have driven him out of the county, if they can. In view of these things and many others that are likely to be discussed later, is it any wonder that so many people have lost confidence and that there is now and likely to be trouble and turmoil hereafter? And is it any wonder that the County Commissioners refused to levy any more money than they it did into the hands of this gentleman from Sang Run?

Why should not the School Board's office be open to the inspection of the public at all times, just the same as all the other public offices in the Court House are? We believe the County Commissioners have leviec enough money to run the schools 7½ months and pay the teachers according to law, but they have certainly removed the means whereby certain parties can be rewarded and others unjustly punished and in this they are certainly right, even if the schools have to be closed a while if there is no other remedy.

CITIZENS.

Oakland, April 24, 1911.

The County Commissioners Versus the School Board.

To the Editor of The Republican:

The County Commissioners have cut the appropriation for the support and maintenance of the public schools nearly $5,000, with the edifying and illuminating explanation that the administration of school affairs by the school officials has been unsatisfactory and that the tax rate has been reduced.

Shades of Ichabod Crane! Why not allow us the $5,000 for the education of our children and retain the $20,000, thus reducing the tax rate still more? This would make Garrett county famous for it low taxes.

If the administration of school affairs has been unsatisfactory with an appropriation of $25,000 will the management be more satisfactory or efficient on a smaller sum?

This county has already too many $27 teachers. Do the county officers expect to raise the standard of proficiency by employing $20 teachers? Or is there money being squandered on magnificent school buildings? Perhaps too much has been expended on beautifying the grounds surrounding school houses in the rural distrtct.

Apparently we are in a period of retrogression. We are drifting toward illiteracy and barbarism.

It must be admitted that the school officials are not the most popular body of men, nor is the present superintendent the most highly esteemed citizen of the county. In fact his popularity would doubtless be much enhanced by his voluntary resignation, but since he won't resign and won't allow himself to be pushed out, we must needs tolerate him, but surely the fact that we have an undesirable County Sugerintendent is hardly sufficient cause to strike a blow at the entire county.

However, we suggest to the school board that retaliatory measures be used. Why not reduce the school term from seven months to five, or cut the teachers' salaries, or have no school at all in isolated sections? In this manner it is probable that a Kilkenny Cat fight may be started, which conflict was so deadly that naught remained of the combatants but their caudal appendages. It is to hoped that the factions who are opposing each other to the detriment of the advancement of the county may so destroy each other, politically, that nothing will remain of the controversy but the tale.

M.

Grantsville, Md., April 25.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Spring, gentle Spring, is here.

Lots of house cleaning going on in town.

Mr. Meshack Mattingly was in town on Saturday. He has been a very sick man but is better.

The band members were out last week to see how much they could raise toward building a stand, where they could give concerts this summer. The citizens responded to the request with the exception of one or two, who refused to give anything. Next week we will give a list of all who contributed to it. The stand will be started as soon as the weather will permit. It will be a square building 18x18, with eight posts or columns to support the roof and 14 feet to the projections.

Last week, as we predicted, the state surveyors came to Friendsville and are busy surveying for the new road, and let us say that it won't be so very long before some of the skeptics will see the work going on.

Archie Zimmerman spent Sunday in our city.

George D. Browning returned to town on Saturday. He will shortly be a resident of our town.

M. J. Black, B. & O. agent, spent Sunday with his parents in Confluence.

Last week Mrs. George Dunham had a very serious fall that might have laid her up for some time, but she is about again, although nursing some bad bruises.

J. C. Kendall was a visitor to our City on Saturday.

Frank Spears is having some fine improvements made to his property.

Albert Kamp left last week for West Virginia, where he will work at the lumber business. He has closed his jewelry store, as business was not justifying him to remain in it.

W. H. H. Friend will build an addition to his home on Maple street.

Several teams were in town on Saturday to get the slate to roof the Blooming Rose church.

Charles Longdren returned Friday from Baltimore.

Basil Garlitz returned to Confluence on Monday, after spending Sunday at home.

What a pity it is that there is not some business here that would give work to a number of our young people, and there could be, if our citizens chose so to make it. Now when our boys and girls get old enough, they have to leave home and go out into the world, where they meet all kinds of temptation and have no home influences. Many kinds of business could be brought to our town if the people only made up their minds, and work together in unity, but just there is the rub. Some are afraid to do anything for fear others would make more out of it than they could, and when something is proposed they pour all the cold water on it they can.

What has happened to the committee that was to get up a festival, the proceeds of which was to go towards improving our cemetery? We would like to hear more about it.

GRANTSVILLE.

Spring seems to be here at last. We have had two days of sunshine and good prospects for more. However, on Saturday we had a snow storm, and again on Sunday morning the ground was white. The ground has been too wet for farm work and seeding will be quite late this spring.

Among those from Grantsville and vicinity who attended the recent horse sale in Meyersdale were C. A. Bender, of the National Hotel, who returned without having made a purchase; Mr. E. A. Beachy secured a valuable four-year-old mare.

Mr. Solomon Orendorf, of Bittinger, who passed through Grantslille en route to Elk Lick on Wednesday, returned Thursday morning having in tow a new spring wagon.

Mr. Henry Zehner was the guest of his brother John on Sunday.

Messrs. Harvey and Alfred Ringer passed through town on Thursday with several head of cattle.

The Summer Normal opened on Monday with an attendance of 12 scholars. Mr. Ross Durst has charge of the school.

Mr. Frank Durst has been quite ill with kidney trouble. We are glad to note that his condition is not as serious as it has been.

Mrs. A. R. Wright is critically ill at her home several miles northwest of Grantsville.

Mr. R. M. Beachy, V. S., of Meyersdale, is seen almost dialy in this vicinity. His frequent trips to this section are occasioned by the many sick horses. There appears to be an epidemic of pleuro pneumonia among the equine denizens of this portion of Garrett county and the adjoining part of Somerset county.

The maple sugar season is closed. A very laage crop is reported; the quality also is of the best. Several cars have already been loaded and shipped on the Jennings railroad by Mr. J. J. Bender. The price paid was 9 cents per pound.

King Bros. have moved their saw mill from G. J. Gnagey's to J. S. Miller's where they are sawing a tract of maple lumber for Mr. Miller.

The Town Council has taken up the matter of purchasing fire fighting apparatus. Grantsville has suffered some heavy loses in the past from fires which could have been checked ere much damages had been done if adequate means had been at hand. We trust the project will be carried through and a portable pump or engine secured ere we have another conflagration which would cause a loss of many times the cost of the apparatus.

Two Large Plate Glass Smashed.

Two large plate glass in the front of the Bolden, Brown & Weimer store, were badly cracked on Tuesday in a rather peculiar manner. Mr. S. F. Hamill, in the automobile of his father, was coming down the street and when opposite the store a small piece of broken stone was caught under the rear wheel of the machine. The inflated tire gave sufficiently to allow the stone to get partly beneath it when it was expelled with terrific force and shot into the doorway, first striking one of the side glass and from there the stone glanced and struck the glass in the door, damaging both to such an extent that they will have to be replaced with new ones.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Our people were deeply grieved at the announcement a short time since of the death of Dr. Tallson who had been summering here for many years. Few of our visitors were esteemed as was the ever genial Doctor.

The Queenwood Hotel has been leased by Miss Catharine B. Ottley, of the Hotel Creedmore, Grafton, and will be opened for business early in June.

Mrs. Day, of Clarksburg, W. Va., will erect immediately a handsome cottage on the corner of G and Oak streets, to be occupied July 1st.

During the present week four cars of lime and two of fertilizers have been distributed from this station. This speaks well for the farmers in this rapid growing section of our county.

Mr. Fred. Gortner and son came to the station on business Monday evening, hitching their horses in an alley. When they started for home they found that the animals had been taken. They walked home and not finding the missing animals instituted a search and the next morning they were found grazing near the Loch Lynn Hotel, one of them minus the saddle and bridle. They had evidently been taken and ridden most of the night and then turned loose. Mr. Gortner says he will freely give fifty dollars reward for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the party or parties who took the horses.

The plans for the new postoffice building are being considered by the committee having the matter in charge. The building will be erected along the boardwalk and about thirty feet from the railroad, and on a level with the walk. The building will contain four rooms of different sizes, to be used for postoffice, nickelodeon, lunch room and barber shop, and will be erected immediately.

The same committee also have under consideration the erection of a bath house at the lake, probably on the island, and to be erected by July 1st.

Mr. Geo. W. Miller, now occupying the Jarboe cottage, will soon move into the Offutt cottage near the public school building.

Mr. T. P. Lipscomb is making progress with the golf links and will be ready for sportsmen in that line before the opening of the season. We have not been informed whether President Taft has consented to play the opening game.

Mr. Mansfield, of Keyser, has been appointed railroad agent at this station.

Mr. Wm. Smith has moved into the Spiker house in Loch Lynn.

Mr. John D. Hayden will have charge of the electric light plant this summer. He has moved from Oakland into one of the R. S. Jamison cottages in the Park.

Mr. J. E. Chance had a tumor removed from his shoulder at the Home Sanitorium, Oakland, Monday. The operation was successfully performed by Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh, and Mr. Chance is able to walk about.

Miss Ettie Springer has again leased the Yoder cottage on G street. She arrived here Tuesday and will soon be ready to entertain summer guests.

Mrs. Portmess and sister, of Cumberland, were here with friends this week.

Miss Jennie Murphy will again have charge of the Fallon cottage and will be ready for guests June 1st.

Mrs. Cora Bishop and Mrs. Carle Frame and son James, of Fairmont, arrived here yesterday to remain a week to put their cottage in order for occupancy early in June.

Miss Sarah C. Harris came here this morning fromher winter home in Franklin, Va. She will have Mountain View Faith Home ready for summer boarders about June 1st.

Rev. Jacob Cuppett was here with relatives Tuesday.

Rev. A. W. Miller conducted religious services at Bond Sunday.

Hon. Philip Willett, who has been a great suffered from rheumatism since his return from England, is much better and able to go about without much discomfort.

Mr. Camden, of Clarksburg, has rented the Beachem cottage for the season.

The contract to paint the interior of the M. E. church was awarded to Messrs. John and George Hipsley. The work is to be completed before June 1st.

Mr. E. E. Friend was called to Baltimore on business last week.

Rev. H. E. Friend was a recent Park visitor.

Preaching in the M. E. church at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday.

The MAN in LOWER TEN

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the Bronson case to get the deposition of John Gilmore, millionaire. A lady requests Blakeley to buy her a Pullman ticket. He gives her lower 11 and retains lower 10. He finds a drunken man in lower 10 and retires in lower 9. He awakens in lower 7 and finds his clothes and bag missing. The man in lower 10 is found murdered. Circumstantial evidence points to both Blakeley and the man who stole his clothes. The train is wrecked and Blakeley is rescued from a burning car by a girl in blue. His arm is broken. The girl proves to be Alison West, his partner's sweetheart. Blakeley returns home and finds he is under surveillance. Moving pictures of the train taken just before the wreck reveal to Blakeley a man leaping from the train with his stolen grip. Investigation proves that the man's name is Sullivan. Mrs. Conway, the woman for whom Blakeley bought a Pullman ticket, tries to make a bargain with him for the forged notes, not knowing that they are missing. Blakeley and an amateur detective investigate the home of Sullivan's sister. From a servant Blakeley learns that Alison West had been there on a visit and Sullivan had been attentive to her. Sullivan is the husband of a daughter of the murdered man. Blakeley's house is ransacked by the police. He learns that the affair between Alison and his partner is off.

CHAPTER XXVII.—Continued.

And when the endless meal was over, and yards of white veils had been tied over pounds of hair—or is it, too, bought by the yard?—and some eight ensembles with their abject complements had been packed into three automobiles and a trap, I drew a long breath and faced about. I had just then only one object in life—to find Alison, to assure her of my absolute faith and confidence in her, and to offer my help and my poor self, if she would let me, in her service.

She was not easy to find. I searched the lower floor, the veranda and the grounds, circumspectly. Then I ran into a little English girl who turned out to be her maid, and who also was searching. She was concerned because her mistress had no dinner, and because the tray of food she carried would soon be cold. I took the tray from her, on the glimpse of something white on the shore, and that was how I met the girl again.

She was sitting on an over-turned boat, her chin in her hands, staring out to sea. The soft tide of the bay lapped almost at her feet, and the draperies of her white gown melted hazily into the sands. She looked like a wraith, a despondent phantom of the sea, although the adjective is redundant. Nobody ever thinks of a cheerful phantom. Strangely enough, considering her evident sadness, she was whistling softly to herself, over and over, some dreary little minor air that sounded like a Bohemian dirge. She glanced up quickly when I made a misstep and my dishes jingled. All considered, the tray was out of the picture; the sea, the misty starlight, the girl, with her beauty—even the sad little whistle that stopped now and then to go bravely on again, as though it fought against the odds of a trembling lip. And then I came, accompanied by a tray of little silver dishes that jingled and an unmistakable odor of broiled chicken!

"Oh!" she said quickly; and then, "Oh! I thought you were Jenkins."

"Timeo Donaos—what's the rest of it?" I asked, tendering my offering. "You didn't have any dinner, you know." I sat down beside her. "See, I'll be the table. What was the old fairy tale? 'Little goat bleat; little table appear!' I'm perfectly willing to be the goat, too."

She was laughing rather tremulously.

"We never do meet like other people, do we?" she asked. "We really ought to shake hands and say how are you."

"I don't want to meet you like other people, and I suppose you always think of me as wearing the other fellow's clothes," I returned meekly. "I'm doing it again; I don't seem to be able to help it. These are Granger's that I have on now."

She threw back her head and laughed again, joyously, this time.

"Oh, it's so ridiculous," she said, "and you have never seen me when I was not eating! It's too prosaic!"

"Which reminds me that the chicken is getting cold, and the ice warm," I suggested. "At the time, I thought there could be no place better than the farm-house kitchen—but this is. I ordered all this for something I want to say to you—the sea, the sand, the stars."

"How alliterative you are!" she said, trying to be flippant. "You are not to say anything until I have had my supper. Look how the things are spilled around!"

But she ate nothing, after all, and pretty soon I put the tray down in the sand. I said little; there was no hurry. We were together, and time meant nothing against that age-long wash of the sea. The air blew her hair in small damp curls against her face, and little by little the tide retreated, leaving our boat an oasis in a waste of gray sand.

"If seven maids with seven mops swept it for half a year
Do you suppose, the walrus said, that they could get it clear?"

she threw at me once when she must have known I was going to speak. I held her hand, and as long as I merely held it she let it lie warm in mine. But when I raised it to my lips, and kissed the soft, open palm, she drew it away without displeasure.

"Not that, please," she protested, and fell to whistling softly again, her chin in her hands. "I can't sing," she said, to break an awkward pause, "and so, when I'm fidgety, or have something on my mind, I whistle. I hope you don't dislike it?"

"I love it," I asserted warmly. I did; when she pursed her lips like that I was mad to kiss them.

"I saw you—at the station," she said suddenly. "You—you were in a hurry to go." I did not say anything, and after a pause she drew a long breath. "Men are queer, aren't they?" she said, and fell to whistling again.

After awhile she sat up as if she had made a resolution. "I am going to confess something," she announced suddenly. "You said, you know, that you had ordered all this for something you—you wanted to say to me. But the fact is, I fixed it all—came here, I mean, because—I knew you would come, and I had something to tell you. It was such a miserable thing I—needed the accessories to help me out."

"I don't want to hear anything that distresses you to tell," I assured her. "I didn't come here to force your confidence, Alison. I came because I couldn't help it." She did not object to my use of her name.

"Have you found the—your papers?" she asked, looking directly at me for almost the first time.

"Not yet. We hope to."

"The—police have not interfered with you?"

"They haven't had any opportunity," I equivocated. "You needn't distress yourself about that, anyhow."

"But I do. I wonder why you still believe in me? Nobody else does."

"I wonder," I repeated, "why I do!"

"If you produce Harry Sullivan," she was saying, partly to herself, "and if you could connect him with—Mr. Bronson, and get a full account of why he was on the train, and all that, it—it would help, wouldn't it?"

I acknowledged that it would. Now that the whole truth was almost in my possession, I was stricken with the old cowardice. I did not want to know what she might tell me. The yellow line on the horizon, where the moon was coming up, was a broken bit of golden chain; my heel in the sand was again pressed on a woman's yielding fingers; I pulled myself together with a jerk.

"In order that what you tell me may help me, if it will," I said constrainedly, "it would be necessary, perhaps, that you tell it to the police. Since they have found the end of the necklace—"

"The end of the necklace!" she repeated slowly. "What about the end of the necklace?"

I stared at her. "Don't you remember"—I leaned forward—"the end of the cameo necklace, the part that was broken off, and was found in the black sealskin bag, stained with—with blood?"

"Blood," she said dully. "You mean that you found the broken end? And then—you had my good pocket-book, and you saw the necklace in it, and you—must have thought—"

"I didn't think anything," I hastened to assure her. "I tell you, Alison, I never thought of anything but that you were unhappy, and that I had no right to help you. God knows, I thought you didn't want me to help you."

She held out her hand to me and I took it between both of mine. No word of love had passed between us, but I felt that she knew and understood. It was one of the moments that come seldom in a lifetime, and then only in great crises, a moment of perfect understanding and trust.

Then she drew her hand away and sat, erect and determined, her fingers laced in her lap. As she talked the moon came up slowly and threw its bright pathway across the water. Back of us, in the trees beyond the sea wall, a sleepy bird chirruped drowsily, and a wave, larger and bolder than its brothers, sped up the sand, bringing the moon's silver to our very feet. I bent toward the girl.

"I am going to ask just one question."

"Anything you like." Her voice was almost dreary.

"Was it—because of anything you are going to tell me that you refused Richey?"

She drew her breath in sharply.

"No," she said, without looking at me. "No. That was not the reason."

She Was Sitting on an Overturned Boat.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Alison's Story.

She told her story evenly, with her eyes on the water, only now and then, when I, too, sat looking seaward, I thought she glanced at me furtively. And once, in the middle of it, she stopped altogether.

"You don't realize it, probably," she protested, "but you look like a—a war god. Your face is horrible."

"I will turn my back, if it will help any," I said stormily, "but if you expect me to look anything but murderous, why, you don't know what I am going through with. That's all."

The story of her meeting with the Curtis woman was brief enough. They had met in Rome first, where Alison and her mother had taken a villa for a year. Mrs. Curtis had hovered on the ragged edges of society there, pleading the poverty of the south since the war as a reason for not going out more. There was talk of a brother, but Alison had not seen him, and after a scandal which implicated Mrs. Curtis and a young attache of the Austrian embassy, Alison had been forbidden to see the woman.

"The women had never liked her, anyhow," she said. "She did unconventional things, and they are very conventional there. And they said she did not always pay her—her gambling debts. I didn't like them. I thought they didn't like her because she was poor—and popular. Then—we came home, and I almost forgot her, but last spring, when mother was not well—she had taken grandfather to the Riviera, and it always uses her up—we went to Virginia Hot Springs, and we met them there, the brother, too, this time. His name was Sullivan, Harry Pinckney Sullivan."

"I know. Go on."

"Mother had a nurse, and I was alone a great deal, and they were very kind to me. I—I saw a lot of them. The brother rather attracted me, partly—partly because he did not make love to me. He even seemed to avoid me, and I was piqued. I had been spoiled, I suppose. Most of the other men I knew had—had—"

"I knew that, too," I said bitterly, and moved away from her a trifle. I was brutal, but the whole story was a long torture. I think she knew what I was suffering, for she showed no resentment.

"It was early and there were few people around—none that I cared about. And mother and the nurse played cribbage eternally, until I felt as though the little pegs were driven into my brain. And when Mrs. Curtis arranged drives and picnics, I—I slipped away and went. I suppose you won't believe me, but I had never done that kind of thing before, and I—well, I have paid up, I think."

"What sort of looking chap was Sullivan?" I demanded. I had got up and was pacing back and forward on the said. I remember kicking savagely at a bit of water-soaked board that lay in my way.

"Very handsome—as large as you are, but fair, and even more erect."

I drew my shoulders up sharply. I am straight enough, but I was fairly sagging with jealous rage.

"When mother began to get around, somebody told her that I had been going about with Mrs. Curtis and her brother, and we had a dreadful time. I was dragged home like a bad child. Did anybody ever do that to you?"

"Nobody ever cared. I was born an orphan," I said, with a cheerless attempt at levity. "Go on."

"Did You Marry Him?" I Demanded.

"If Mrs. Curtis knew, she never said anything. She wrote me charming letters, and in the summer, when they went to Cresson, she asked me to visit her there. I was too proud to let her know that I could not go where I wished, and so—I sent Polly, my maid, to her aunt's in the country, pretended to go to Seal Harbor, and really—went to Cresson. You see I warned you it would be an unpleasant story."

I went over and stood in front of her. All the accumulated jealousy of the last few weeks had been fired by what she told me. If Sullivan had come across the sands just then, I think I would have strangled him with my hands, out of pure hate.

"Did you marry him?" I demanded. My voice sounded hoarse and strange in my ears. "That's all I want to know. Did you marry him?"

"No."

I drew a long breath.

"You—cared about him?"

She hesitated.

"No," she said finally. "I did not care about him."

I sat down on the edge of the boat and mopped my hot face. I was heartily ashamed of myself, and mingled with my abasement was a great relief. If she had not married him, and had not cared for him, nothing else was of any importance.

"I was sorry, of course, the moment the train had started, but I had wired I was coming, and I could not go back, and then when I got there, the place was charming. There were no neighbors, but we fished and rode and motored, and—it was moonlight, like this."

I put my hand over both of hers, clasped in her lap. "I know," I acknowledged repentantly, "and—people do queer things when it is moonlight. The moon has got me to-night, Alison. If I am a boor, remember that, won't you?"

Her fingers lay quiet under mine. "And so," she went on with a little sigh, "I—began to think perhaps I cared. But all the time I felt that there was something not quite right. Now and then Mrs. Curtis would say or do something that gave me a queer start, as if she had dropped a mask for a moment. And there was trouble with the servants; they were almost insolent. I couldn't understand. I don't know when it dawned on me that the old Baron Cavalcanti had been right when he said they were not my kind of people. But I wanted to get away, wanted it desperately."

"Of course, they were not your kind," I cried. "The man was married! The girl Jennie, a housemaid, was a spy in Mrs. Sullivan's employ. If he had pretended to marry you I would have killed him! Not only that, but the man he murdered, Harrington, was his wife's father. And I'll see him hang by the neck yet if it takes every energy and every penny I possess."

I could have told her so much more gently, have broken the shock for her; I have never been proud of that evening on the sand. I was alternately a boor and a ruffian—like a hurt youngster who passes the blow that has hurt him on to his playmate, that both may bawl together. And now Alison sat, white and cold, without speech.

Leaves Pennies in Church.

A Boston clergyman, commenting on the large number of cents in the average church collection, said that when on a recent Monday he had offered a newswoman outside the subway station a 5-cent piece in payment for a newspaper she threw up her hand, remarking:

"Why is it that men never have pennies on Monday morning? It is the only day in the week I have trouble making change."

"My good woman," replied the clergyman, the reason is that on Sunday they leave their pennies in church.'

Spring Debility

Felt by so many upon the return of warm weather is due to the impure, impoverished, devitalized condition of the blood which causes that tired feeling and loss of appetite as well as the pimples, boils and other eruptions so common at this season.

It is cured by the great constitutional remedy which effects its wonderful cures, not simply because it contains sarsaparilla, but because it combines the utmost remedial values of more than twenty different ingredients. There is no real substitute for Hood's Sarsaparilla. If urged to buy any preparation said to be "just as good," you may be sure it is inferior, costs less to make, and yields the dealer a larger profit.

ITCHED SO COULD NOT SLEEP

"I suffered from the early part of December until nearly the beginning of March with severe skin eruptions on my face and scalp. At first I treated it as a trivial matter. But after having used castile soap, medicated washrags, cold cream, vanishing cream, etc., I found no relief whatever. After that I diagnosed my case as eczema, because of its dry, scaly appearance. The itching and burning of my scalp became so intense that I thought I should go mad, having not slept regularly for months past, only at intervals, waking up now and then because of the burning and itching of my skin. Having read different testimonials of cures by the Cuticura Remedies, I decided to purchase a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. After using them for a few days I recognized a marked change in my condition. I bought about two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and five cakes of Cuticura Soap in all, and after a few days I was entirely free from the itching and burning. My eczema was entirely cured, all due to using Cuticura Soap and Ointment daily. Hereafter I will never be without a cake of Cuticura Soap on my washstand. I highly recommend the Cuticura Remedies to anyone suffering from similar skin eruptions and hope you will publish my letter so that others may learn of Cuticura Remedies and be cured." Preventing a Disturbance.

Colonel Scotchem was weary. He had had a very arduous day retreating from the enemy, and he wished to recoup his strength in order that he might retreat still further on the morrow.

"MacPherson," he said to his new servant, "I'm going to snatch forty winks' sleep. Stay in my tent and see that I'm not disturbed."

Mac saluted. Five minutes later the snores of Colonel Scotchem were cut short by the loud report of a gun.

"Great Scott!" cried the colonel, "Are the enemy upon us?"

"Na, dinna fret," replied Mac, inserting his head reassuringly through the tent flap, "It was only a wee mousie. But as I thought he might wake you up I shot him."—Answers.

IV. SINGLE STRAP BUGGY HARNESS

The harness illustrated above is one of extra quality—better than the price indicates. Just right for a vehicle holding two—not too heavy looking for a rig for one—but strong enough for a surrey carrying four people. A useful style—trimmed in nickle, brass or imitation rubber.

Price only $15.75—GUARANTEED too. Stitched 10 to the inch, reinforced where the strain comes, round edge finished throughout. BRIDLE—5-8 in. box cheeks, round stays, nose band. BREAST COLLAR—3 in. V shaped. MARTINGLE—single strap 1 in. BACK BAND—1 in. doubled and stitched. LINES—7-8 x 11-8 in. spring ends. BREECHING—1 3-4 in. HIP STRAPS—3-4 in. TRIMMINGS—nickle, brass or imitation rubber.

IF?

If harness never had to be repaired;
If all leather was cheap and good
If horses never ran away—
If accidents never happened

THEN

Any harness would do for you
Everybody would guarantee their harness
All harness would give satisfaction
And buyers would not be disappointed.

BUT

Cheap leather is not strong and soon becomes brittle; cuts and blemishes can be filled and hidden with paste and heel ball. Few people can tell the quality of trimmings when they are new, and many manufacturers sacrifice quality to get a cheap price.

THEREFORE

To be on the safe side, buy harness that are sold as harness should be sold—
Harness of known value that bear the trade-mark of a responsible manufacturer, and have the guarantee attached insuring you that they are what they look to be.
GEMCO Harness are such—

Every set is carefully inspected at the factory. They are sold by your local dealer at advertised prices and guaranteed by him and by us. He will give you a signed certificate agreeing to make good any defects of material or workmanship without expense to you. The trade-mark "Gemco" is found on all box loops in GEMCO harness—your money back if not satisfied. If you want more information, write us and mention your dealer's name.

Spring Turbans

Everybody may be pleased in the new spring millinery. There are hats large and hats small, but more especially hats small. There are hats soft and collapsible, and there are pressed shapes. There are hats of braid on wire frames and hats of braid on no frames. There are hats grave and hats gay, and there are hats expensive. There may be hats inexpensive, but they are hardly classed as millinery. Here is a good place to observe and point out that it is only in the west one may find genteel looking hats of good materials at moderate prices. This is accounted for by the fact that the grade of intelligence of the millinery worker of the west is apt to be much higher than that of the worker on the Atlantic coast. Taste and intelligence show in the hat. The young ladies in a western house look as if they had graduated from a high school or academy, and naturally have an advantage in many ways over the young person recently belched forth from the steerage. Therefore, if you are looking for real millinery in a not expensive hat, look close home if you live west of the Alleghanies. Your millinery will be less freakish, of better material and workmanship and incomparably more ladylike.

The hats shown here show a braid hat, a pressed shape and a soft wireless hat. They represent real millinery. They are not poised at a drunken angle, nor set too primly straight. They have style and are very generally becoming, no matter what style is preferred.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

USEFUL COSTUME.

Here is a very compact little costume for every-day wear; it is suitable for almost any firm woolen material, especially tweed, in which there are so many soft colorings this season.

The skirt is a seven-gored pattern and is made quite a short walking length; all the seams are wrapped.

The left front of coat is cut to wrap over with a square sort of tab, that is fastened by hooks and eyes or press studs.

Silver and Gold Nets.

Instead of buying a hair net which will be invisible when worn over an elaborate coiffure, the fashionable woman now buys one of silver or gold with which to keep in order her loose tresses.

The chignon, the most popular of new hair effects, is covered with this inked and shimmering metallic net, and when the hair is a lustrous black the effect of a gold net over the dark hair is distinctly unique.

Frill With a Collar.

The frill that has been worn so long flat around the neck has been given a new touch by joining a standing collar to it.

NEW STYLES IN BLOUSES

Care Should Be Used in Selecting Material That Will Harmonize With Wardrobe.

The introduction of color on blouses for everyday wear is attractive. The use of anything but white has its disadvantage in that it compels the wearer to cling to one color scheme throughout the costume; and every woman knows how annoying it is to find that she only has a blue blouse clean when she is wearing a brown suit.

The way to overcome this is to choose one's blouses rather carefully after one has made up a plan for the summer wardrobe. If you make your blouses now in haphazard fashion, you may be compelled to get suits and hats to go with them—which is putting the cart before the horse.

Some women keep to one color scheme as nearly as possible throughout the season; they know that blue and green and black, possibly, are their chief colors, and they hold on to these regardless of what the dyers and the manufacturers produce. This is the secret of really good dressing, and you will find, upon observation, that it is the method of nearly all the women who are conspicuous for taste in clothes.

If you know your own mind quite thoroughly in regard to the colors you will choose for your spring and summer suits, then it is quite wise to go ahead with your blouses; but if not, it is best to confine one's self to the choice of black, pin-dotted, with white, and dark bright blue, which goes with such a quantity of other colors.

The big bands are in very good style this year, and they are among the chief colors introduced on white materials. Golden browns, soft shades of green, and many tones of blue are used, as well as cerise, pomegranate red, and any of the new wine tones.

Pink is to be in high fashion this summer, in all shades but the pastel ones; Killarney pink, coral, flame and watermelon are among the tones we will see most used on white sheer blouses of muslin, marquisette and batiste. Finely dotted swiss will also come into favor as a fabric for blouses, and it will have many adherents, as it wears and washes well and looks exceptionally attractive under linen suits.

New Pouch Bags.

Pouch bags are cut with an oval bottom, covered with black velvet on one side and a bright-colored satin on the other. The top, which is joined to the bottom without fulness, is finished on top with black satin ribbon. It is lined with the satin.

The top has a draw string of satin ribbon through a casing, long enough to hang over arm. The lining may be in coral green, burnt orange or rose purple.

A Purple Velvet Gown

By FRANK A. WELLS

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

Arthur looked in perplexity from Angelica's dirt-streaked face and bedraggled costume to the trembling and cowering Thomas Jefferson White. Thomas Jefferson's complexion, normally rich seal brown, had for the moment assumed the pleasing tint peculiar to an ashen heap.

"Get out of here and finish that work, and mind what you are about! Won't you please sit down?"

The first portion of the remark was addressed to Thomas, who departed with commendable promptness; the latter, naturally in a more conciliatory tone, to Angelica, who flung herself into the indicated chair.

Arthur carefully surveyed Angelica and his heart sank until he imagined that he heard it thump against the soles of his patent leathers.

Angelica's purple velvet gown bore numerous huge blotches of black; her plume, recently nodding in its immaculate whiteness, dropped ashamed beneath a burden of sooty filth. There was also dirt upon Angelica's face and fire in Angelica's eye.

Arthur realized that this was an occasion calling for the exercise of the most delicate diplomacy. His inquiries, deftly put, at length elicited a fairly coherent recital of the events immediately preceding the stormy advent of Angelica into his sanctum sanctorum.

The story was: Thomas Jefferson, in the discharge of one of his numerous duties as factotum of the gents' furnishing house of Burke & Foster (Arthur being the first named of the firm) had inadvertently swept a mass of filth, the basis of which was soot, from the top of the unrolled display window awning at the identical instant that Angelica passed beneath, with disastrous results to both hat and gown.

"What is the extent of the damage?" Arthus asked.

"It's ruined," Angelica glowered.

"I—er—refer to the pecuniary loss,"

"Write Disastrous Results to Hat and Gown."

Arthur hastily interjected, discerning a resumption of the storm.

Angelica's brow assumed a deep frown and she cogitated for a moment.

"I paid $300 for my suit," she announced uncompromisingly.

Arthur ruminated. Even to his experienced eye the gown seemed ruined. Being unacquainted with millinery fabrics, he was not so certain with respect to the hat. Obviously, it was Thomas Jefferson's fault. It was also as obvious that as Thomas Jefferson received but eight dollars per week for his more or less valuable services, upon which he was engaged in the task of supporting a helpmeet and rearing numerous and hungry progeny, it was as possible to deduct the amount from his wages as to extract blood from a turnip.

Arthur, as the visible representative of the firm, would have to do something. The easiest way out of the matter would have been to write out a check for the amount without further ado. But it unfortunately happened that three hundred dollars was the exact sum Arthur required to complete the purchase price of a new motor car upon which he had set his heart, and he was not disposed to give up the car without an effort.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," he announced hopefully. "If you will send me the hat and gown, I will have them cleaned."

Angelica was not disposed to be unreasonable.

"Very well," she answered in her most freezing tone, "I will give you a chance."

She was on the point of sailing majestically from office when she caught sight of her reflection in a mirror and hesitated. Arthur understood and, springing gallantly across the room, with a deep bow flung open the door of a lavatory.

At this evidence of thoughtfulness, Angelica thawed perceptibly, and it was with a little less than her queen-of-all-the-Russias air that she entered the lavatory and closed the door.

Fifteen minutes later it was a different Angelica who emerged. Her face wore its usual aspect, and while the spots in the gown still looked big there was a vast improvement in the general appearance of the garment, and her hat, denuded of its plume, which she bore in her hand, was really presentable.

Arthur looked at her if she were a butterfly. Angelica, furiously angry, and with soiled face and garments, was relieved of the greater portion of the visible effects of Thomas Jefferson White's blunder, and restored to a state of partial calm, was rather more than charming.

Arthur was humbleness itself as he bowed her out, and Angelica was graciousness personified. After which Arthur sat down and made an honest effort to clear away the mass of mail on his desk. But somehow Angelica's face as he had last seen it continuously intruded itself between his eyes and his work until, noon arriving, he gave up despair and departed for lunch.

Then he sought out his friend Mr. Samuel Hayes, of the Universal Dry Cleaning Company.

"Sam," said Arthur, depositing his glass upon the mahogany, "can you clean purple velvet?"

Mr. Hayes frowned meditatively at the bit of twisted lemon peel at the bottom of the glass, and finally answered confidently:

"Show me anything I can't clean in the dry goods line and I'll blow you to a dinner."

Arthur was delighted. Arrangements were completed on the spot for restoring the purple velvet gown to its pristine beauty, and Arthur hastened back to his office.

Two hours later the velvet gown, carefully wrapped by Arthur's own hands, was speeding via special messenger to the plant of the Universal Dry Cleaning Company.

If Arthur imagined that his troubles were over he was speedily disabused of the ideal. The expressed confidences of his friend Sam was not borne out in deed. It proved an easy task to rehabilitate the hat, but the gown—ah, the gown!

The stains refused to go, even under the stimulus offered his cleaners. Meanwhile, Mr. Hayes learned to anathematize his friend Arthur in a most whole-souled manner. Arthur, on his part, thought evil things of Mr. Hayes and took a fiendish pleasure in exacting the penalty of the dinner, when that gentleman at last confessed himself beaten.

Then began a campaign among the cleaning establishments of the great city the like of which was never seen before. Arthur scarcely ate or slept Business was neglected. His face became haggard. His eyes assumed a wild, unearthly light. By day and by night the gown was upon his mind—when his thoughts were not ocupied by the owner of the gown, whom he had seen several times, ostensibly in regard to the progress he was making in the elimination of the spots.

As far as Angelica herself was concerned, she had lost interest in the fate of the gown, and her attention became rather forcibly centered in Arthur.

Summer was passing by. The gown, like a frayed and oft-rejected manuscript, came back from the last of the dry cleaners, the pile practically gone from it and the results of Thomas Jefferson White's misguided efforts bigger and blacker than ever.

Arthur called at the home of Angelica, bearing his personal check for three hundred dollars.

Some hours later he left. The steps which led up to Angelica's front door may have been in their usual place, but as Arthur floated on air, he neither saw not needed them. Also, the three hundred-dollar check reposed in his pocketbook.

The following day, the stub bearing Angelica's name was marked "Cancelled," and the next following displayed the name of a well-known jewelry firm.

Autumn arrived. Thomas Jefferson White, resplendent in a new suit of black and distinguished by his broad and happy grin, opened the door for an endless procession of guests at Angelica's home.

As the harpers struck up the wedding march and the bride glided into the large drawing room, a universal gasp of astonishment went up, when it was discovered that instead of the conventional white she wore purple velvet.

From Dickens After Death.

When I was in Australia my father and I used to correspond with each other regularly. I remember receiving his last letter to me after I had heard the news of his death. In this letter, written only three weeks before his death, he wrote: "You will doubtless have seen in many of the papers that the queen is going to bestow all manner of titles and honors upon me, but you can take it from me personally that during my life I shall remain as I sign myself at the end of this letter," He signed himself plain "Charles Dickens."—Alfred Tennyson Dickens, in the Strand.

Before Allowing an Operation

Please Read These Two Letters.

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before. Then after all that suffering Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored her health.

HERE IS HER OWN STATEMENT.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement—I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for several months without much relief, and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. To-day I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise every woman who is afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. Orville Rock, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Mich.

"There never was a worse case."

Rockport, Ind.—"There never was a worse case of woman's ills than mine, and I cannot begin to tell you what I suffered. For over two years I was not able to do anything. I was in bed for a month and the doctor said nothing but an operation would cure me. My father suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so to please him I took it, and I improved wonderfully, so I am able to travel, ride horseback, take long rides and never feel any ill effects from it. I can only ask other suffering women to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation."—Mrs. Margaret Meredith, R. F. D. No. 3, Rockport, Ind.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the letters are published without their permission, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

FREE SAMPLE CURED OLD PERSON'S BOWEL TROUBLE

One of the most remarkable proofs of the unusual laxative merit contained in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is that it is effective not only in people in the prime of life, but at the extremes of ages. As many letters are received from mothers regarding the cures of children, as from men and women of sixty, seventy and eighty years of age. It must be truly a wonderful laxative.

In the cure of constipation and bowel trouble in old people it has no equal. It corrects the constipation, dispels the headache, biliousness, gas, drowsiness after eating, etc. People advancing in years should see to it that their bowels move freely, and if they do not to take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You can prolong your life by healthy bowel action. Clogged bowels invite disease. Women about to pass the menstrual period cannot do better than use Syrup Pepsin several times a week until the system has settled to its future condition.

Among the strongest supporters of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are Mr. W. G. Zorn of New Decatur, Ala., and Mr. George S. Spaulding of the National Soldiers' Home, Kansas, both elderly men. The regular size bottles can be bought of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar, but a free sample bottle can be had by sending your address to the doctor.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

as compared with any other range of any make whatsoever, that you might buy.

¶ Any other range; any range you ever saw takes its draft through the front end, next to the fire and right underneath the grate.

¶ This air is about 50 to 70 degrees in temperature. The range must burn enough coal to bring the temperature up to 700 degrees, or baking heat

¶ Notice that - ordinary ranges have to burn enough coal to raise the air from 70 to 700 or 630 degrees.

CHAMPION RANGES

take the draft in at the opposite end, pass it under the bottom before it goes under the grate, and the air picks up enough from the waste heat under the bottom to reach about 250 degrees.

¶ The fire has to burn only enough coal to raise it from 250 to 700—450 degrees, as against 630 in ordinary ranges.

¶ CHAMPION RANGES save about 1-3 in fuel, every day they are used. This will pay the full cost of ther ange in 3 to 5 years, making it cheaper to you than any other.

¶ No experiment; been made and used for 18 years by thousands. Patented; can only be had from our agents. Guaranteed as represented or money back.

BLOWN-OUT SHOT WAS THE CAUSE

Company Not Blamed By Jury for Elk Garden Mine Disaster.

After a session covering almost two days the coroner's jury which probed the Ott mine disaster, near Elk Garden in which 23 miners, all Americans except one, lost their lives last Monday morning, rendered a verdict Friday afternoon that the men came to their deaths by a blown out charge in the Dean heading, one of the three headings of the mine, causing the dust to ignite, the fatal explosion following and that no blame attaches to the Davis Coal & Coke Company. The jury of six men was summoned by Coroner Rollman and the witnesses were examed by Chief State Mine Inspector Laing.

In all there were about 12 witnesses, including Assistant Chief State Mining Inspector O'Connor, District Inspectors Martin and Plaster, the two men that operated the fan that supplied the mine with air, Superintendent Orestes Tibbetts, of the mines of the Davis Coal & Coke Company at Beryl, and a number of miners. Superintendent Tibbets, who headed rescuers told of conditions found in the mine. The testimony all went to show that the company had not been derelict.

The jury began its work Thursday afternoon about 4 o'clock, held a session of two hours Thursday night and concluded Friday afternoon about four o'clock. The jury was about ten minutes reaching the verdict. The inquest was held in the Elk Garden school house. Arthur Arnold, prosecuting attorney of Mineral county, W. Va., and Attorney Bower, of the Davis Coal & Coke Company, with headquarters at Elkins, were present at the hearing.

The exact text of the verdict of the coroner's jury is:

"That the 23 miners came to their death by blown-out shot fired by James Pritchard or his son Arthur.

Baptists Growing.

The Watchman in an editorial headed, "Baptists the Largest Protestant Body," says:

When the full statistics of religious bodies in the United States, according to the census of 1900 were published about two years ago, the Watchman calculated that, from the rates of increase between 1890 and 1900, the census of 1910 would show that the Baptists are the largest Protestant body in the United States. The figures of religious bodies, according to the census of 1910, will not be available for several years. But Dr. H. K. Carroll of the Methodist Missionary Society and formerly superintendent of the religious bodies department of the United States Census has published his annual statistics for 1910, which confirm the calculations of the Watchman. According toDr. Carroll the Baptists, North, South and Negro, now number 5,454,872 and the Methodists, North, South and Negro, 5,253,529 an excess for the Baptists of 201,344.

WAR ON THE COMMON FLY

Woman's Civic Club Enlisted in Good Cause

The common pestiferous house fly is the bane of the average housewife as well as every bald headed man, especially so on hot, sultry days—like those we used to have last August, not, however this May, 1911.

Fly time hasn't arrived yet, but the members of the Woman's Civic Club, like troubles, are always with us, and they propose to forestall the fly. To this end they have launched a house fly campaign and they prooose to wage unrelenting war. They will be manfully seconded in their efforts by the men, especially the bald-headed men.

The common house fly is bred and born in filth. In stables and other places where dirt and foul matter accumulate, are hot beds for the breeding of the fly. It requires from ten to fourteen days for the fly to produce a generation. A good way of expressing the vital human relation of flies would be by the use of the three "f's"—filth, flies, food.

During the Spanish-American war a great plague of fever broke out in the different camps of our army. It was noticeable to all that flies were numerous, both at the mess tents and on the refuse of the camp. Flour was sprinkled on the refuse of the camp and during mess the same flour-laden flies crawled over the soldiers' food. Some germ cultures were placed on the earth and the flies allowed to walk over them and from these cultures hosts of typhoid fever germs were developed. It was thus proven beyond question that flies were carriers of disease.

The most practical way to prevent the spread of fly diseases is to destroy all filth, screen our houses and kill the flies directly whenever possible.

The Civic Club is to be commended for its educational efforts along this line and also for its efforts in making the town cleaner and consequently more sanitary.

A bulletin recently issued by the Fly-Fighting Committee of the American Civic Association of Washington, D. C., contains, among other things the following, which the committee most desires to impress upon the minds of the American people:

DON'T allow flies in your house.

DON'T permit them near your food, especially milk.

DON'T buy foodstuff where flies are tolerated.

DON'T have feeding places where flies can load themselves with ejections from typhoid or dysenteric patients.

DON'T allow your fruits and confections to be exposed to the swarms of flies.

DON'T let flies crawl over the baby's mouth and swarm upon the nipple of the nursing bottle.

The next meeting of the Civic Club will be held on Tuesday, the 9th inst., when all members are urgently requested to be present, as business of great importance is to be discussed and action taken.

Auction of furniture, etc., at the Oakland Hotel Saturday. Many bargains will be offered. This is your opportunity to get furniture at your own price.

A. D. Naylor & Co. unloaded another car of Turnbull wagons last week. He has an enormous sale on this wagon.

DISASTER MAKES DESTITUTE HOMES

Aid Asked for Widows And Orphans of Elk Garden Mine Disaster Victims.

An appeal is made for aid for the widows and orphans of No 20 mine disaster at Elk Garden, W. Va. Many of the widows are left in very destitute circumstances. In a number of cases infants from one month to a few months are left fatherless, and they and their mothers have no means of support. In one family four widows are left in destitute circumstanoes, three of them have very small children, all of them have had the bread winner taken. One widow is left with five little children. She needs help. One widow is left with two very small children, and will soon be a mother again.

The following resolution was adopted at a meeting of the town council of Elk Garden, May 1:

THE DEATH RECORD.

HIRAM P. TASKER.

Hiram P. Tasker, a former resident of Oakland, editor and compiler of land statistics in Allegany and Garrett counties, died in Baltimore on Saturday last at the age of about 70 years. He was the founder of the Oakland Herald and for a number of years was its editor. Mr. Tasker was a vigorous writer and a staunch Democrat of the old school. He was for many years engaged in compiling a comprehensive list of military lots and untaxed land in this and Allegany counties. For a number of years Mr. Tasker was a prominent figure in the politics of Garrett county. In the discussion of public questions, few writers of his day were better posted in matters pertaining to the affairs of Maryland. Among the leading politicians of the State he was both feared and respected.

Obituary.

On Wednesday morning, April 26th, Mrs. Nancy Lauchry passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Scott Friend, at Selbysport. She was perhaps the oldest person in the county, having reached the age of ninety eight years, eleven months and twenty-six days. She leaves behind her to mourn her departure two sons and a daughter and numerous relatives and friends.

She was born in Pennsylvania and at an early age was converted and joined the Disciples. After her removal to Maryland she untited with the Baptist church of which she remained a consistent member until her departure. It was the good fortune of the writer to have been her pastor and to have known her for nearly six years. During that time her manifest faith in God was an inspiration. When I last saw her she was very weak and sometimes her mind would wander. She would talk to me about mutual acquaintances and then she would forget my presence and repeat softly to herself passage after passage of Scripture. She seemed to be living partly in this world and partly in the one whither she was going. For her death had no terrors. It was simply departing to be with her Lord. We are sad because of the parting, but are glad that her pilgrimage is over and that she is with those who long ago had been parted from her. Those who are left have our sympathy and prayers that God may give them comfort and that their lives may be so ordered that when the death angel summons them that they may be ready to answer his call with joy.

Her funeral was preached by her pastor in the Deep Creek church and her body was laid to rest in the Thayerville cemetery until God shall call it forth in the resurrection day.

Temperance

FLAG OF TOTAL ABSTINENCE

Dr. Amos P. Wilder, Consul General for United States at Shanghai, Talks on Temperance.

A recent issue of "The Celestial Empire," published at Shanghai, contains a most stirring speech by Dr. Amos P. Wilder, consul general for the United States at Shanghai, on "A New Civic and Christian Duty—Total Abstinence." The American consul general said: "I want to talk sensibly and not unkindly. I shall try not to forget that the world has known alcoholic drinks for 5,000 years, though by their sanctions Hindu, Buddhist, and Mohammedan sections have been protected against it until of late. I shall not forget that our ancestors quite generally used these beverages; that our relatives and friends are still doing so; indeed, their use is quite general. I do not mean to scold anybody, but if possible to say something that shall lead some to be afraid of alcohol—some because they fear it will affect their health; others because of the menace to the state; and some others, perhaps, who do not fear for themselves, but begin to see that it may be their drinking which encourages others to drink.

"I have been fortunate myself in that I was born and reared in the state of Maine, where prohibition has obtained for half a century. It is difficult to forbid liquor selling wholly as it is difficult wholly to enforce the laws against larceny or vagrancy, but there is no spirituous or malt liquor made in Maine, and, more important, drinking is not a part of the social life of the people—liquor does not appear at state banquets, nor on the family table. Citizens who themselves have no scruples about drinking are yet unwilling to violate the law of their state in securing liquor. These things are, of course, great gain; generation after generation is brought up who do not know liquor, do not need it. It is no virtue in such that they do not drink; they have been fortunate, I say, in not being schooled to alcohol, it is not a part of their life, they do not miss it, and they escaped its perils. I recall the horror with which as a boy of 17 on a visit to a neighboring state I first saw signs advertising strong drink and drinking shops in operation with consent of law.

"I have seen what an advantage it is personally not to be dependent on alcoholic drinks—to be able to go about one's business without the expense, the inconvenience, the risks of drinking; and I have seen the advantage of a social life in which wine, whisky, and all the rest are not only not needed, but not even thought of. For these reasons I must be interested in the question; also I must do my part in leading men to think about it. It is not necessary to reiterate the evils of drink. We will not stop for those who do not observe them, and who will not read to know that alcohol-poisoning is the major peril of the age in which we live. It is entrenched not only in profits, as was slavery, but also in appetite, and yields very slowly to attack. But it is being forced home, that nations may be wrecked today as in the past by alcohol; that while its reckless use continues man can never come to his full stature, and the vision of a higher humanity can never be fulfilled. My own country spends a billion dollars a year for drink.

"But drink's ravages are worse in some countries than in others, but one who will consult the literature (the extent of it is surprising, especially from French scientists) will find that the results of alcohol-poisoning alarms thoughtful men of France and Germany scarcely less than the countries which look with envy on the glass of wine leisurely sipped in a family group in beautiful France, or the quiet glass of beer "unter den linden." There may have been a time when all this was as harmless as it was innocent; it has gone. The bishop of Chalons' 30-page pamphlet reads like an appeal in a saloon ridden district of America, or a whisky-drinking British city. "One is justified in believing," he says. "That alcohol is at the present time the chief and most deadly of the plagues that infest humanity. Must one tell you that of a hundred insane there are twenty-one alcoholics? That of a hundred convicted criminals in our courts there are forty or fifty alcoholics? That of a hundred murderers there are sixty alcoholics?"

After referring to the ruin that came to hundreds of the small white population of China through drink, the consul general made an impassioned appeal to his hearers that was alive with striking facts, and he finally ended up by saying: "Total abstinence makes its claims to all. It is certainly the duty nearest at hand. It is the creed of many—to leave the world a little happier than they found it. Is this mere sentiment? Others paste over their desks a pretty paragraph to the effect that they expect to pass through the world but once, and if they have any good things to do for their fellows they want to do it quickly, or they will not pass this way again. Here again we have a laudable outreach; but is there body to it? Do they want to do these things badly enough to sacrifice a bit? If so let them fly the banner of total abstinence. Before God, I know of no more timely service to one's fellowmen."

The Conditions of Discipleship

By REV. H. M. TIMMONS
Pastor Washington Street Methodist Church, Houston, Texas

TEXT—If any man will be my Disciple, let him take up his cross and follow me.—Matthew 16:24.

Jesus is a great teacher and seeks to impart unto his followers fundamental truth. It is of utmost importance that men have a correct conception of Jesus Christ himself. Hence the question he asked the twelve in the beginning of this chapter, "Whom do men say that I the son of man, am?" What the world thinks of him is important, but he had a more personal question to ask: "Whom do ye say that I am?" Then Peter speaking as the father gave him utterance, said: "Thou are Christ, the son of the living God." This is the basic fact of Christianity.

Notwithstanding Peter gave utterance to this great truth, the master in a short while administers to him the sternest rebuke that he ever administered to any follower of his.

He then proceeds to outline the conditions of discipleship, "If any man will." The highest expression of religion is not to be found in reason. Our conclusions cannot be infallible, because they are the result of training, and, in some instances, conditions. Yet we should cultivate this faculty. The master never put a premium upon ignorance. He desires intelligent as well as faithful service.

Neither is the highest expression of religion found in emotion, though this is an important part of our natures. Strong men sometimes disparage emotion. The emotions are productive of great good and much happiness, but they cannot be depended upon as final in religious expression.

But the highest expression of religion is to be found in the human will. Christ is not concerned about who is able, for he has made it possible for every man to inherit eternal life. But he is vastly concerned about who will. One has said that the normal man is two-thirds will and one-third intellect. The intellect is the shell, the will is the powder within the shell that gives it its force and power. The feelings are the waves thrown off from the side of a great ship; the will is the rudder underneath, unseen, yet all important.

People who are governed entirely by their emotions are hard to handle and make most of the trouble in any sphere. A great locomotive can draw a large number of empty cars, but they make a great deal of noise and it is difficult to keep them on the track. It is necessary for the church to pull a great many empties, but they are noisy and unstable. Religion is not the extinction of the will. When we say "Thy will be done," it does not mean the destruction, but the development of our will to the point where it coincides with the will of God. Hugh Price Hughes has given an admirable definition of sanctification. He says: "It is a supreme desire not to want to have our own way."

"Let him deny himself." This means vastly more than physical self-denial. There is often a species of selfishness in self-denial. Men become recluses when they could be useful.

Ages ago certain classes of men thought they had found the secret of a holy life. They shut themselves up in monasteries at large. They learned what we learn today, that the greatest temptations are not the ones that come from without, but the ones that come from within. The strong man fortifies himself against the enemy that can be seen, then falls before the one that steals upon him from within his own life.

"And take up his cross." This indicates a positive life. We are not told to fall under the weight of the cross, but to bear up under it. We are not to be passive, inactive men under difficulties but men of victory. Victory was never won except by aggressiveness. The man of action, even though the action be not always commendable, is more honored than the man who has the courage to act at all. Every person's cross is not the same, but crosses there will be in every life. 'Tis the power to bear the cross and not to let the cross bear us that determines the character of our discipleship.

"And follow me." Christianity is not a code of laws. Rules cannot be made for every future condition of life. Instead of it being obedience to rules and regulations it is a life to be lived full and glorious in accordance with the will of God, which is revealed unto us. If we are willing we "shall know of the doctrine.

"Except ye become as little children ye shall in nowise enter the kingdom." The master does not mean for us to become puerile and childish. If ever strong men were needed to do the work that God wants done, that time is now.

What he wants is that we shall have the spirit of teachableness we find in the child. The child realizing its lack of knowledge seeks to learn. We are to have the same spirit with reference to religion. The spirit of God will not leave the willing mind in darkness.

Finally Christian character is not so much an attainment as it is a growth. At the last it will not be judged by its accomplishments, but by the progress it has made.

We should be proud to have a house that had been planned by a famous architect; but our life may be planned by the most glorious of all architects.

For Little Misses

LACY braids, embroidered batiste and mull, nets, laces, hair braids and silk go to make up the majority of hats for young girls and smaller misses. The shapes are more soft and bonnet like than ever and narrow side plaitings of sheer fabrics and lace are more favored than ever. Cascades of plaited ruffles fall about and over considerable of the face. Soft puffed crowns look like quaint old-time ideas revived for youthful wearers.

When the baby girl graduates from the regulation baby bonnet, she will don a bonnet-like hat, or a bonnet made on a light wire frame, quite elaborately trimmed with ribbons and lace and small flowers. Ribbons have always been the favorite trimming for children's millinery. This spring season it is to be used in greater abundance than ever. Small roses, tiny rose foliage and other little flowers like the forget-me-not and valley-lily, the cow-slip and tiny daisy, continue to reign as favorites for children. There is a little round hat made by shirring a large circle of silk or embroidered batiste or other sheer fabrics, on feather-bone. Four rows of shirrings form the up-turned brim, and the crown is just a puff of the material. This little cap is finished with a big rosette made of wide ribbon shirred. A variation of this model has a silk crown and brim of point de esprit. It is a highly successful novelty.

The regular plain bonnet is in high favor, and numbers of little hats are simply diminutives of the simple shapes worn by grown-ups. They are simply trimmed with ribbon.

Fig. 1 shows a pretty model of thin silk and lace Tuscan braid. The light wire shape is faced with silk and bound with braid. A soft tan crown of silk makes a foundation for the large circle of lace Tuscan which is posed over brim and crown. Ribbon, wide and soft, is laced through the braid and tied in a two-looped bow with hanging ends at the back. It is a model which may be worn by children from four to fourteen years old.

A pretty model for an older girl is shown in Fig. 2. The wire frame in this is covered first with chiffon, which is shirred for the facing. The hat is covered with row after row of side plaited lace on top of the crown, and about the brim. At the side crown the plaited lace is omitted and little stalks of lily-of-the-valley are set plainly over the chiffon.

A sash of wide soft ribbon finished with an immense bow at the back makes a complete finish for the hat. But a bunch of cow-slips or other small flowers may be added at the front, as shown in the picture.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

PRETTY BLOUSE.

Any one who likes to feel their throats free will be pleased with this blouse, which is cut in rather a low square. The material is arranged in tucks across front that are stitched to the bust; at the back there are three tucks each side.

The square is outlined with embroidery that is continued down the wrap over right front. The sleeves are trimmed with a point of embroidery, and are gathered into wrist-bands covered with the same.

Materials required: 2¾ yards 28 inches wide, 2½ yards embroidery.

Effective New Work.

An easy combination of materials that is being utilized for table covers, lamp mats, magazines and book covers and sofa pillows, is burlap with cut leather.

The design is cut from the leather, either suede or the soft glazed varieties, then is stitched to the burlap background, which shows a contrasting color.

Sometimes velvet is used instead of the leather, especially in sofa pillows and often along the line of stitching are sewn small brass or metal beads, to look like tiny nails.

What French Brides Are Wearing.

French brides have taken to wearing bridal dresses of malines or tulle in combination with Brussels lace flounces and voluminous enveloping veils are also of the maline or tulle.

DUTCH COLLAR AND CUFFS

Dainty Frills That Are Designed to Lighten Up a Dark Costume.

The girl who likes to lighten a dark costume with dainty frills, should make herself one of the sets of rounding Dutch collar and cuffs in plaited lawn.

The frills are made of fine white lawn or dotted muslin, and are cut three and a half inches wide for the collar, and two inches for the cuffs.

Mark the edge in a tiny scallop with a spool of two hundred cotton, and buttonhole in white or colored mercerized cotton in a shallow line. When finished sew into eighth of an inch side plaits and sew into narrow band the right length to fit around wrist and neck. The frill falls softly from the band or in the sleeves may be inverted and turned back, being caught at one side with a lace pin.

Instead of arranging in plaits, which are hard to iron, the frills may be run in thread tucks to give the fullness. This model is good for high turnover effects and for the Dutch collar. For the latter the strip should be made narrower at the ends than in the middle.

Surah Silks Again.

Surah twill silk in solid color is a material which is claiming much favor, being used by the best model houses in Paris for making tailored suits and three-piece costumes. This new surah has a high luster surface and is used in exactly the same manner as satins have been so freely employed recently.

Surah is especially well adapted for summer use in America. It is durable, sufficiently dressy for a handsome suit, is light weight, and, therefore, comfortable for summer use in many parts of the United States. More than this, domestic silk mills are equipped to produce surah silks.

Black Velvet Bags.

Black velvet bags are supplanting the gold mesh purses, long so dear to the heart of every woman. These new bags are of thick velvet and are framed in gold or silver. They are in many shapes, but all are suspended from the arm by heavy silken cords and tassels, very long, so that the bag drops almost to the knees. Some of the new bags are elaborately beaded, but generally the fabric is so fine in quality that it needs no other embellishment than its own elegance.

THE HAIR WILL SUFFER

Unless the Right Remedy Is Used.

Eczema of the scalp is one of the most annoying forms of this widespread disease. The sure cure for it is Resinol ointment. A child whose head was so encrusted that the hair was almost obliterated was practically cured in eight days. The scalp was washed with Resinol soap and then Resinol ointment was applied. Resinol stops itching instantly. It cures eczema on any surface of the body. Every form of eruptive skin disease yields to Resinol ointment. It cures ringworm, barber's itch, psoriasis, tetter, herpes, erythema, scald head and other irritating and eruptive skin diseases. As a dressing for burns and scalds Resinol is unequalled. A Resinol soap shampoo will stop dandruff and used with Resinol ointment always facilitates the cure. Resinol ointment is put up in opal jars in two sizes, fifty cents and a dollar. At all druggists. Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

THE ALARMING PREVALENCE OF ECZEMA

Finds Victims Among Every Race, Age and Condition.

Of all the diseases of the skin and scalp which torture and disfigure mankind, three-fourths are eczematous. Millions are born with eczema, and it is the only thing other millions have left when they die. Neglect in infancy and childhood, irritating conditions affecting the skin, ignorance of its real nature, improper remedies and many other causes that might be mentioned have created an eczema which, with varying severity, has afflicted countless numbers during their entire lives. Eczema is a skin disease. It is not regarded as hereditary, nor contagious, and is impartially distributed among the rich and poor, the high and low. The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, causing loss of sleep, is usually the most distressing symptom and is caused by the bursting of little vesicles filled with an acrid fluid, which burns as with fire the denuded skin. New vesicles form, fill and burst, scales form upon scales, and crusts upon crusts until disfigurement is added to torture.

One of the most successful treatments for eczema, whether applied to the youngest infant or the oldest person, is hot baths with Cuticura Soap and gentle anointings of Cuticura ointment. For more than a generation, these pure, sweet and gentle emollients have proved the most efficient agents in the speedy and permanent relief of all forms of eczemas, rashes, itchings and irritations of the skin and scalp. Although Cuticura soap and ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, in order that those who have suffered long and hopelessly and who have lost faith in everything may make trial of them without charge, a liberal sample of each will be mailed free to any address, together with a 32-page pamphlet, giving a description and treatment of the various forms of eczema, as well as other affections of the skin, scalp, hair and hands—send to "Cuticura," Dept. W, Boston.

Bird Jekyll and Hyde.

The catbird is our northern mocking bird. When love attunes its voice, it can warble as sweetly as the nightingale. You must catch it in one of its melting moods if you would know the charm of its liquid notes. It is not at all beautiful—no more is the mocking bird—only a gray-brown, perky, restless thing, of lesser size than the robin, with the soul of song in it.

The wonder of the catbird lies, of course, in this, its dual nature. At one time it hops about screeching complaints against the circumambient air; at another there throbs out from its delicate throat the essence of a divine melody.—Philadelphia Press.

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the Bronson case to get the deposition of John Gilmore, millionaire. A lady requests Blakeley to buy her a Pullman ticket. He gives her lower 11 and retains lower 10. He finds a drunken man in lower 9 and retires in lower 9. He awakens in lower 7 and finds his clothes and bag missing. The man in lower 10 is found murdered. Circumstantial evidence points to both Blakeley and the man who stole his clothes. The train is wrecked and Blakeley is rescued from a burning car by a girl in blue. His arm is broken. The girl proves to be Alison West, his partner's sweetheart. Blakeley returns home and finds he is under surveillance. Moving pictures of the train taken just before the wreck reveal to Blakeley a man leaping from the train with his stolen grip. Investigation proves that the man's name is Sullivan. Mrs. Conway, the woman for whom Blakeley bought a Pullman ticket, tries to make a bargain with him for the forged notes, not knowing that they are missing. Blakeley and an amateur detective investigate the home of Sullivan's sister. From a servant Blakeley learns that Alison West had been there on a visit and Sullivan had been attentive to her. Sullivan is the husband of a daughter of the murdered man. Blakeley's house is ransacked by the police. He learns that the affair between Alison and his partner is off. Alison tells Blakeley about the attention paid her by Sullivan

"Married!" she said finally, in a small voice. "Why, I don't think it is possible, is it? I—I was on my way to Baltimore to marry him myself, when the wreck came."

"But you said you don't care for him!" I protested, my heavy masculine mind unable to jump the gaps in her story. And then, without the slightest warning, I realized that she was crying. She shook off my hand and fumbled for her handkerchief, and failing to find it, she accepted the one I thrust into her wet fingers.

Then, little by little, she told me from the handkerchief, a sordid story of a motor trip in the mountains without Mrs. Curtis, of a lost road and a broken car, and a rainy night when they—she and Sullivan, tramped eternally and did not get home. And of Mrs. Curtis, when they got home at dawn, suddenly grown conventional and deeply shocked. Of her own proud, half-disdainful consent to make possible the hackneyed compromising situation by marrying the rascal, and then—of his disappearance from the train. It was so terrible to her, such a Heaven-sent relief to me, in spite of my rage against Sullivan, that I laughed aloud. At which she looked at me over the handkerchief.

"I know it's funny," she said, with a catch in her breath. "When I think that I nearly married a murderer—and didn't—I cry for sheer joy." Then she buried her face and cried again.

"Please don't," I protested unsteadily. "I won't be responsible if you keep on crying like that. I may forget that I have a capital charge hanging over my head, and that I may be arrested at any moment."

That brought her out of the handkerchief at once. "I meant to be so helpful," she said, "and I've thought of nothing but myself! There were some things I meant to tell you. If Jennie was—what you say, then I understand why she came to me just before I left. She had been packing my things and she must have seen what condition I was in, for she came over to me when I was getting my wraps on, to leave, and said, 'Don't do it, Miss West, I beg you won't do it; you'll be sorry ever after.' And just then Mrs. Curtis came in and Jennie slipped out."

"That was all?"

"No. As we went through the station the telegraph operator gave Har—Mr. Sullivan, a message. He read it on the platform, and it excited him terribly. He took his sister aside and they talked together. He was white with either fear or anger—I don't know which. Then, when we boarded the train, a woman in black, with beautiful hair, who was standing on the car platform, touched him on the arm and then drew back. He looked at her and glanced away again, but she recled as if he had struck her."

"Then what?" The situation was growing clearer.

"Mrs. Curtis and I had the drawing-room. I had a dreadful night, just sleeping a little now and then. I saw his cigarette-case in your hand. I had given it to him. You wore his clothes. The murder was discovered and you were accused of it! What could I do? And then, afterward, when I saw him asleep at the farmhouse, I—I was panic-stricken. I locked him in and ran. I didn't know why he did it, but—he had killed a man."

Some one was calling Alison through a megaphone, from the veranda. It sounded like Sam. "All-ee," he called. "All-ee! I'm going to have some anchovies on toast! All-ee!" Neither of us heard.

"I wonder," I reflected, "if you would be willing to repeat a part of that story—just from the telegram on—to a couple of detectives, say on Monday. If you would tell that, and—how the end of your necklace got into the sealskin bag—"

"My necklace!" she repeated. "But it isn't mine. I picked it up in the car."

"All-ee!" Sam again. "I see you down there I'm making a julep!"

Alison turned and called through her hands. "Coming in a moment, Sam," she said, and rose. "It must be very late: Sam is home. We would better go back to the house."

"Don't," I begged her. "Anchovies and juleps and Sam will go on forever, and I have you such a little time. I suppose I am only one of a dozen or so, but—you are the only girl in the world. You know I love you, don't you dear?"

Sam was whistling, an irritating bird call, over and over. She pursed her red lips and answered him in kind. It was more than I could endure.

"Sam or no Sam," I said firmly, "I am going to kiss you!"

But Sam's voice came strident through the megaphone. "Be good, you two," he bellowed, "I've got the binoculars!" And so, under fire, we walked sedately back to the house. My pulses were throbbing—the little swish of her dress beside me on the grass was pain and ecstasy. I had but to put out my hand to touch her, and I dared not.

Sam, armed with a megaphone and field glasses, bent over the rail and watched us with gleeful malignity.

"Home early, aren't you?" Alison called, when we reached the steps.

"Led a club when my partner had doubled no-trumps, and she fainted. Damn the heart convention!" he said cheerfully. "The others are not here yet."

Three hours later I went up to bed. I had not seen Alison alone again. The noise was at its height below, and I glanced down into the garden, still bright in the moonlight. Leaning against a tree, and staring interestedly into the billiard room, was Johnson.

CHAPTER XXIX.

In the Dining Room.

That was Saturday night, two weeks after the wreck. The previous five days had been full of swift-following events—the woman in the house next door, the picture in the theater of a man about to leap from the doomed train, the dinner at the Dallaes, and Richey's discovery that Alison was the girl in the case. In quick succession had come our visit to the Carter place, the finding of the rest of the telegram, my seeing Alison there, and the strange interview with Mrs. Conway. The Cresson trip stood out in my memory for its serio-comic horrors and its one real thrill. Then—the discovery by the police of the sealskin bag and the bit of chain; Hotchkiss producing triumphantly Stuart for Sullivan and his subsequent discomfiture; McKnight at the station with Alison, and later the confession that he was out of the running.

And yet, when I thought it all over, the entire week and its events were two sides of a triangle that was narrowing rapidly to an apex, a point. And the said apex was at that moment in the drive below my window, resting his long legs by sitting on a carriage block, and smoking a pipe that made the night hideous. The sense of the ridiculous is very close to the sense of tragedy. I opened my screen and whistled, and Johnson looked up and grinned. We said nothing. I held up a handful of cigars, he extended his hat, and when I finally went to sleep, it was to a soothing breeze that wafted in salt air and a faint aroma of good tobacco. I was thoroughly tired, but I slept restlessly, dreaming of two detectives with Pittsburg warrants being held up by Hotchkiss at the point of a splint, while Alison fastened their hands with a chain that was broken and much too short. I was roused about dawn by a light rap at the door, and, opening it, I found Forbes, in a pair of trousers and a pajama coat. He was as pleasant as most fleshy people are when they have to get up at night, and he said the telephone had been ringing for an hour, and he didn't know why somebody else in the blankety-blank house couldn't have heard it. He wouldn't get to sleep until noon.

As he was palpably asleep on his feet, I left him grumbling and went to the telephone. It proved to be Richey, who had found me by the simple expedient of tracing Alison, and he was jubilant.

"You'll have to come back," he said. "Got a railroad schedule there?"

"I don't sleep with one in my pocket," I retroted, "but if you'll hold the line I'll call out the window to Johnson. He's probably got one."

"Johnson!" I could hear the laugh with which McKnight comprehended the situation. He was still chuckling when I came back.

"Train to Richmond at 6:30 a. m.," I said. "What time is it now?"

"Four. Listen, Lollie. We've got him. Do you hear? Through the woman at Baltimore. Then—the other woman, the lady of the restaurant"—he was obviously avoiding names—"she is playing our cards for us—No—I don't know why, and I don't care. But you be at the Incubator to-night at eight o'clock. If you can't shake Johnson, bring him, bless him."

To this day I believe the Sam Forbeses have not recovered from the surprise of my unexpected arrival, my one appearance at dinner in Granger's clothes, and the note on my dresser which informed them the next morning that I had folded my tents like the Arabs and silently stolen away. For at half after five Johnson and I, the former as uninquisitive as ever, were on our way through the dust to the station, three miles away, and by four that afternoon we were in Washington. The journey had been uneventful. Johnson relaxed under the influence of my tobacco, and spoke at some length on the latest improvements in gallows, dilating on the absurdity of cutting out the former free passes to see the affair in operation. I remember, too, that he mentioned the curious anomaly that permits a man about to be hanged to eat a hearty meal. I did not enjoy my dinner that night.

Before we got into Washington I had made an arrangement with Johnson to surrender myself at two the following afternoon. Also, I had wired to Alison, asking her if she would carry out the contract she had made. The detective saw me home, and left me there.

Mrs. Klopton received me with dignified reserve. The very tone in which she asked me when I would dine told me that something was wrong.

"Now—what is it, Mrs. Klopton?" I demanded finally, when she had informed me, in a patient and long-suffering tone, that she felt worn out and thought she needed a rest.

"When I lived with Mr. Justice Springer," she began acidly, her mending basket in her hands, "it was an orderly, well-conducted household. You can ask any of the neighbors. Meals were cooked and, what's more, they were eaten; there was none of this 'here one day and gone the next' business."

"Nonsense," I observed. "You're tired, that's all, Mrs. Klopton. And I wish you would go out; I want to bathe."

"That's not all," she said with dignity, from the doorway. "Women coming and going here, women whose shoes I am not fit—I mean, women who are not fit to touch my shoes—coming here as insolent as you please, and asking for you."

"Good heavens!" I exclaimed. "What did you tell them—her, whichever it was?"

"Told her you were sick in a hospital and wouldn't be out for a year!" she said triumphantly. "And when she said she thought she'd come in and wait for you, I slammed the door on her."

"What time was she here?"

"Late last night. And she had a light-haired man across the street. If she thought I didn't see him she don't know me." Then she closed the door and left me to my bath and my reflections.

At five minutes before eight I was at the Incubator, where I found Hotchkiss and McKnight. They were bending over a table, on which lay McKnight's total armament—a pair of pistols, an elephant gun and an old cavalry saber.

"Draw up a chair and help yourself to pie," he said, pointing to the arsenal. "This is for the benefit of our friend Hotchkiss here, who says he is small and fond of life."

Hotchkiss, who had been trying to get the wrong end of a cartridge into the barrel of one of the revolvers, straightened himself and mopped his face.

"We have desperate people to handle," he said pompously, "and we may need desperate means."

"Hotchkiss is like the small boy whose one ambition was to have people grow ashen and tremble at the mention of his name," McKnight jibed. But they were serious enough, both of them, under it all, and when they had told me what they planned, I was serious, too.

"You're compounding a felony," I remonstrated, when they had explained. "I'm not eager to be locked away, but, by Jove, to offer her the stolen notes in exchange for Sullivan!"

"We haven't got either of them, you know," McKnight remonstrated, "and we won't have, if we don't start. Come along, Fido," to Hotchkiss.

The plan was simplicity itself. According to Hotchkiss, Sullivan was to meet Bronson at Mrs. Conway's apartment at 8:30 that night with the notes. He was to be paid there and the papers destroyed. But just before that interesting finale," McKnight ended, "we will walk in, take the notes, grab Sullivan, and give the police a jolt that will put them out of the count."

I suppose not one of us, slewing around corners in the machine that night, had the faintest doubt that we were on the right track, or that Fate, scurvy enough before, was playing into our hands at last. Little Hotchkiss was in a state of fever; he alternately twitched and examined the revolver, and a fear that the two moments might be synchronous kept me uneasy. He produced and dilated on the scrap of pillow slip from the wreck, and showed me the stiletto, with its point in cotton batting for safekeeping. And in the intervals he implored Richey not to make such fine calculations at the corners.

We were all grave enough and very quiet, however, when we reached the large building where Mrs. Conway had her apartment. McKnight left the power on, in case we might want to make a quick get-away, and Hotchkiss gave a final look at the revolver. I had no weapon. Somehow it all seemed melodramatic to the verge of farce. In the doorway Hotchkiss was a half dozen feet ahead; Richey fell back beside me. He dropped his affectation of gayety, and I thought he looked tired. "Same old Sam, I suppose?" he asked.

"Same, only more of him."

"I suppose Alison was there? How is she?" he inquired irrelevantly.

"Very well. I did not see her this morning." Hotchkiss was wafting near the elevator. McKnight put his hand on my arm. "Now, look here, old man," he said, "I've got two arms and a revolver, and you've got one arm and a splint. If Hotchkiss is right, and there is a row, you crawl under a table."

"The deuce I will!" I declared scornfully.

Proof of Devotion.

"Before we were married," said Mr. Meekton, "I showed my affection for Henrietta by serenading her." "I suppose you neglect such attentions now." "Yes. I show my affection now by respecting her desire that I shall not try to sing."

THE PRICE OF LAND INCREASING

THE "BACK TO THE LAND" CRY IS EFFECTIVE.

Traveling through the state of Iowa the other day, and Iowa is no exception to the story about to be related, the writer was shown a farm that was offered three years ago for $250 an acre. That appeared to be a high figure for land upon which the owner depended upon the crops of corn, hogs and cattle that could be raised upon it. But it wasn't. A few weeks since the farm changed hands at $325 an acre. Over in Illinois, down in Indiana, up in Wisconsin, across the line in Minnesota, the same experience was met with. And then attention is directed to Canada, which has been the Mecca of so many hundred thousand Americans during the past few years. Not only in Eastern Canada has the price of lands increased, but in Western Canada, during the past few weeks, farm lands have increased from three to five dollars an acre, with the prospect of a similar advance during the next three months. The reason for this is very apparent, and in a few words it may be pointed out that the lands are worth a great deal more than the present prices. The Northwestern Agriculturist of Minneapolis, a paper that was one of the first of the American farm papers to discover the real merits of the lands of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, says: "The reciprocity schedule would encourage American farmers to move to Canada, where the virgin soil will produce greater crops of grain with less labor than can be produced in our own farms in the Northwest. The result will be to enhance land values in Canada." This paper is afraid land values in Canada will be enhanced at the expense of land values in the United States. In face of the fact that land values in the United States are increasing the reasoning scarcely holds. The reason for the advance in value of Canadian lands is partly accounted from the fact, admitted by this paper, that Canada's virgin soil will produce "greater crops of grain with less labor." But that is not the only reason. During the past twelve months 320,000 people have made Canada their home and these are mostly of the farming class. They want farms, and the demand as well as the wealth of the soil is regulating the price. A study of the increase in the acreage of land put under crop last year, which can be had from any Canadian government representative, will prove the point, that the demand is increasing at a greater ratio than even the most sanguine would have predicted.

Expert Testimony.

There was not much to be gained from the witness on the stand, who seemed to have a wonderful faculty for holding his tongue, but the lawyer tried once more.

"You say your boat picked up the accused at 9 o'clock, 'or thereabouts,'" he said. "It has been stated that he jumped overboard nearly an hour before that time. Tell me, Captain Sampson, how he appeared to you when you picked him up. If you had been required to give an opinion of him then, what would you have said?"

"Well, I'll tell ye honest," said the captain, when he had disposed of a portentious yawn, "I sh'd-ve said he was one o' the wettest men, if not the wettest man, that ever I see!"—Youth's Companion.

HIS INVOCATON A SUCCESS

Actor Finally Got the Gas Man Awakened and Attending to His Duties.

"Years ago," says Guy Bates Post, the actor, "I appeared in an amateur performance of a play that had a distinct religious flavor. The leading player had studied for the ministry and had a deep and sonorous voice. In one of the scenes the lights were supposed to be turned down and a raging storm simulated. The accompanying lines were:

"'Oh, Lord, deliver us from the powers of darkness.'

"The leading man spoke the lines, but darkness didn't follow. He spoke them again, and still the stage was distressingly light. Finally he roared:

"'Oh, Lord, deliver us from the power of darkness, and also give that fool gas man sense enough to turn down the lights.'

"The gas lights went down and the audience roared."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

THE PEOPLES' FORUM

Public Spraying Demonstration to Be Held.

To the Editor of The Republican:

The success attending the conducting of spraying and pruning demonstrations in different parts of the State by the State Horticultural Department of the Agricultural College and the Horticultural Department of the Experiment Station, during the early spring has been unprecedented.

Plans are now being made for holding spraying demonstrations for the control of the codling moth and plum curculio. It is hoped to be able to hold them in every county of the State. The officers of the department firmly believe in such demonstration work and it has shown to be the best means of disseminating information. The people of a community are invited to attend a spraying demonstration and also to see the result of the treatment in the fall.

Every one who has apple trees should spray them just as the blossoms fall with a solution made by combining two pounds of arsenate of lead and one and one-quarter gallons of concentrated lime sulphur to fifty gallons of water. The Pathologists are recommending lime sulphur as a fungicide in preference to the Bordeaux mixture for the first spraying at least.

All peach trees should be sprayed with arsenate of lead two pounds and slack lime three pounds to fifty gallons of water, just as the calyces or shucks are falling off the tiny fruit. This occurs about ten days after the blossoms fall. This spraying will aid in preventing injury from the plum curculio through whose punctures brown rot and other diseases enters, causing the fruit to rot later on.

These treatments applied at the proper time, which will now be shortly throughout the State, are exceedingly important.

There will be a festival held in the opera house on Saturday, May 13th, for the purpose of raising funds for expenses at the cemetery. The cemetery must be surveyed and plotted so that when a lot is taken there will be some system to it. As it has been no care was taken in arranging the possession of a lot, and hence it is in disorder. But now, with care, the remainder can be laid out nicely. An arch ought to be erected over the main gate with the name of the cemetery on it, the fence must be painted and other work done. Everybody help all you can, by giving to the ladies soliciting, and by your attendance and patronage at the festival. Besides a lot of help will be needed at the cemetery. Let everybody get busy and help to make our last resting place as beautiful as possible. The ground being free there is no other way to get money only by such means.

Did you see the new band uniforms? They are dandies alright, our band look swell in them. Now fellows get your stand up and you will be alright for the summer.

City Officers Appointed.

At the regular monthly meeting of the town council Monday night the appointment of Mr. George Legge as city attorney was confirmed and Mr. Joseph E. Harned was elected treasurer.

GRANTSVILLE.

For one week Spring has been ruling the elements. Farmers have been very busy and will continue so until corn is planted. Very little oats have been sowed yet and corn planting will be at hand ere the farmers are ready.

Last Thursday night the sawmill of the Otto and Orendorf Lumber Company, of Springs, Pa., was burned to the ground. The fire was not discovered until 3:30 o'clock Friday morning, when Mr. Orendorf, whose sleeping quarters were several hundred yards distant from the mill, wakened to find the buildings a mass of flames. Owing to the proximity of the yard to the mil it was only by desperate fighting that the stacked lumber was saved from destruction. The loss will approximate a thousand dollars with five hundred dollars insurance. This is the second loss this firm has suffered within a year. On the 3rd of May, 1910, their mill and equipment was totally destroyed by fire.

On Friday morning about 11:30 o'clock the house occupied by Frank Folk and wife, and George Folk and family, was reduced to ashes. The men having been employed on local sawmills were absent from home when the fire was discovered, and it was with difficulty that any of the contents were saved. Neighbors who arrived before the flames had enveloped the building, assisted in removing several pieces of furniture and kitchen utensils ere the fire drove them from the building. Gross carelessness was undoubtedly the cause of the fire. A short piece of stove pipe projecting through a shingle roof was used instead of a chimney, and it was at this point where the fire started.

Mr. W. E. Stanton moved the Wm. King sawmill on his timber tract which he recently purchased from W. H. Augustine, near Keyser's Ridge.

Mrs. Dr. Bevans was in Grantsville Thursday.

Mr. John Knecht, of Salisbury, and Mr. J. R. Barron, of Rockwood, accompanied by Mr. Val Bender, of near Springs drove through Grantsville last Wednesday in Mr. Knecht's automobile enroute to New Germany where they expected to meet Mr. U. M. Stanton to close a deal in lumber in the vicinity of the Bond Bros railroad.

Mr. L. Diefenbach accompanied by Messrs. C. A. Bender and A. J. Bevans drove of Oakland via Accident on Monday in Mr. Diefenbach's touring car.

National Pike 100 Years Old.

Just 100 years ago Saturday, April 15th, the first contract for the construction of the old National road was signed at Cumberland and a few years later the road was built from that city to St. Louis. The road is the longest in the world and it was over this road that the pioneers of the far west wended their way from the Atlantic seacoast. The road covers more than 700 miles, and passes through Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri.

The matter of a national road was first brought up by President Thomas Jefferson in 1806, but it was not until five years later that the contract was signed. Seven million dollars has been spent on the work of building, extending and repairing the pike. More than this amount has been expended in building. There are many historic features connected with the road and Wheeling figures prominently. This city was the demand for stogies made by drivers of stages that made Wheeling first famous as a stogie manufacturing city.—Wheeling Intelligencer.

AN UNSURPASSED RECORD

Fines Collected by Justice Teats Exceeded His Fees by Over $500.

The fiscal year closing April 1st was a record breaker in so far as fines collected and turned into the county treasury by one of the local justices of the peace is concerned, the amount exceeding fees due him for services rendered the State being more than five hundred dollars.

This amount of money was turned over to the county officials by Justice A. S. Teats and represents fines collected from violators of the law, principally those engaged in the sale of spirituous liquors, after the Justice had taken from the total amount the fees legally due him.

To State's Attorney Renninger and Sheriff Shartzer, as well as to Justice Teats, who have been untiring in their efforts to stamp out the numerous speakeasies in the county, credit is due for this showing, which has never been equalled in the history of the county.

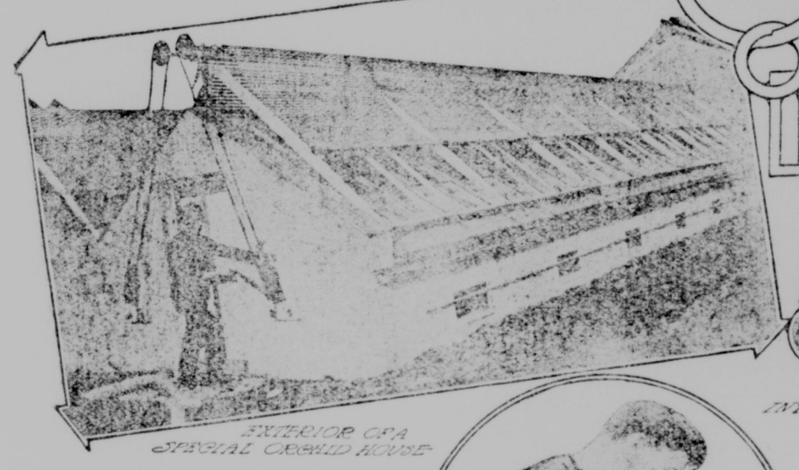
Raising the Rarest of Flowers—Orchids

ORCHIDS are not only the rarest of flowers, but they are among the rarest of all the products of nature. To find and bring back to civilization the choicest of these petaled trophies, "orchid hunters" are all the while braving in tropical jungles dangers and hardships as great as confront any present day soldier of fortune. Similarly there is about the whole family of orchids an atmosphere of mystery such as no longer obtains in the case of any other of milady's standard trinkets—not even in the case of the diamond.

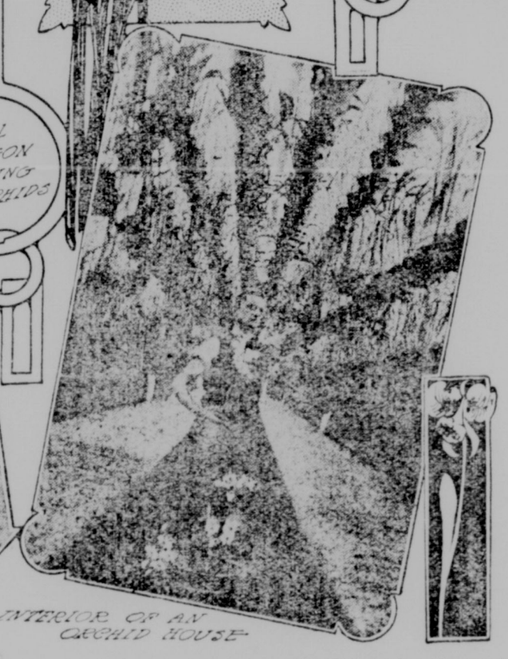
No wonder, then, that as these facts have become more generally known and as the peculiar history and characteristics of the orchids have become common knowledge there have swept in upon us a great wave of sentiment in behalf of the orchid—an almost universal feminine longing to possess and wear these strange flowers with their peculiar tints, soft velvety petals that look so artificial that more imitations of the orchid pass muster than of any other flower, and their subtle fascination. There is no question, too, that the secret of the fascination of these wonderful flowers is not by any means explained by the mere fact that they are so expensive, which has so often been advanced in explanation of why so many people are eager for these flowers.

FLORAL SURGEON TREATING ORCHIDS

ORCHIDS—THE RAREST AND COSTLIEST OF FLOWERS



EXTERIOR OF A SPECIAL ORCHID HOUSE



INTERIOR OF AN ORCHID HOUSE

No more than half a century ago the whole orchid family was virtually undiscovered. Only a few varieties were known, and they were by no means in general cultivation. Now there is a mad quest in all quarters of the globe for these fashionable flowers. The uttermost parts of the earth are being ransacked for new varieties, under the spur of the enormous prices which collectors will pay for rare "finds" and expensive greenhouses have been installed to permit the cultivation of the more delicate members of the orchid family under the same conditions as to light and temperature which obtain in its ancestral home in the tropics.

The orchids in their native haunts are found growing in all sorts of strange ways, and naturally when they are transplanted they are hard plants to grow. Moreover, there are no rules for the cultivation of orchids. In other branches of the floral kingdom all the members of a given floral family may be expected to yield to the same general method of cultivation, varied only in minor detail to permit adaptation to the needs of each member of the family. Not so with the eccentric orchids, however. Every plant is seemingly a law unto itself, and likely to require methods of cultivation distinct in themselves, and perhaps the exact opposite of those which obtain in the case of other members of this fascinating family.

The rarest of the orchids, and, of course, the ones most sought and the ones which command the highest prices, do not grow after the fashion of the general community of self-respecting plants which bury their roots in the soil. Instead these orchids are, in effect, parasites, fastening themselves to tree trunks or tree limbs. It is these species which have their native home deep in the jungles of the tropics and the hotter and damper the atmosphere of these unhealthy tropical forests—for instance, those of Brazil—the more the orchids seem to thrive. Now when the descendants of such tropical captives are to be nurtured and cultivated in the civilized environment of the temperate zone, it goes without saying that it is no easy task to duplicate the conditions which produced the species. To do so at all necessitates the construction of the special greenhouses above mentioned, with varied equipment, including a steam heating plant big enough to heat buildings many times the size of these greenhouses.

The lure of rich reward attracts many daring and resourceful men to the orchid business, although as may be surmised, the rich prizes of gold come to the men who discover, or at least the men who bring back to civilization heretofore unknown varieties of this numerous family. The leading firms engaged in the orchid trade retain at large salaries men of wide experience whose sole occupation is to trail the orchid in the almost inaccessible haunts where there is ever the magnet of possible unheard of varieties to beckon one forward.

Sometimes an orchid hunter will search for a year or more, facing the almost intolerable conditions of an unexplored land in order to capture in the end some heretofore unknown variety. During his quest, be it long or short, he must brave foul disease at almost every step; must be ever alert against the hostility of the tribes which inhabit the region he invades; and must risk all sorts of personal mishaps in grasping his prize, even after the quest has been successful, since most of the rare orchids of the tropics flourish only at the tops of the tallest trees. The hunter must either climb the trees, or more likely he will cut them down, but he dare not trust any hands save his own to undertake the task of gathering these fragile flowers.

An energetic orchid hunter will forward great numbers of plants, some rare and others not so rare, to the orchid consuming centers of Europe and America every year, but it is no easy matter to get the orchids to the coast after they have been found and wired into boxes by skillful packers, and on shipboard, even though the temperature of special cabins be regulated to sustain these floral natives of the tropics, there are other perils to be passed, and many plants perish during the ocean voyage. Indeed, it is claimed that on every large consignment of orchids from Brazil or Madagascar or other orchid producing paradise there is a loss amounting to thousands of dollars through the demise of plants that cannot withstand the rigors of an ocean voyage and in consequence pass from their dormant condition into a sleep from which they cannot be awakened.

The roots which come safely to market are usually put up at auction, and since there are no flowers on the plants, and no means of positively identifying them—not even the orchid hunter having seen them in bloom—it not infrequently happens that what are sold for orchids of a common variety, and consequently bring low price, turn out to be rarities of great value. In this way one unidentified orchid plant that brought half a dollar at an auction sale in London was, when it bloomed, after a lapse of two years, discovered to be such a novelty that the very firm that had disposed of it at auction bought it back for $2,500. This price is by no means a record-breaker for a rare orchid, as notable specimens have been sold for sums as high as $5,750. Nor is it necessary that an orchid shall be what the layman would regard as distinctly different from all others in order to command a fancy price. If it merely has markings distinct from those on the orchids of the same class which have come to light previously, it will be eagerly sought by collectors who take account of all such minor differences just as do the collectors of coins or postage stamps.

The raising of orchids from seed is a very slow operation, and one requiring an infinite amount of patience. Orchid growers who are in the business either for profit or pleasure, prefer, as a rule, to simply buy the bulbs—brown and withered and unpromising—and by watchful care nurture the latent spark of life until in time the plant blooms. One ticklish task in connection with the raising of orchids is the keeping up of the successive periods of rest and activity natural to each species of this floral family. As an orchid plant is passing into what is known as the dormant state it requires a gradually slackening supply of water, whereas when it is revived from this and returned to active growth there must be a continual increase in the amount of moisture supplied to the plant arousing from its drowsiness.

Orchids newly arrived from foreign parts must have an exceptional amount of attention after their long sea voyage. First, all the old leaves are removed and then the plants are allowed to repose for a time in a cool building where they have shade. After two or three days of preparation the new arrivals are put in pots and "nursed" until they give evidence of active growth. After this it is largely a question of regulating temperature and moisture although such are the peculiarities of these erratic flowers that every now and then an experienced grower will lose a number of plants for no apparent reason.

These flowers, some of which are said to have the ability to kill with their fragrance, are in reality distant cousins of our familiar blooms, the snow drop and the lady's slipper. There are, all told, more than 5,000 varieties of orchids, but the ones which have been most prized are the strangely beautiful forms which have come from blistering deserts, fever swamps, the tops of mountains or other localities where it seems as though Dame Nature had done her best to hide them away from prying human eyes. To persons who have not learned to love them there is often a suggestion almost of the uncanny about a fanciful orchid, and such persons will not be surprised to hear that one of the choicest of orchids was first found clinging to a tombstone in New Guinea.

Orchid growers would, most of them, be in no end of difficulty in classifying and identifying their specimens, were it not for the Orchid Studbook, which is issued every years just as is the studbook of horses, which lists all of the domestic varieties of orchids with information as to their respective lines of descent from the original wild kinds. There have been many famous orchid collectors. Mrs. Roosevelt was very fond of the flower and it was due to her efforts that a respectable-sized collection of orchids has been formed at the White House conservatories. Perhaps the most enthusiastic of all orchid collectors, however, has been Joseph Chamberlain, and the name of the English statesman will live forever in the domain or the orchid as a devotee who devoted his leisure and thousands of dollars of his wealth to the indulgence of his hobby for the gentlest and frailest of flowers.

Baltimore, Md.—"I send you here with the picture of my fifteen year old daughter Alice, who was restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Parents and Children's Faults.

Parents ought to collaborate with teachers in helping to develop the best in their children, and consequently to eliminate the worst. Instead of this view of the matetr we (says Ella Wheeler Wilcox) find parents taking a stand against the teacher who tries to talk of the faults of their children and discuss a remedy, and all the work which the teacher has hoped to do in character building falls to the ground under the lifted hammer of the unwise and belligerent parent, who insists that "my child" must be without faults, and that the teacher who sees faults is an enemy, not a friend. It is seldom, indeed, that a man or a woman occupying the position of a teacher is prejudiced or has personal or selfish motives for criticising a child.

COFFEE CONGESTION
Causes a Variety of Ails.

A happy old lady in Wisconsin says:

"During the time I was a coffee drinker I was subject to sick headaches, sometimes lasting 2 or 3 days, totally unfitting me for anything.

To this affliction was added, some years ago, a trouble with my heart that was very painful, accompanied by a smothering sensation and faintness.

"Dyspepsia, also, came to make life harder to bear. I took all sorts of patent medicines but none of them helped me for any length of time.

"The doctors frequently told me that coffee was not good for me; but without coffee I felt as if I had no breakfast. I finally decided about 2 years ago to abandon the use of coffee entirely, and as I had read a great deal about Postum I concluded to try that for a breakfast beverage.

"I liked the taste of it and was particularly pleased to notice that it did not 'come up' as coffee used to. The bad spells with my heart grew less and less frequent, and finally ceased altogether, and I have not had an attack of sick headache for more than a year. My digestion is good, too, and I am thankful that I am once more a healthy woman. I know my wonderful restoration to health came from quitting coffee and using Postum." Name given by the Postum Co., Battl Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is this. Coffee has a direct action on the liver with some people, and causes partial congestion of that organ preventing the natural outlet of the secretions. Then may follow biliousness, sallow skin, headaches, constipation and finally a change of the blood corpuscles and nervous prostration.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Use Flattery for Health

What Women Need Is Not so Much Medicine But a Lot of White Lies.

And now comes a very learned man, a psychologist, a physicist and a philosopher, who seems to have investigated the whole subject to his own satisfaction, and finds that the world is cursed with truth, or, rather, with a lack of lies. Human beings, particularly those of the feminine gender, suffer physical torments, it appears, because they are not buoyed up by sufficient flattery. What women need is not so much quinine and ipecac as a lot of white lies. When you go home to the wife of your bosom you are not to tell her that she looks bad and ought to have a doctor at once. By no means. You must tell her that she looks younger than she has for years, and that she never was as dear to you, and that you are hardly able to pull through your daily tasks because you are so distracted by thoughts of her.

The remedy at least is cheap. It costs nothing but effort, but, alas! more effort than some men are willing to put forth. It is not because a man is too truthful to tell lies to his wife about her appearance, but because he hasn't the willing mind. It is too common for men to presume that simply because they are married they need not bestow courtesy or sentiment upon their wives. Some men reserve their stories of flattery for other men's wives, which makes particularly interesting reading in the divorce courts.

Now, this learned man is right in his fundamentals. We do not know whether or not a case of appendicitis or of cerebro-spinal meningitis may be cured by flattery, but if more men went home to their wives with cheerful faces, with loving words, with the most tender courtesy and a box of candy or a bunch of violets, a lot of heart trouble would be cured instanter. The principal fact about a woman is that she is a woman. She lives on love. She is made for it and normally cannot exist in good spirits without it. The greatest injury that can come to a woman is the feeling that she awakens no romantic inspiration in her husband. If every husband would tell his wife once a day that he loved her, as well as show it, the world would be much happier. It is not alone necessary to love your wife; you must show it by a thousand things that seem meaningless trifles to the men, but are the larger part of life to a woman.

Hats.

"What is the average woman's idea of spring poetry?"

"Oh, something in a millinory way, I guess."

Never Anything Else.

"Is your toothache bad?"

"Well, it doesn't look particularly good to me."

When the Teacher Blushed.

"What is it," asked the teacher, "that binds us together and makes us better than we are by nature?"

"Corsets, sir," piped a wise little girl of eight.—Red Hen.

When He Flourished.

"Used to be a waiter, you say?"

"Yes; those were his palmy days."

Origin of the Piano.

The pianoforte was directly evolved from the clavichord and the harpsichord. In 1711 Scipione Maffei gave a detailed account of the first four instruments, which were constructed by Bartholommeo Chrustofori. It was named by him the pianoforte and was first exhibited in 1709. Marius, in France, exhibited harpsichords, with hammer action, in 1716, and Schroter, in Germany, claimed to have invented the pianoforte between 1717 and 1720.

Marius was at first generally credited with the invention. Pianos of that period were shaped much like the modern grand variety. The first square piano was constructed by Frederica, an organ manufacturer of Saxony, in 1758. The first genuine upright piano was invented in England and the United States by John Isaac Hawkins, an Englishman, in 1880.

The World's Wonders

STRANGE THINGS FOUND IN VARIOUS PORTIONS OF THE EARTH

Bison Challenging a Rival

Canada's great national park near Wainwright, Alberta, contains the largest herd of buffalo, or American bison, in the world. Among them are some magnificent specimens, one of which, an old bull, is shown in the photograph challenging a rival to combat. The battles between the bulls often are terrific.

FISH CAPER WHEN DRUNK

"As drunk as a fish" is a common expression, but not many people ever saw a fish drunk. However, those who attended a temperance demonstration by E. F. Sutherland of Columbus, Ind., were permitted to see intoxicated fish. Sutherland placed fish in a tank of water and added alcohol to the water. In a little while the fish began cutting capers that would have surprised any self-respecting member of the finny tribe. By and by the alcohol became too strong for the fish, and they started to turn on their backs. Sutherland saved their lives by transferring them to fresh water. They were soon sober, and apparently were unhurt.

NEW MOUNT FOR CZAR'S ARMY

The Russian war office has recently approved the mongopzeb for mounting certain of the czar's cavalry regiments that are stationed in Asia. This animal is a cross between the Mongolian pony and the zebra, and is being bred in large numbers at the Russian government stud farm in the Crimea. He is a sturdy beast, particularly well fitted to the work in Siberia. The name "mongopzeb" is fanciful and not yet officially adopted.

CAT THAT GOES TO FIRES

The pet cat belonging to the firemen of an English village has the curious habit of riding to fires on the hook and ladder. It wears a broad collar, studded with firemen's buttons. They have a similarly intelligent cat at the general post office, Paris. He gets into the mail cart and accompanies the bags to the station and takes frequent long journeys in the mail van. Recently, however, he was sealed up in a mail bag and got as far as Marseilles.

DOG BURIED ALIVE 8 DAYS

When some men were building a straw stack at Temple farm, Roydon, England, an eleven-year-old spaniel which was hunting for rats and mice, got buried in the straw. Eight days later a man heard a faint whining coming from the stack. He removed a quantity of the straw and four feet in the stack he found the dog. On being released it made straight for a pond near by to quench its thirst, and is now none the worse for its imprisonment.

CALF BORN WITHOUT A TAIL

Frank Jackson, a farmer, living eight miles south of Greensburg, Ind., owns a calf which was born without a tail. There is no scar or mark of any kind where the caudal appendage should be. Another peculiar feature about this calf is its walk, or jump. It uses its hind legs much as a rabbit does in propelling itself. Otherwise the calf is the same as any ordinary calf, and shows signs of becoming strong and healthy.

MINER'S TRYING EXPERIENCE

To have been almost buried alive and forced to keep in one position for 20 hours on end was the trying experience of George Hill, a miner, at Peak Hill, N. S. W. Hill with two others, had to put in a shot, which caused a slide. He was carried along with the earth into an old working. His mates got down and succeeded in removing seven feet of earth from his head, but they found it dangerous to continue, as the earth was liable to come in and smother them. They decided to put in a drive at the back of the 180 foot level. After 17 hours of hard work they opened the wall at his head. It then took three hours to remove the debris away to get him out, the greatest care having to be exercised to prevent the loose stuff smothering him. A rope was attached to Hill, and at last he was pulled out amidst the hearty cheers of his fellow-miners.

TALLEST BRITISH SOLDIER

Private H. Barter, who has just joined the First Battalion Grenadier Guards, is only eighteen years of age, but stands 6 feet 8¼ inches in his stockings and is still growing. He is said to be the tallest soldier in the British army. "My father, who is a Devonshire farmer, is," he says, "6 feet 5 inches, and my mother is 5 feet 10 inches, so I think it must be hereditary. I have lived nearly all my life in the country. I am doing two hours a day in a gymnasium and about three hours drill, so that in a month or two I ought to reach 6 feet 9½ inches. I have smoked since I was fourteen, or I do not know how tall I should have been."

A CHURCH FOR SWEETHEARTS

A novel plan is that of Rev. John Thompson, pastor of a Methodist church in Wheaton, Ill., to induce young sweethearting couples to do their courting in the church pews, instead of repairing to objectionable ice-cream parlors, etc. He will allow young people to stay late, with a big room and piano in part of the church and 100 pews in which they can sit at their ease.

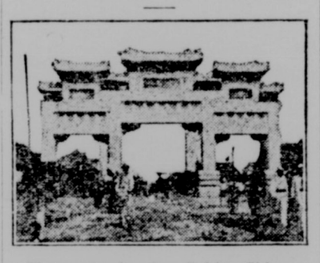
"There is no better place in the world for young persons to do their courting in than a church," said the pastor. "I believe in matchmaking—that is, the right kind of matchmaking. I think that every church should make provision for upright young men and good young women to meet, and should arrange matters so that they could fall in love with each other.

"This talk about dinners at 'lobster palaces,' expensive seats at theaters and other places is a mistake. A good girl, who really loves a man, does not want to see him make a fool of himself when he is courting her any more than she wants to see him do so after they are married."

PEELED HIS WAY OVER OCEAN

There are a variety of ways of working one's passage on shipboard, but the plan adopted by C. Pullman, of St. Louis, doubtless establishes a precedent. Mr. Pullman, a young man of education, crossed the Atlantic in the first cabin with some $10,000 in cash to meet the expenses of a short sojourn in Europe. He had neglected to secure his return passage. His living expense in London and Paris proved higher than anticipated, and the Atlantic presented a formidable barrier to his return home. Mr. Pullman was obliged to forego the luxuries of a first cabin, second, or even third cabin, and finally shipped as a peeler of potatoes on the President Lincoln. By crossing in first cabin and returning in the scullery, Mr. Pullman doubtless established a new sea record of its kind.

MARKS ANGER OF EMPEROR



There stands in Pekin, China, a handsome arch of native style of architecture which marks the spot on which Baron von Kettler was assassinated on June 20, 1900. The inscription (translated) reads: "This monument has been erected by order of the Emperor of China to the memory of the Imperial German minister, Chevalier Clemens von Kettler, who, on this spot, was done to death by the villainous hand of a murderer, on June 20, 1900. In everlasting memory of his name. In continual acknowledgment of the anger of the German Emperor for this atrocity. As a warning to all."

Here Moses Got the Tablets

According to ancient tradition the summit of Jebel Musa, in the peninsula of Sinai, is the place where Moses received the Ten Commandments, and saw the Glory of God pass by. In the valley below the Children of Israel were encamped. At the spot where Moses remained fasting 40 days while he inscribed the law on the tablets there stands an old monastery, and the monks show to visitors the impression of the prophet's head in a hollow of the rock.

IN OBEDIENCE TO ORDERS

French Boy Caused Merriment by Taking the Order of the Court Too Literally.

A droll incident is reported as having taken place in one of the provincial appeal courts in France. A boy, about 14, was summoned to give evidence, and his appearance was such as to move the whole court to laughter. He wore a long redingote, peculiar to the Basque country, and immense boots. His trousers, collar and hat were unquestionably those of a man. The court was convulsed, and the president asked the boy how he dared to treat the court in such a manner. The boy seemed as surprised as the president, and taking out the citation from his pocket, read the formula inviting him, "Comparaitre dans les affaires de son pere." (To appear in his father's suit.)

Why? Just Because.

"Papa," said the little boy, "why do they say a woman is 'setting her cap for a man' when she wants to marry him?"

"Because, my son," explains the father, softly, "if she sets her bonnet for him she knows blamed well the price of it will scare him to death."

"Here I am," said the returned wanderer, "back with the fortune I said I would make and ready to pay the mortgage off the farm!"

"Ef that ain't hard luck!" exclaimed the father. "As times are goin' now that mortgage ain't botherin' nobody. I'd a heap ruther have seen you broke an' ready to do regular work for wages."

Words are wise men's counters; they do but reckon by them, but they are the money of fools.—Thomas Hobbes.

FRESHENING UP GLOVES.

How the Chamois Skin Variety Can Be Washed and Cleaned.

To wash and clean chamois skin gloves draw a quart of very hot water in a basin and add to it a teaspoonful of salad or olive oil to each pair of gloves to be washed. After adding the oil add a cake of ivory or white castile soap and swish the whole into stiff lather, so that the oil is thoroughly mixed with the soapy water. Then add a quart more of hot water and then cold until the mixture is warm, but not more than comfortably warm. Remove the soap and beat up again with a large spoon, having not less than four or five quarts of the mixture for five pairs of gloves.

Drop the gloves in one by one and after letting them lie three minutes squeeze them gently for several minutes, rubbing with great care the soiled spots against the fingers. If the finger tips are much soiled castile or ivory soap may be rubbed directly in and immediately squeezed out, for the oil in the water will keep the soap so applied from stiffening the skin.

After, say, five minutes' squeezing take the gloves out and prepare a new water. If the gloves have not been allowed to become too soiled a thorough rinsing is now all that is necessary, and it is much better that the gloves be washed frequently than allowed to get so soiled as to wear out quickly in the laundering process.

The second water, and indeed every water used, should be of the same temperature as the first. If much soiled the same bath as the first should be used and the same process followed, rinsing them afterward in two clear warm waters, squeezing in each. If not much soiled the two rinsings may follow the first soap and oil bath.

The gloves should never be twisted or wrung, but squeezed very gently and at the end folded in clean towels and spatted and rolled carefully, then shaken out and hung in the air to dry.

Some gloves shrink lengthwise and some the other way in drying, and this should be counteracted by the careful use of a glove stretcher when the gloves are half dry. The fingers that are growing shorter should be gently pushed out at the tips, and those that are growing into nail-like shapes should be as gently spread. Always it should be remembered that wet chamois is easily pulled in pieces, and the handling should be most gentle.

Cornelia's Curls.

Cornelia hasn't many toys,
Although she's very good—
No toys to lend to others, though
She'd like to if she could.

The other children come to school
With little things to show,
With candles, which they give away
To children that they know.

Cornelia hasn't anything
Like other little girls
Except—and, oh, she's glad of this—
The sweetest golden curls!

In rings and twists and twines and twirls
They fall, a soft cascade,
A sight to thrill the little girls
Who only have a braid.

The children love Cornelia, and
They love her golden hair,
And she has found that here at last
Is something she can share.

For when a child is sad at school
Cornelia whispers, "There,
Don't cry, and I will let you play
A minute with my hair."

She throws her hair back on the desk,
And, oh, what fun to play
With those soft, twisting golden curls
That drive the tears away!

Cornelia hasn't many toys
Like other little girls,
But that will never trouble her
While she can lend her curls.

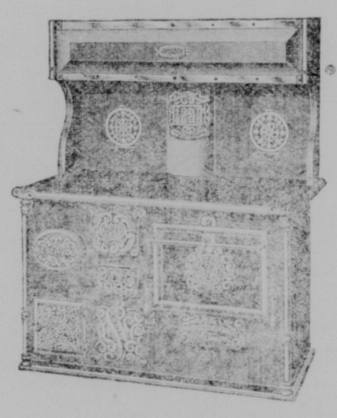
THIS HIGH GRADE STEEL RANGE COSTS YOU NOTHING



as compared with any other range of any make whatsoever, that you might buy.

¶ Any other range; any range you ever saw takes its draft through the front end, next to the fire and right underneath the grate.

¶ This air is about 50 to 70 degrees in temperature. The range must burn enough coal to bring the temperature up to 700 degrees, or baking heat

¶ Notice that-ordinary ranges have to burn enough coal to raise the air from 70 to 700 or 650 degrees.

CHAMPION RANGES

take the draft in at the opposite end, pass it under the bottom before it goes under the grate, and the air picks up enough from the waste heat under the bottom to reach about 250 degrees.

¶ The fire has to burn only enough coal to raise it from 250 to 700—450 degrees, as against 650 in ordinary ranges.

¶ CHAMPION RANGES save about 1-3 in fuel, every day they are used. This will pay the full cost of ther ange in 3 to 5 years, making it cheaper to you than any other.

Order of Publication.

George W. Magruder and Harriet Magruder, his wife vs. Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder, Alfred H. Magruder, Carrie Wagner and Madana Custer.

No. 1720 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain property in Garrett county, in the state of Maryland, which was conveyed to George W. Magruder, Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder, Alfred H. Magruder and Stephen A. Magruder, by The George's Creek Coal & Iron Co., dated February 10, 1905, and recorded in Liber No. 20, folio 351, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, containing 139 acres. Also a piece of land conveyed to the said grantees by William Pearre, Executor of George A. Pearre, by deed dated the 15th day of December, 1886, and recorded in Liber No. 22, folio 500, one of the Land Records of said county, containing 171 acres. Also a piece of land devised to the said grantees by the last will and testament of James Magruder, said will being recorded in Liber B, folio 94, one of the Will Records of Garrett county, containing 100 acres. Also a piece of land which was conveyed to Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder and Stephen A. Magruder, and as the bill alleges one fifth of which was held in trust by them for the said George W. Magruder, from William Barnes and wife, by deed dated April 19, 1908, and recorded in Liber No. 58, folio 416, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, containing 212 acres.

The bill states that on or about the 20th day of May, 1909, the said Stephen A. Magruder departed this life, intestate, and left as his heirs at law his four brothers, three sisters, and nieces and nephews, children of his own deceased sisters. That deeds were executed conveying the interest of his three sisters and all his nieces and nephews, in the said 212 acres, to three of his brothers, Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder, except the wife of John Wagner of Hedgesville, W. Va., who did not sign the said deed and has an inchoate right of dowery in her husband's share. That a second deed was executed by his sisters and all of his nieces and nephews conveying their interest in the said property above mentioned to George W. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder; that his two sisters, Mrs. Mandana Custer and the wife of the said John Wagner, refused to execute said deed on their part. The said Mandana Custer being entitled to the one-ninth of one-fifth interest in said first three pieces mentioned in this order of publication. Said Carrie Wagner being entitled to the same interest as aforementioned in these pieces also.

That the said Carrie Wagner, the wife of John Wagner, of Hedgesville, W. Va., is a non-resident of this State. The bill among other things prays that the property be sold and divided among the parties entitled to share therein, according to their respective interest therein and have further relief.

It is thereupon this 1st day of May, in the year 1911, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett County in Equity, that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in the said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks, before the 3rd day of June, 1911, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, commanding her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 19th day June next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

FELL FROM SCAFFOLD AND FRACTURED HIS SKULL

Very Dangerous Injuries Suffered by Mr. Jas. O. Cleveland Last Thursday.

Last Thursday afternoon, while engaged at work in removing ceiling decorations at the Oakland Hotel Mr. James O. Cleveland of Oakland, fell from a scaffold upon which he was working and striking upon some frames with his head suffered a fracture of his skull at the base of his brain. Notwithstanding these terrific injuries, which usually result in death within a few hours, Mr. Cleveland is still living and every hope is held out by his physician for his ultimate and complete recovery.

After falling from the scaffold Mr. Cleveland lay for an hour or more unconscious and was found in that condition by other workmen engaged about the building. He was rushed to the Home Sanatorium where he received treatment by Drs. Broadwater and McComas. For several days he was delirious at intervals, but since Tuesday his mind has been clear and he has been able to converse with members of his family. Should his condition remain favorable Mr. Cleveland will be removed to his home from the hospital the latter part of this week.

In Baltimore on Road Matters.

Mr. W. E. G. Hitchins, of Frostburg, and Messrs. H. C. Bonig, mayor of Grantsville, and Thomas Johnson, who resides along the National pike near Frostburg, left this evening for Baltimore in order to be present Wednesday at 12 o'clock noon in the Union Trust building to hear the reading of the bids before the state roads commission for the building of a four and one-half mile stretch of road between the Allegany county line and Piney Grove, on the old National pike west of Frostburg. In the event of the bids for this work exceeding the limit set by the good roads commission to be spent on this particular stretch, these gentlemen will ask the commission to have the building of the road done according to the same followed in constructing the one mile stretch from Frostburg to the county line, which was built under the supervision of the Allegany county road directors at a cost not exceeding the actual expense of labor and material.—Cumberland News.

Child Burned to Death.

Ozella, the five-year-old daughter of Daniel and Martha Sell, of Stemple Ridge, near Terra Alta W. Va., was burned to death. She was in the house with a young child, an older sister having gone to a clearing near the house to carry water to the workmen, when it is supposed she attempted to start a fire in the cooking stove. She was wearing a scarf around her head, which caught fire. In an instant her clothing was on fire, and before relief could reach her she was burned so severely that she could not recover.

FOR A GREATER MARYLAND IS THE KEYNOTE

Need of Cities and Counties Standing Together Urged By Goveenor.

Economy and the need of the city and counties standing together to accomplish a Greater Baltimore, and thus a greater state, were the watchwords sounded Saturday morning by Governor Crothers in opening his cabinet meeting at the Hotel Rennert. Governments, the governor said, should be run on the same principles as well conducted business houses. Economy, he added, is an indispensable necessity. The city and the counties, the governor said, must cooperate to advance conditions in the counties, which betterments, in turn would rebound for the good Greater Baltimore.

All of the members of the cabinet comprising Attorney General Straus, Comptroller Claggett, Adjutant General Warfield, Secretary of State Williams and Governor Crothers, were present, also the heads of several of the state departments.

Among the new laws discussed were the following: New incorporation law, corrupt practices act, United States senatorial primary election law, barratry act, direct primary election law, pure food law, law providing for the purchase of oyster shells and placing same on natural oyster beds, good roads law, consolidation of good roads commissions, numerous acts providing for improved methods of repair of dirt roads in charge of competent local engineers, fish and game laws, new assessment law, new health law, utilities commission law, constitutional amendment increasing Baltimore city's representation in the legislature, repeal of the gas monopoly laws, new banking law, automobile law, new law for the benefit of workmen's families in the mines in Garrett and Allegany counties, state care of insane for both white and colored, law for the erection of new tobacco warehouses, convict labor law, and numerous other laws of greater or less importance.

The governor's opening address, which brought out the keynote of the meeting, was as follows, in part:

"Governments should be run upon exactly the same principles as a well conducted private business. Fixed charges must be kept down to the lowest possible limit and others economies practiced to the fullest possible extent. If we are to have a progressive state to carry on public projects for the benefit of all the people we must adopt and adhere to this policy. Economy is an indispensable necessity to progress. As a result of just such assemblages as these, we can arrive in securing the very best results along this and other lines.

"The new assessment law, now in progress in the counties of the state, will bring in larger increased revenues, and help to meet the burdens that we now have to bear. A continuance of a constructive policy will continue to increase the revenues necessary to defray the expenses of the same and enable the people more easily to bear the tax burden. The city and counties must cooperate in bringing about better results. Whatever is done to advance conditions in the counties enures to the benefit of Greater Baltimore. We must stand or fall as a state having a common interest to serve. If we desire to attract people to come to the state or city, which is absolutely necessary for the development of our resources, we can only do it by policies of progress and thrift. The people will not go to a state that lacks civic spirit and is not up-to-date in salutary laws and an honest and fearless enforcement of the same. Publicity in all our governmental affairs is most essential. Public discussions and agitation are most necessary to bring about most favorable conditions.

THE DEATH RECORD.

J. HENRY SMITH.

J. Henry Smith, a well-known farmer, living along the Mt. Aetna road, about one mile from this city, died at noon today, of concussion of the brain, due to an accident received in a fall on Wednesday, aged 74 years. Mr. Smith was assisting his hired man when he was jolted headforemost from the wagon, was rendered unconscious and remained in that condition all the time until the end. He was a native of Virginia, but had been living in Washington county for the last 20 years. He had been a stock raiser and farmer all his life. Mr. Smith was a member of the Presbyterian church, this city.—Hagerstown Globe.

Mr. J. Johnson Smith, who removed to Oakland from Pittsburg, is one of the surviving children of Mr. Smith.

MRS. ZACHARIAH HENDRICKSON.

Mrs. Zachariah Hendrickson, of near Oakland, whose illness was noted in this paper last week, died on Friday morning, aged forty-three years. The deceased lady was held in high esteem by her many friends and neighbors and the announcement of her death, although momentarily expected, came as a great shock of them. Mrs. Hendrickson is survived by her husband and two daughters who have the sympathy of the entire community in the great loss they have sustained. The funeral of the deceased lady was held at the Eglon church Sunday afternoon, the services being conducted by Rev. E. Manges, of the Oakland Lutheran church, of which Mrs. Hendrickson was a devout and consistent member.

JAMES A. BROWN.

Mr James Alexander Brown, aged seventy-five years, died at Kingwood, West Va., Monday after a lingering illness. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. D. I. Charming Lace Bonnet

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

ONCE more the word "bonnet," in its limited, millinery sense, has a place in the fashion reporter's vocabulary. Many of the shapes, which we call hats, might as well be classed under the other term. There are so many shapes that really cover the head and are almost entirely off the face that the regulation poke bonnet, the Corday cap and the "Wilhelmina" cap do not seem extreme.

Germaine gave us the pretty model made of narrow val lace which is shown here. The lace is shirred on fine wires and the art of the milliner is set forth here in a way to demand our admiring attention. A little frill of lace surrounds the face and peeps from under the very broad band of velvet ribbon which is laid about the bonnet. This band terminates in a long single end, which, when not wound about the neck, will fall below the knee. The end falls from the left side. The frame curves in to fit the neck and a flat or "tailor's" bow of narrower velvet ribbon is sewed to the bonnet at this point. The combination of cream lace and the rich black of the velvet is handsome, but this pretty piece of headwear would be incomplete without the little Marie Louise roses and small foliage, that add the required touch of color. These are in fine silk with a high luster. They are in a peculiar pink, having a blue-gray cast and shade into centers with a dark petunia red. Three single roses and a cluster of two are set about the bonnet on a velvet band.

This model has the virtue of being suited to evening wear at any season of the year and to the fashionable promenade at summer or winter resorts in the daytime. The design is not one of the sort to have a wide vogue—it is not what is termed a "popular" style, but for that very reason is never unfashionable. The lining in such dainty hats is of maline, chiffon or net. The long tie is the finishing touch of great distinction and is arranged to suit the fancy of the wearer. Wound about the throat it amounts to a real protection. Worn hanging when the weather is warm, it is caught to the corsage or shoulder with a fancy pin, or a tiny bouquet of roses like those used in trimming. The design is not suited to all wearers and one should be able "to carry it off," as the saying is.

GYMNASIUM DRESS.

Navy serge is the material generally chosen for gym. dresses; the one we show here is loose from the yoke, which is square and has the material gathered to it; feather-stitch the same color as sash edges yoke, collar, cuffs, and hem of skirt. The knickers show slightly below skirt.

Material required: Four yards serge 46 inches wide.

LACE WORN ON MILLINERY

Some of the Smartest Hats Have This Garniture, and It Is Effective.

This is an excellent season for bringing out the family lace box and going through it carefully to see what treasure it really contains. There are an infinite number of ways in which bits of lace may be employed. Not the least of these is a garniture on one's new millinery. Some of the very smartest hats are to be trimmed with lace or made entirely of it. White lace is especially favored, and will be seen on picturesque bonnets as well as on smart walking toques. One of the new designs is a bonnet made of white lace and trimmed with ruchings of narrow black velvet. The only other garniture is a posy of tiny pink roses. A toque of black straw has a jabot of white lace going up the front and over the crown something after the manner of an ostrich plume.

Fads.

Laces of all kinds will be worn in profusion.

The classic silk cachemires have risen again.

Rosettes of silk are used on many linen frocks.

Often buckles are made of linen to match the belt.

For afternoon costume the large hat is in order.

Toques made entirely of flowers will be much worn.

Cutting Under Lace.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

EMPEROR WILLIAM ON DRINK

Temperance Speech Made by the Kaiser to Naval Students at Murwik—Makes Prediction.

"The nation which takes the smallest quantity of alcohol will win the battles of the future."

This prediction, made by Emperor William to the German naval cadets in Murwik a few days ago, has given the temperance advocates a new text. In the course of his address the kaiser said:

"One more piece of advice I will give you on a question the importance of which for my people lies very close to my heart. It is the question of alcohol and drinking. I know quite well that pleasure in drinking is an old inheritance of the Germanic peoples. Nevertheless, we must by self-discipline free ourselves in every respect from this evil.

"I can assure you that in my twenty-two years of government it has been my experience that a great number of the crimes which were laid before me for decision were to be nine-tenths ascribed to the consequences of alcohol. In former days it was reckoned among young men particularly smart to be able to drink and carry a large quantity.

"Those were obsolete views which were all very well for the Thirty Years' War, but don't do today. As you will notice yourselves in the course of your term on board, service in my fleet has attained a degree of intensity which can hardly be exceeded. It is your task to go through these prodigious efforts in time of peace without being used up, in order that you may be fresh in case of serious events. The next war and the next battle will demand sound nerves on your part. They will be decided by nerves. But these are undermined and endangered from youth upwards by indulgence in alcohol.

"It is one of the questions of the future for our navy and for our nation. If you educate the people to do without alcohol I shall have healthy and sensible subjects. It is a great question of the future, for by the time-expired men the idea will be carried into the country. If you promote these principles my people will be morally elevated. That is a work in which I should like to ask you to take a share."

DRINKS AND SMOKES COSTLY

Report of International Revenue Bureau Show Vastly Increased Receipts for Twelve Months.

The United States has just passed a banner year for drinks and smokes. Here is the nation's record for the twelve months ended on June 30 as it shows in the figures of the internal revenue bureau.

Distilled spirits, 163,000,000 gallons—30,000,000 gallons more than the year before.

Fermented liquors, 59,485,117 barrels—an increase of 3,000,000.

Cigars, 7,600,000,000 — 160,000,000 more than 1909.

Cigarettes, 6,830,000,000—an increase of a solid 1,000,000,000.

Plug, fine cut, cube cut, granulated or sliced smoking or chewing tobacco or snuff, 402,000,000 pounds—4,000,000 pounds more than the year before.

The internal revenue receipts on all these things—and certain other things, such as playing cards and mixed flour—amounted to more than $289,000,000 and Commissioner Cabell's organization collected it all at a cost of about $5,000,000. It cost a cent and a little more than seven mills to collect each dollar.

When the present year is ended, next June 30, Commissioner Cabell estimates his men will have collected at least $308,000,000 at practically the same cost.

Only three other years have surpassed the year 1910 as an internal revenue producer since the bureau was established in 1863. In 1866 while Civil war taxes were still heavy, receipts mounted up to $310,000,000 and following the Spanish war in 1900 and 1901 they were $295,000,000 and $396,000,000, respectively. But for times of peace and normal prosperity, 1910 heads the roll, with the prospect of being eclipsed by 1911.

Drunkenness in Denmark.

The police in Denmark have a practical way of dealing with drunk persons found in the streets. They summon a cab and place the drunkard inside it; then drive to the station, where he gets sober; then home, where he arrives sober and safe. The policemen never leave him till they see him safe in the family bosom. Then the cabman makes his charge, and the police surgeon makes his, and the agents make their own claim for special duty, and this bill is presented to the host of the establishment where the culprit took his last overpowering glass.

Keir Hardie on Temperance.

Mr. Keir Hardie, M. P., speaking at Neath, said his travels in Scandinavia, Germany and Belgium had taught him the value of total abstinence. Temperance should be treated as part of the general movement for the redemption of the working classes.

COOK OUTDID THE SCHOLAR

Maybe Sign Was Not All Good Latin, But She Translated It Without Difficulty.

Jack returned home from college, where he had won high honors as a student of ancient languages, but he pleaded ignorance one day when his young sister asked him to translate a sign she had seen of an optician's which read thus: "Con sultu sabo utyo urey es."

Jack struggled manfully with it for several minutes and gave it up.

"There are some words in it that are Latin. The others aren't, anyhow. It doesn't make sense."

"That is what I said," replied his sister. "But cook translates it without any trouble. She says it means 'Consult us about your eyes.'"

"ECZEMA ITCHED SO I COULDN'T STAND IT."

"I suffered with eczema on my neck for about six months, beginning by little pimples breaking out. I kept scratching till the blood came. It kept getting worse, I couldn't sleep nights any more. It kept itching for about a month, then I went to a doctor and got some liquid to take. It seemed as if I was going to get better. The itching stopped for about three days, but when it started again was even worse than before. The eczema itched so badly I couldn't stand it any more. I went to a doctor and he gave me some medicine, but it didn't do any good. We have been having Cuticura Remedies in the house, so I decided to try them. I had been using Cuticura Soap, so I got me a box of Cuticura Ointment, and washed off the affected part with Cuticura Soap three times a day, and then put the Cuticura Ointment on. The first day I put it on, it relieved me of itching so I could sleep all that night. It took about a week, then I could see the scab come off. I kept the treatment up for three weeks, and my eczema was cured.

"My brother got his face burned with gunpowder, and he used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The people all thought he would have scars, but you can't see that he ever had his face burned. It was simply awful to look at before the Cuticura Remedies (Soap and Ointment) cured it." (Signed) Miss Elizabeth Gehrki, Forrest City, Ark., Oct. 16, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a liberal sample of each, with 32-page booklet on the care and treatment of skin and hair, will be sent, postfree, on application to Potter D. & C. Corp., Dept. X, Boston.

Youthful Criminals.

One of the most distressing cases he has ever had to deal with faced a Liverpool (England) magistrate recently, and one cannot wonder at his exclamation: "What can I do with these babies?" as he gazed upon five tiny prisoners in the dock. The youngest was only seven years old, and the eldest eleven, yet the quintet for two months have carried out thefts and other depredations with such skill and cunning that for two months the police and detectives have been trying in vain to find out who were the thieves. No fewer than 40 charges were brought against the children. The 7-year-old child was the ringleader, and quite an adept at thieving and planning thefts.

Poor Tom.

A very youthful and entirely unknown musical composer read some verses by the renowned Thomas Moore which he liked very much. Forthwith the buzz of inspiration circulated through his brain, and the next thing he knew he had evolved a tune which went right prettily with the words of the Irish poet. Much elated, the very youthful composer took the product to a publisher of popular songs and sang it to him. The publisher shook his head.

"The music's all right," he opined, "but the words are bum."

On a large estate in the Scottish highlands it was the custom for a piper to play in front of the house every week day morning to awaken the residents. After an overconvivial Saturday night, however, the piper forgot the day and began his reveille (can it be played on the pipes?) on Sunday morning. The angry master shouted to him from the bedroom window: "Here, do you not know the fourth commandment?" And the piper sturdily replied: "Nae, sir, but ye'll—hic—whustle it I'll—hic—try it, sir."

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the Bronson case to get the deposition of John Gilmore, millionaire. A lady requests Blakeley to buy her a Pullman ticket. He gives her lower 11 and retains lower 10. He finds a drunken man in lower 10 and retires in lower 9. He awakens in lower 7 and finds his clothes and bag missing. The man in lower 10 is found murdered. Circumstantial evidence points to both Blakeley and the man who stole his clothes. The train is wrecked and Blakeley is rescued from a burning car by a girl in blue. His arm is broken. The girl proves to be Alison West, his partner's sweetheart. Blakeley returns home and finds he is under surveillance. Moving pictures of the train taken just before the wreck reveal to Blakeley a man leaping from the train with his stolen grip. Investigation proves that the man's name is Sullivan. Mrs. Conway, the woman for whom Blakeley bought a Pullman ticket, tries to make a bargain with him for the forged notes, not knowing that they are missing. Blakeley and an amateur detective investigate the home of Sullivan's sister. From a servant Blakeley learns that Alison West had been there on a visit and Sullivan had been attentive to her. Sullivan is the husband of a daughter of the murdered man. Blakeley's house is ransacked by the police. He learns that the affair between Alison and his partner is off. Alison tells Blakeley about the attention paid her by Sullivan, whom she was on her way to marry when the wreck came. It is planned to give Mrs. Conway the forged notes in exchange for Sullivan.

CHAPTER XXIX.—Continued.

We crowded out of the elevator at the fourth floor, and found ourselves in a rather theatrical hallway of draperies and armor. It was very quiet; we stood uncertainly after the car had gone, and looked at the two or three doors in sight. They were heavy, covered with metal, and sound proof. From somewhere above came the metallic accuracy of a piano-piano, and through the open window we could hear—or feel—the throb of the Cannonball's engine.

"Well, Sherlock," McKnight said, "what's the next move in the game? It is our jump, or theirs. You brought us here."

None of us knew just what to do next. No sound of conversation penetrated the heavy doors. We waited uneasily for some minutes, and Hotchkiss looked at his watch. Then he put it to his ear.

"Good gracious!" he exclaimed, his head cocked on one side, "I believe it has stopped. I'm afraid we are late."

We were late. My watch and Hotchkiss' agreed at nine o'clock, and, with the discovery that our man might have come and gone, our zest in the adventure began to flag. McKnight motioned us away from the door and rang the bell. There was no response, no sound within. He rang it twice, the last time long and vigorously, without result. Then he turned and looked at us.

"I don't half like this," he said. "That woman is in; you heard me ask the elevator boy. For two cents I'd—"

I had seen it when he did. The door was ajar about an inch, and a narrow wedge of rose-colored light showed beyond. Then, with both men at my heels, I stepped into the private corridor of the apartment and looked around. It was a square reception hall, with hats, and a couple of chairs. A lantern of rose-colored glass and a desk light over a writing table across made the room bright and cheerful. It was empty.

None of us were comfortable. The place was full of feminine trifles that made us feel the weakness of our position. Some such instinct made McKnight suggest division.

"We look like an invading army," he said. "If she's here alone, we will startle her into a spasm. One of us could take a look around and—"

"What was that? Didn't you hear something?"

The sound, whatever it had been, was not repeated. We went awkwardly out into the hall, very uncomfortable, all of us, and flipped a coin. The choice fell on me, which was right enough, for the affair was mine, primarily.

"Wait just inside the door," I directed, "and if Sullivan comes, or anybody that answers his description, grab him without ceremony and ask him questions afterwards."

The apartment, save in the hallway, was unlighted. By one of those freaks of arrangement possible only in the modern flat, I found the kitchen first, and was struck a smart and unexpected blow by a swinging door. I carried a handful of matches, and by the time I had passed through a butler's pantry and a refrigerator room I was completely lost in the darkness. Until then the situation had been merely uncomfortable; suddenly it became grisly. From somewhere near came a long-sustained groan, followed almost instantly by the crash of something—glass or china—on the floor.

I struck a fresh match, and found myself in a narrow rear hallway. Behind me was the door by which I must have come; with a keen desire to get back to the place I had started from, I opened the door and attempted to cross the room. I thought I had kept my sense of direction, but I crashed without warning into what, from the resulting jangle, was the dining table, probably laid for dinner. I cursed my stupidity in getting into such a situation, and I cursed my nerves for making my hand shake when I tried to strike a match. The groan had not been repeated.

I braced myself against the table and struck the match sharply against the sole of my shoe. It flickered faintly and went out. And then, without the slightest warning, another dish went off the table. It fell with a thousand splinterings; the very air seemed broken into crashing waves of sound. I stood still, braced against the table, holding the red end of the dying match, and listened. I had not long to wait; the groan came again, and I recognized it, the cry of a dog in straits. I breathed again.

"Come, old fellow," I said. "Come on, old man. Let's have a look at you."

I could hear the thud of his tail on the floor, but he did not move. He only whimpered. There is something companionable in the presence of a dog, and I fancied this dog in trouble. Slowly I began to work my way around the table toward him.

"Good boy," I said, as he whimpered. "We'll find the light, which ought to be somewhere or other around here, and then—"

I stumbled over something, and I drew back my foot almost instantly. "Did I step on you, old man?" I exclaimed, and bent to pat him. I remember straightening suddenly and hearing the dog pad softly toward me around the table. I recall even that I had put the matches down and could not find them. Then, with a bursting horror of the room and its contents, of the gibbering dark around me, I turned and made for the door by which I had entered.

I could not find it. I felt along the endless wainscoting, past miles of wall. The dog was beside me, I think, but he was part and parcel now, to my excited mind, with the Thing under the table. And when, after aeons of search, I found a knob and stumbled into the reception hall, I was as nearly in a panic as any man could be.

I was myself again in a second, and by the light from the hall I led the way back to the tragedy I had stumbled on. Bronson still sat at the table, his elbows propped on it, his cigarette still lighted, burning a hole in the cloth. Partly under the table lay Mrs. Conway, face down. The dog stood over her and wagged his tail.

McKnight pointed silently to a large copper ash tray, filled with ashes and charred bits of paper.

"The notes, probably," he said ruefully. "He got them after all, and burned them before her. It was more than she could stand. Stabbed him first and then herself."

Hotchkiss got up and took off his hat. "They are dead," he announced solemnly, and took his note-book out of his hatband.

McKnight and I did the only thing we could think of—drove Hotchkiss and the dog out of the room, and closed and locked the door. "It's a matter for the police," McKnight asserted. "I suppose you've got an officer tied to you somewhere, Lawrence? You usually have."

We left Hotchkiss in charge and went downstairs. It was McKnight who first saw Johnson, leaning against a park railing across the street, and called him over. We told him in a few words what we had found, and he grinned at me cheerfully.

"After awhile, in a few weeks or months, Mr. Blakeley," he said, "when you get tired of monkeying around with the blood-stain and finger-print specialist upstairs, you come to me. I've had that fellow you want under surveillance for ten days!"

CHAPTER XXX.

Finer Details.

At ten minutes before two the following day, Monday, I arrived at my office. I had spent the morning putting my affairs in shape, and in a trip to the stable. The afternoon would see me either a free man or a prisoner for an indefinite length of time, and, in spite of Johnson's promise to produce Sullivan, I was more prepared for the latter than the former.

Blobs was watching for me outside the door, and it was clear that he was in a state of excitement bordering on delirium. He did nothing, however, save to tip me a wink that meant "As man to man, I'm for you." I was too much engrossed either to reprove him or to return the courtesy, but I heard him follow me down the hall to the small room where we kept outgrown law books, typewriter supplies and, incidentally, our wraps. I was wondering vaguely if I would ever hang my hat on its nail again, when the door closed behind me. It shut firmly, without any particular amount of sound, and I was left in the dark. I groped my way to it, irritably, to find it locked on the outside. I shook it frantically, and was rewarded by a sibilant whisper through the keyhole.

"Keep quiet," Blobs was saying huskily. "You're in deadly peril. The police are waiting in your office, three of 'em. I'm goin' to lock the whole bunch in and throw the key out of the window."

"Come back here, you imp of Satan!" I called furiously, but I could hear him speeding down the corridor, and the slam of the outer office door by which he always announced his presence. And so I stood there in the ridiculous cupboard, hot with the heat of a steaming September day, musty with the smell of old leather bindings, littered with broken overshoes and handleless umbrellas. I was apoplectic with rage one minute, and choked with laughter the next. It seemed an hour before Blobs came back.

He came without haste, strutting with new dignity, and passed outside my prison door.

"Well, I guess that will hold them for a while," he remarked comfortably, and proceeded to turn the key. "I've got 'em fastened up like sardines in a can!" he explained, working with the lock. "Gee whiz! you'd ought to hear 'em!" When he got his breath after the shaking I gave him, he began to sputter. "How'd I know?" he demanded sulkily. "You nearly broke your neck gettin' away the other time. And I haven't got the old key. It's lost."

"Where's it lost?" I demanded, with another gesture toward his coat collar.

"Down the elevator shaft." There was a gleam of indignant satisfaction through his tears of rage and humiliation.

And so, while he hunted the key in the debris at the bottom of the shaft, I quieted his prisoners with the assurance that the lock had slipped, and that they would be free as lords as soon as we could find the janitor with a pass-key. Stuart went down finally and discovered Blobs, with the key in his pocket, telling the engineer how he had tried to save me from arrest and failed. When Stuart came up he was almost cheerful, but Blobs did not appear again that day.

Simultaneous with the finding of the key came Hotchkiss, and we went in together. I shook hands with two men who, with Hotchkiss, made a not very animated group. The taller one, an oldish man, lean and hard, announced his errand at once.

"A Pittsburg warrant?" I inquired, unlocking my cigar drawer.

"Yes. Allegheny county has assumed jurisdiction, the exact locality where the crime was committed being in doubt." He seemed to be the spokesman. The other, shorter and rotund, kept an amiable silence. "We hope you will see the wisdom of waiving extradition," he went on. "It will save time."

"I'll come, of course," I agreed. "The sooner the better. But I want you to give me an hour here, gentlemen. I think we can interest you. Have a cigar?"

The lean man took a cigar; the rotund man took three, putting two in his pocket.

"How about the catch of that door?" he inquired jovially. "Any danger of it going off again?" Really, considering the circumstances, they were remarkably cheerful. Hotchkiss, however, was not. He paced the floor uneasily, his hands under his coat-tails. The arrival of McKnight created a diversion; he carried a long package and a corkscrew, and shook hands with the police and opened the bottle with a single gesture.

"I always want something to cheer on these occasions," he said. "Where's the water, Blakeley? Everybody ready?" Then in French he toasted the two detectives.

"To your eternal discomfiture," he said, bowing ceremoniously. "May you go home and never come back! If you take Monsieur Blakeley with you, I hope you choke."

The lean man nodded gravely. "Prosit," he said. But the fat one leaned back and laughed consumedly.

Hotchkiss finished a mental synopsis of his position, and put down his glass. "Gentlemen," he said pompously, "within five minutes the man you want will be here, a murderer caught in a net of evidence so fine that a mosquito could not get through."

The detectives glanced at each other solemnly. Had they not in their possession a sealskin bag containing a wallet and a bit of gold chain, which by putting the crime on me, would leave a gap big enough for Sullivan himself to crawl through?

"Why don't you say your little speech before Johnson brings the other man, Lawrence?" McKnight inquired. "They won't believe you, but it will help them to understand what is coming."

"You understand, of course," the lean man put in gravely, "that what you say may be used against you."

"I'll take the risk," I answered impatiently.

It took some time to tell the story of my worse than useless trip to Pittsburg, and its sequel. They listened gravely, without interruption.

"Mr. Hotchkiss here," I finished, "believes that the man Sullivan, whom we are momentarily expecting, committed the crime. Mr. McKnight is inclined to implicate Mrs. Conway, who stabbed Bronson and then herself last night. As for myself, I am open to conviction."

"I hope not," said the stout detective quizzically. And then Alison was announced. My impulse to go out and meet her was forestalled by the detectives, who rose when I did. McKnight, therefore, brought her in, and I met her at the door.

"I have put you to a great deal of trouble," I said contritely, when I saw her glance around the room. "I wish I had not—"

"It is only right that I should come," she replied, looking up at me. "I am the unconscious cause of most of it, I am afraid. Mrs. Dallas is going to wait in the outer office."

I presented Hotchkiss and the two detectives, who eyed her with interest. In her poise, her beauty, even in her gown, I fancy she represented a new type to them. They remained standing until she sat down.

"I have brought the necklace," she began, holding out a white-wrapped box, "as you asked me to."

I passed it, unopened, to the detectives. "The necklace from which was broken the fragment you found in the sealskin bag," I explained. "Miss West found it on the floor of the car, near lower ten."

Knowledge of the World.

Everbody but a fool keeps good friends with waiters, for, whether these have any union or not, they are a big-fisted brotherhood, and more than once I have seen every waiter in a restaurant, even as a swarm of bees, fall aboard some "bad man," and when he came to in the hospital he would look like Quixote after the swine drovers got through with him. With all their tricks and knowledge of the world, waiters are singularly unspoiled, good-natured and agreeable, and they are full of interesting, often scientific, information. They see a side of humanity that nobody else ever sees, mostly the comedy and peccadillo side. Considering their housed-up condition, it seems remarkable how much they know about what is going on. When not busy they are always enthusiastically engaged in swapping pointers and information, which, in a way, accounts for some of them getting rich in Wall street.

Difference in Laughter.

A good honest laugh at a good honest joke or bit of sarcasm rubs out the gathering wrinkles of care; but an ill tempered joke, is like a poisoned arrow, which makes a wound, and leaves its poison after it is withdrawn.

Laughter a Good Medicine.

Always laugh when you can; it is a cheap medicine. Merriment is a philosophy not well understood. It is the sunny side of existence.—Byron.

GIBSON'S ONE GOOD POINT

In the Old Gentleman's Eyes It Outweighed Any Slight Error in Orthography.

The old man had given his son a very fair education, and had taken him into his shop. The young fellow was over-nice about a great many things, but the father made no comment. One day an order came in from a customer.

"I wish to goodness," exclaimed the son, "that Gibson would learn to spell."

"What's the matter with it?" inquired the father, cheerfully.

"Why, he spells coffee with a 'k.'"

"No—does he? I never noticed it."

"Of course you never did," said the son, pettishly. "You never notice anything like that."

"Perhaps not, my son," replied the old man, gently; "but there is one thing I do notice, which you will learn by and by, and that is that Gibson pays cash."

Open-Air Schools Increasing.

Since January 1, 1907, sixty-five open air schools for children afflicted with or predisposed to tuberculosis have been established in twenty-eight cities, according to an announcement made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The first open air school in the United States was established on January 1, 1907, by the board of education of Providence, R. I., at the instance of Dr. Ellen A. Stone. The next school was established in May of the same year at Pittsburg, and the third at Boston in July, 1908. According to the reports received by the National Association, the result of the open air class-work has been to restore most of the children to normal health and efficiency. One of these open air schools or classes should be established for each 25,000 population, especially in cities.

Irish Landmark Gone.

The famous Temple of Liberty, one of Ulster's best-known landmarks, was burned to the ground the other morning. Erected at Toomebridge, on the County Londonderry side of the River Bann, by the late Rev. John Carey, some 60 years ago, it had a romantic history. Its founder was a remarkable man, possessed of considerable wealth. He was a descendant of a Cromwellian family, and had been arrested and tried for murder, but was unanimously acquitted by the jury, whereupon he erected the building in question.—London Mail.

The Point of View.

"I notice that you have given up the fight for a cleaner city. You used to be one of the leaders in the opposition to the smoke nuisance."

"Yes. I've come to the conclusion that smoke cannot be abolished. It's useless to keep harping on the question."

"By the way, what business are you in now?"

"Oh, I've quit working for a salary. An uncle of mine left me a valuable interest in one of our biggest machine shops."

DAME NATURE HINTS

When the Food Is Not Suited.

When Nature gives her signal that something is wrong it is generally with the food; the old Dame is always faithful and one should act at once.

To put off the change is to risk that which may be irreparable. An Arizona man says:

"For years I could not safely eat any breakfast. I tried all kinds of breakfast foods, but they were all soft, starchy messes, which gave me distressing headaches. I drank strong coffee, too, which appeared to benefit me at the time, but added to the headaches afterwards. Toast and coffee were no better, for I found the toast very constipating.

"A friend persuaded me to quit coffee and the starchy breakfast foods, and use Postum and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice.

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have any headaches. I have gained 12 pounds in weight and feel better in every way. Grape-Nuts make a delicious as well as a nutritious dish, and I find that Postum is easily digested and never produces dyspepsia symptoms."

Absent-Minded Bridegroom.

John Adams has always been absent minded, says the Kansas City Journal. Yesterday he went with Ida Lee, of Kansas City, Mo., to Kansas City, Kan., to be married by Paul Huff, acting probate judge. When Judge Huff asked him if he would "take this woman to be your lawfully wedded wife," he was looking out of the window and didn't answer.

"If you've any doubts about it we will stop right here," the bride said defiantly.

Adams protested that he had not hesitated at all, but had merely been thinking about something else. The ceremony was completed without further hitch.

In twenty years' experience as a nurse I have never found as good a remedy for Skin Troubles, Eczema, etc., as Resinol Ointment. Its cooling, healing effect on sore nipples is truly wonderful. Mrs. T. B. Henderson, Albany, N. Y. You can get Resinol Ointment at the drug store.

His Business Improving.

"Yes," said the old lady, "now that spring is with us business will pick up with the old man."

Asked what he did for a living she replied:

"Well, he sells rabbit feet for watch charms an' to stave off hoodoos, an' he does fine with rattlesnake rattles, but he makes most at sellin' young mockin' birds an' prayin' fer rain."

THE SCHOOL APPROPRIATION—WILL MR. BROWNING GET OUT?

We understand that the County Commissioners were waited upon by two of the school commissioners on Monday and more money demanded for the schools.

This request was refused and the School Commissioners were given to understand that if more money is expected that they must make the next move.

This means a crisis in our school affairs.

Will the School Commissioners measure up to the responsibilities of their high office and ask Supt. Browning to resign? Which will they sacrifice, one man who hasn't a child in school and never has had and whose chief interests are the salary and the perpetuation of his political prestige, or will they sacrifice the interests and education and the preparation for life's work of our 5000 children?

It does seem that the path of duty is so plain in this matter that any man, worthy to be called man, cannot err therein.

If they do continue to sit under the magic spell of this one man, the time and season is at hand when the people should rise in their might and drive them from power forever so that we shall come once more into our rights.

We have every reason to believe that the school appropriations this year, instead of being decreased $5000, would have been materially increased if our people had confidence in the school management.

If the present school board would place at the head of our school system a man of liberal education, a successful teacher and one who has not been involved in any of our recent troubles, a man like Prof. C. E. Bender or Prof. F. E. Rathbun, or any other educator of like rank, the County Commissioners would come to our rescue for the coming year and provide ample funds for running the schools.

This paper does not believe the school funds are spent wisely and to the best advantage. While of course the reports account for the expenditure of every dollar in a general way, we do not believe we are getting results commensurate with the outlay.

Let us contrast a year under Prof. Palmer with a year under Supt. Browning.

Supt. Browning states at teachers' meetings that he has increased the salaries of teachers from $18,000 per year to $42,000. Let us see what the public are getting for this:

In 1899 the children received the benefit of 110 days of school.

In 1909 there were 130 to 139 days of school—a paltry increase of 20 to 29 days.

In 1899 there were 144 teachers and in 1909 there 165, or an increase of only 21.

In 1899 the minimum monthly salary paid was $25, and in 1909 it was $27—an insignificant raise of $2 per month; and a large number of teachers, apparently more than thirty, received only $27.

The total school expenditures in 1899 were $28,000, while in 1909 they were more than $56,000—or they had more than doubled in ten years.

We are not prepared without a more critical examination and access to other reports to decide wherein the trouble lies. We leave our readers to draw their own conclusions. Under the law the County Superintendent has a peculiar and absolute power in the matter of teachers' certificates.

Can this mean that the Superintendent thinks that the first class teachers are his relatives and friends and this great increase in salaries of more than $20,000 is a reward for their faithfulness?

We hear the County Commissioners commended everywhere for their wisdom.

WILL STAND ACQUITTED.

On the great day of account it will be found that men have erred more in judging of the honesty or others than in any one thing else, not even religion excepted. Many who have been condemned and had the stigma of dishonesty fixed upon them because misfortune disabled them from paying their just debts will stand acquitted by the judge of the quick and dead while others covering dishonest hearts and actions undetected by man will be convicted. It is our earnest desire to eradiate the impression so fatal to many a young man, that one cannot live by being perfectly honest. You must have known men who have gone on for years in unbroken prosperity and yet never adopted that base motto, "All is fair in trade.' You must have seen too, noble examples of those who have met with losses and failures, and yet risen from them all with a conscious integrity, and who have been sustained by the testimony of all around them, that though unfortunate, they were never dishonest. When we set before you such examples, when we show you, not that "Honesty is the best policy," but that it is the very key-stone of the whole arch of manly and christian qualities, it cannot be that every ingenious heart does not respond to the appeal. Heaven grant all such to feel that an "Honest man is the noblest work of God" and to live as they feel.

THE CONSERVATION OF VITALITY.

There is also a Committee of One Hundred on the National Health. In a report just issued under the hand of Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, the committee shows that, as measured by earning power, the vital assets of the nation are three to five times the physical. In respect to length of life and freedom from disease there is as great room for improvement in vital resources as in the protection accorded to natural wealth.

The item of longevity affords an especially impressive feature of the report. With the preliminary note that length of life increases wherever sanitary science and preventive medicine are applied, the statement is given that Massachusetts, where alone comparative statistics are available, life is lengthened at the rate of fourteen years per century. This is half the German rate. In Europe the average duration of life has doubled in 350 years. In India it is stationary.

Cousumption is the great foe to further lengthening of life in Ameriba. Yet the committee finds that three-quarters of the cases of tuberculosis could be avoided. By the rigid application of preventive science against the ninety different causes of death which may be classified, fifteen years at least could be added to the average of human life.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

"Mother's Day" will be observed at the M. E. church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Among others Mrs. McIntosh, sister of Bishop Harris, of Corea, will address the meeting.

Dr. and Mrs. Carr have re christened their cottage "Lyndale." It was originally known as the Cecil cottage.

Mr. H. L. Bitner has moved into the Hocking apartments on F street.

The Epworth social at Dixie cottage Thursday evening last was largely attended and greatly enjoyed. The only drawback was that "Ab." didn't get enough of "good eatin's." Miss Gertrude Shirer, of Oakland, was present.

Mr. J. L. Echard made good use of his new automobile Sunday by treating his neighbors to rides. Dr. Webb Ravenscroft assisted Mr. Echard in running the machine.

The bathing facilities at the lake are well under way and will be ready in a few days.

Dr. and Mrs. McLain and Miss Kate, of Wheeling, arrived here Thursday of last week to remain until fall.

The preliminary program for the season is out and being distributed by Dr. Shelton's clerical force. Every one pronounces this the handsomest program ever sent out from here, and indeed the most artistic piece of work ever done in the county. THE REPUBLICAN office did the work.

Ground was broken Monday and material put on the ground for Mrs. Day's cottage on G street, opposite the large Stone residence.

As anticipated last week, Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Carr, of Fairmont, arrived here Tuesday morning and are in their cottage.

Mrs. L. B. C. List came Tuesday and will have the Loch Lynn Hotel put in order for an early opening.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Camden are now occupying the Beacham cottage.

The streets are being put in order by Mr. Renzie Calhoun under the direction of street commissioner T. H. Cuppett. The log drag is being used and is doing good work at less than one-half the cost of the road machine.

Mr. Bryson Gibson has the contract to put up the foundation and chimneys of the Day cottage. Brick will be used for this work.

Sunday evening the newly elected officers of the Epworth League will be installed in the M. E. church. The program will be quite interesting and may occupy the entire evening hour. A cordial invitation is extended to all residents and visitors to attend this and all services at this church.

Miss Jennie Murphy came to the Park yesterday to again take charge of the Fallon cottage for the season.

Mrs. B. F. Wilderson, of near Gorman, was visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Chance, Sunday.

The trustees recently appointed for the Mt. Lake Park schools are Messrs. E. E. Friend, J. L. Echard and J. A. Hayden.

Among those in our district who have a special interest in the coming Republican primaries we note Mr. E. Z. Tower, who desires to be his own successor; Messrs. F. P. Arnold and B. F. Crane, who, on account of the rigors of winter on the mountain top, desire a milder climate on Chesapeake Bay for the winmonths, and Messrs. Geo. D. White and Wm. Maffett, who would like a two years' lease of the county hotel near the courthouse. There may be others; in fact, District No. 7 could easily furnish good material for the entire ticket.

Miss Hattie Murphy has rented Mrs. Garthright's house on H street where she proposes to rent furnished rooms.

Intelligence was received here yesterday of the serious illness of Dr. J. W. Laughlin at his home in Deer Park.

Mr. Mansfield, the new B. & O. agent at this station, took charge Monday.

Don't forget to patronize the festival Saturday night and help a good cause along.

Civic Club Desires to Impress Upon All the Necessity of Movement.

"Clean Up Day" in Oakland has been set for Wednesday by the Civic Club of the town and the event promises to be of more than ordinary interest and importance to everyone who wishes to have the city present a clean and neat appearance.

At a called meeting of the Club held Tuesday afternoon plans were perfected for the campaign of cleaning up. These plans are in line with those adopted by the State government. The interest in the meeting was shown by the large attendance of members.

A committee composed of several members of the club which was appointed to wait upon Mayor Hart and the City Council at its meeting held last Monday night reported that the governing body of the town had acceded to the request of the club and promised that on Wednesday, the 17th inst., teams would be provided to remove the refuse gathered up and deposited in proper receptacles. These receptacles should not be large—something that can be easily handled—and should be placed at convenient points along the streets and alleys so that the men and teams may be able to gather them with the least possible delay. Persons who possibly can, however, are requested to dispose of their own rakings and debris as it will be almost impossible for the municipal teams to carry all away the same day.

The next meeting of the club will be on Wednesday, May 31st, when all members are requested to be present.

Mother's Day Next Sunday.

One of the prettiest tributes of modern times is the universal observance of the second Sunday of May as Mother's Day, which falls this year on the 14th. This is the day that men of all nationalities and creeds, in all walks of life and in all climes, from the humblest peasant to the ruler of the land, from the brawny-armed laborer to the captain of industry, and from the most degraded criminal to the highest church dignitary, all meet on the same plane and turn back through yesteryears to the recollections of their mother's guiding influence and unite in revering her memory. The beautiful custom was inaugurated a few years ago by Miss Anna Jarvis, who in her world-wide appeal asked that men observe the day by wearing a white flower in the lapel of their coats, the emblematic blossom being the white carnation where procurable. Miss Jarvis has interested the management of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in the movement and on all its dining and cafe cars on Mother's Day the floral decorations will be white carnations. Each car will carry a large bank of the carnations and the attendants will pin one of the flowers upon all patrons of the cars during the day.

There will be preaching in the Presbyterian church Sunday, May 14th, both morning and evening, at 11 a. m. and 7.30 p. m., by Dr. J. S. Conning, of Baltimore. There will be a congregational meeting after the evening service for the purpose of extending a call to Rev. J. Bamford, of Malone, New York.

Take a day off next Wednesday and "Clean Up" your premises.

Mr. G. A. Fraley, who with his family is occupying the Episcopal rectory on Alder street, has decided not to move from that property to the Gilmor S. Hamill residence on Liberty street, but will continue to occupy the rectory until in the fall when he expects to have his new house on Second street completed, work upon which will begin shortly.

Take a day off next Wednesday and "Clean Up" your premises.

Dr. R. B. Ward will leave Oakland tomorrow for West Union, West Va., where he goes to assist in the dedication of a new M. E. church. Bishop Moore will also be present at the dedicatory services. West Union was Dr. Ward's first appointment after he entered the ministry where he was stationed about twenty-five years ago.

Make the town shine by lending a hand toward cleaning up Wednesday next.

Mr. S. A. Kendall, of Meversdale, was in the city and at Crellin last Thursday and Friday, going from here Friday night to Washington, D. C., where his family have been spending the winter. As soon as the season opens at the Park Mr. Kendall will install his family in a cottage there where they will remain during the summer months.

The action of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad officials in having the premises surrounding the station and the adjacent grounds to the tracks through Oakland cleared of brush and refuse generally has been favorably commented upon by all whose attention has been called to the improved appearance of the property. Superintendent Sparks of the B. & O., who directed that the work be done, has the thanks of the community generally for his efforts in this direction.

WOODMEN LODGE INSTITUTED

Fraternal Insurance Organization Formed in Oakland Saturday Night.

A lodge of the Woodmen of the World, a fraternal insurance organization which has had a most wonderful growth in the past several years, was instituted in Oakland last Saturday night by Mr. D. W. Thayer of Washington, D. C., assisted by Mr. W. L. Loomis, of Crellin, and a number of the members of the Crellin lodge, who came over to Oakland for that purpose.

The local organization start off with a membership of about twenty and is well officered. Mr Bert Ashby is the presiding officer of the lodge and Mr. W. L. Thomas is the secretary. Meetings will be arrange at stated intervals and the prospects for a rapid growth of the organization here are extremely bright. The principles of the order are broad and the rate of insurance is so low that it will be possible for those of very ordinary incomes to become members, provided their physical examination are up to the standard.

Fruit Crop Not Injured.

There has been some anxiety as to whether or not the fruit crop had been injured during the cold snap of last week. Several mornings there was frost and ice was reported in some sections of the county, but from all the information gathered no damage has been done to the buds, and they are in a thriving condition. Doubtless the dry condition of the atmosphere was the reason they were not hurt.

COMMERCIAL IMPORTANCE of CANALS

THE MANCHESTER TERMINUS OF THE CANAL

THE American tourist who flits rapidly and carelessly across the continent of Europe, looks upon the canals of the countries he passes through as being in the main mere picturesque features that add to the interest of the landscape, but have been rendered practically obsolete in a commercial sense by the building of railways. He sees barges upon them, to be sure, and in winter he is delighted by the sight of the people of Holland skating along the frozen water courses. But he would be astonished if he knew the important part the canals and canalized rivers play in the economic life of European nations.

Canals, as they were originally constructed, cannot compete with railroads, but as the latter have spread over the land, the waterways have been altered to meet the new conditions. Their chief mission in these days is to connect the centers of population and industry with the coasts—to make them seaports—and this has been accomplished to an extent that is surprising to the uninformed.

The pressure of international competition is mainly responsible for the extensive improvement of waterways in the continental European countries that have the highest degree of industrial development. Every manufacturing country, district or city, if it is to prosper, must be able to meet this competition and to assemble materials as cheaply as possible from all parts of the world, and be provided with facilities for placing its goods cheaply and readily upon the chief domestic and foreign markets. The countries of the continent, recognizing this, have adopted the policy of providing with equal care for the development of both railroads and waterways. In Great Britain, on the contrary, with the exception of two canals in Scotland, the inland waterways, both rivers and canals, have been improved and are operated by corporations. The British government is considering the advisability of changing its policy toward waterways.

Of all the continental countries, France has spent the most on canal navigation. Her extensive plans for waterway development, adopted in 1879, provided for a system by which the waterways should be all connected with each other, and with the chief centers of population and industry. They are mainly owned or controlled by the state, but when in 1903 a law was passed providing for the construction of new waterways, it stipulated that the beneficiary parties or localities must advance at least half of the total cost. The interests making this contribution are permitted to recoup themselves from tolls or dues, and from a monopoly of providing towage or traction. Three canals, one from Cette to the Rhone, one from Marseilles to the Rhone, and one from the coal fields to the Oise river—the Canal du Nord—are now being constructed under these conditions.

The most important of the commercial waterways of France is the Seine river, and there is an immense traffic upon it between Havre and Rouen and Paris. At large expense it has been canalized and provided with locks and lateral canals, while other canals connect the river through its tributaries with the Loire, the Rhone, the Rhine, the Meuse and the Scheldt. Another elaborate system of main and lateral canals that carries a vast tonnage to Paris connects the capital with Dunkirk and Gravelines, and between Paris and the Belgian and German frontiers there is a perfect network of waterways. The western and southern parts of the country are nearly as well provided with canals. The Canal du Midi, which, running from Bordeaux to Cette, connects the Bay of Biscay with the Mediterrancan, enables the former city to supply the whole of southern France with the products of foreign lands, and of the French colonies which it imports.

In connection with this Canal du Midi, the French government has long under consideration a most interesting and important project—nothing less than to convert the waterway into a ship canal by which sea-going vessels and the warships of France could pass from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean without being exposed to the violent storms of the peninsular coast and without passing through the Straits of Gibraltar. The people of France never lose sight of the possibility of war with Great Britain, and this ship canal plan appeals to them especially because it would relieve their navy from the necessity of steaming under the thousand guns that arm King George's tremendous fortress on the rock. So the project seems almost equally important from a commercial and a military view, and doubtless will be carried out.

Altogether, France has nearly 3,000 miles of canals and 5,000 miles of navigable rivers, and in the last 25 years the rate of increase as regards tonnage and ton-mileage has been more rapid on the waterways than on the railways.

In the Rhine and the Elbe, Germany possesses two commercial waterways of the first magnitude. The Rhine is navigable for small river steamboats as far as Basel, just across the Swiss frontier, and small sea-going steamers ascend it as far as Mannheim. This mighty river has been improved by the Germans at a cost of more than $12,500,000, and its waters bear an immense traffic in coal, iron ore, iron and steel manufactures and other heavy freight. The Rhine valley, dotted with picturesque ruined castles and saturated with legend and romance, is also one of the busiest districts in all Europe, for it is densely populated and contains numerous important industrial cities. Canals connect the Rhine with the Meuse, Saone, Seine, Danube and Ems rivers. The Rhine-Rhone canal follows the course of the river from Strassburg almost to Basel, and is generally used instead of the river.

The Elbe is second only to the Rhine in commercial importance. It is navigable throughout its whole course in Germany and along it lie some of the chief silver and coal mines, salt fields, sheep pastures and beet-root areas in the empire. Moreover, it links Berlin, the capital, with Hamburg, the chief port, by the canals of the Havel and Spree river systems.

The Weser, the Oder, the Vistula and other rivers are of great importance as commercial highways, and go to make up Germany's grand total of nearly 6,000 miles of navigable rivers, of which about 1,400 miles are canalized.

Germany's canals are many, their total mileage being something like 1,500, and large sums are spent on their improvement. The most important internationally is the great North Sea and Baltic ship canal, which traverses Schleswig-Holstein, saving two days' time by steamer between Hamburg and all the Baltic ports of Germany. This canal was begun in 1887 and was opened to traffic in 1895, and is a source of much pride to Emperor William. The Ludwigs canal in Bavaria united the Danube with the Main, thus supplying a continuous waterway from the North sea to the Black sea. The Plauen canal connects the Elbe with the Havel, and there are systems connecting the Oder with the Elbe and the Memel with the Pregel.

A waterway expert has said that there are too many small craft on the German canals to keep the cost of transportation down as low as it might be, but the [illegible]

[illegible] The improvements on said farm consist of a dwelling, barn and other outbuildings in fair condition, and is also improved by a fair orchard of apple and cherry trees. About 90 acres of said farm is cleared and in cultivation and the balance is in timber, the whole being under fence.

Owing to the level condition of the country, the construction of a canal in Holland involves but comparatively little labor and expense. Many of the canals are used constantly as substitutes for public highways, and in the winter their frozen surfaces offer convenient roads for the skaters who throng them on their way to and from market and about their various occupations. So complete is the canal system that by means of it a resident of Rotterdam could breakfast at Delft or The Hague, dine at Leyden and sup at Amsterdam, or return to his home before nightfall. Since not only the surface but the beds of many of Holland's canals are above the level of land, the drainage is of the greatest importance. This is effected by means of pumps worked by the windmills that are such a characteristic feature of the Dutch landscape. The banks of the canals are maintained by the families that live along them, each being assigned a portion to keep in repair.

Emory R. Johnson, professor of transportation and commerce in the University of Pennsylvania, who recently made a study of European waterways, as the special representative of the National River and Harbor congress, calls attention to the way in which Germany, France, Holland and Belgium have co-operated in establishing standard dimensions for their canals and barges, and connecting their systems. In this manner the through shipment of international traffic has been facilitated. "Another feature of the waterway policy of these European countries," he says, "is that care is taken to provide waterways with adequate terminal and harbor facilities, and to make such physical connections between railroads and waterways at all inland harbors as to guarantee the easy and economical transfer of traffic from cars to boats and water to rails. It is realized that terminal facilities and rail connections are as essential a part of the projects for making waterways useful as are reliable channels of adequate width and depth. The Rhine river, for instance, has 62 harbors equipped as fully as commercial needs require, with storage and transfer facilities. At 13 of these terminals the direct transfer of goods from trains to boats and river to rail is possible. Many of the harbors include large basins, some of which are used for the transfer and storage of commodities, while others are constructed to enable big industrial plants to locate on water frontage. Each city constructs is own harbor with but little, if any, aid from the state, the expense being borne by the city, aided in some instances by private interests."

[illegible]until cutlet," with two bananas for [illegible]ner! And after this desperate plunge into the flesh pots of Egypt he would always feel as guilty as if he had just robbed a safe and could hear the police coming to take him in.

You couldn't persuade that young man that he was slowly but certainly killing himself. Had you stood him up before all the physiologists of the world, to be assured by them not only on their reputation as men of science, but on their decency and honor as men, that that sort of a diet was never "intended," by any scheme of nature or any deity imaginable, for the human machinery of digestion, he would probably have come out of the seance with a vague idea that somehow or other they were just trying to fool him for some hidden and vicious purpose of their own.

It would be a good thing if all men and all women were early in their youth put through a course of study—I mean actual study, from the thing and not from the book, which is worse than useless, not even being useless—on the vast differences between the digestive apparatus of the plant-eating animal and that of the meat-eating, or omnivorous, animal, such as man.

The young vegetarian mentioned above was very brave; as brave as anybody could be in such circumstances and on such a diet, but he would often look with longing eyes on the steaks and chops his companions consumed at table, while he himself was sturdily punishing himself with rice and other wholly unsavory dishes. Also he was rather dim of eye and not specially active on his feet or at his work. And although he might not have admitted it were he charged with it, I knew he was afflicted with a disorder of the digestive apparatus that always accompanies vegetarianism. He was, in fine, the victim of a prejudice that left him unequal to the work he was compelled to do, and which he was doing at the expense of his health, happiness and success in the world in which he moved.

Upon what grounds does the practice of vegetarianism rest its claims?

The answer is, on no grounds whatsoever, unless it be those of the man who has an "idea" that if he looks over his left shoulder at the moon, or sees a black cat on the thirteenth day of the month, he is dead sure to have bad luck.

And yet it is only when it is ridden to death as a hobby that vegetarianism can be charged with inanity. When it is practiced occasionally and for a limited time, and at irregular intervals, it becomes the useful servant of scientific intelligence. There is a "soul of truth" in vegetarianism, as there also may be, so far as you or I know to the contrary, in the belief that if you see a black tabby on Friday the thirteenth, you will lose regularly at poker for some considerable time thereafter. This soul of truth takes us backward a bit in the natural history of man.

The primitive ancestors of European races, like the savage races of the present time, were naturally fitted for, and therefore "needed," a certain amount of irregularity in their feeding. Sometimes game would be plenty, and sometimes it would be scarce. When it was scarce, or not to be had at all, those primitive ancestors of ours were necessarily limited to a starvation diet. They were very hungry, and their hunger made them keen on the hunt, active, bright-eyed, alert, vigorous and pushing. Then, with a successful kill, there would naturally be a little gorging of meat, followed by a long and lazy rest.

Now, while we, their descendants, are not quite as savage or quite as improvident as were our primitive forefathers of the jungle or the prairies, and while it is true that we are not distressed with alternate scarcity and redundancies of food, we inherit the stomachs and the general digestive machinery of those active old fathers of ours, and a reasonable degree of alternate gorging and starving is good for us. Unfortunately, however, most of us have to attend to business year in and year out, and we cannot lie idle around the woods digesting off our gorges, whereas fasting is not to be thought of by persons who work at occupations very different from hunting.

But we can do this: We can cut down, or cut out, our meat diet at irregular and fairly frequent intervals; go without meat altogether for a week or so; be vegetarians, not regularly, but quite irregularly, for short lengths of time. And then when we give meat its inning, we will be better prepared to appreciate it, and to extract from it the health and happiness we need.

The vegetarian is therefore herewith supplied with a "scientific principle" as sound and as negotiable as a golden eagle. But if he adopts it he will have to cut himself in two.

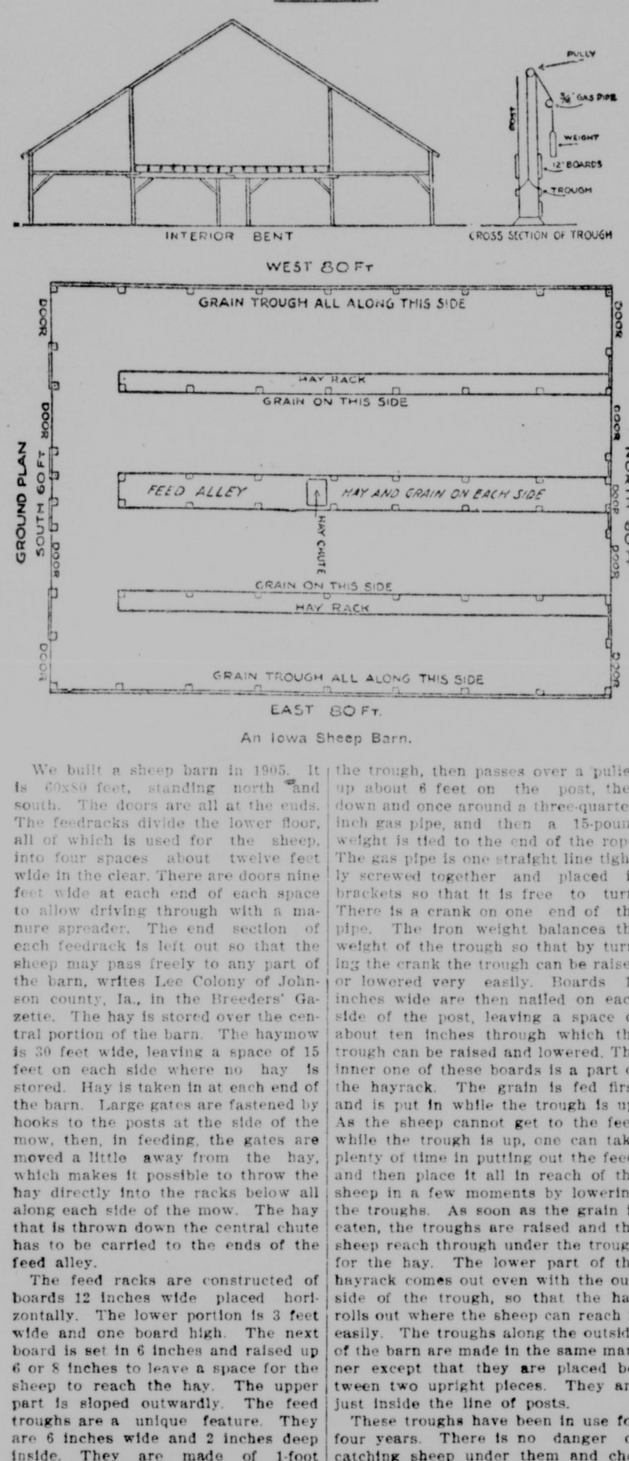
CONSTRUCTION OF IOWA SHEEP BARN INEXPENSIVE

Feedracks Divide Lower Floor Into Four Spaces, as Shown in Illustration—Feedtroughs Are Unique Feature —No Danger of Animal Being Caught.



An Iowa Sheep Barn.

We built a sheep barn in 1905. It is 60x80 feet, standing north and south. The doors are all at the ends. The feedracks divide the lower floor, all of which is used for the sheep, into four spaces about twelve feet wide in the clear. There are doors nine feet wide at each end of each space to allow driving through with a manure spreader. The end section of each feedrack is left out so that the sheep may pass freely to any part of the barn, writes Lee Colony of Johnson county, Ia., in the Breeders' Gazette. The hay is stored over the central portion of the barn. The haymow is 30 feet wide, leaving a space of 15 feet on each side where no hay is stored. Hay is taken in at each end of the barn. Large gates are fastened by hooks to the posts at the side of the mow, then, in feeding, the gates are moved a little away from the hay, which makes it possible to throw the hay directly into the racks below all along each side of the mow. The hay that is thrown down the central chute has to be carried to the ends of the feed alley.

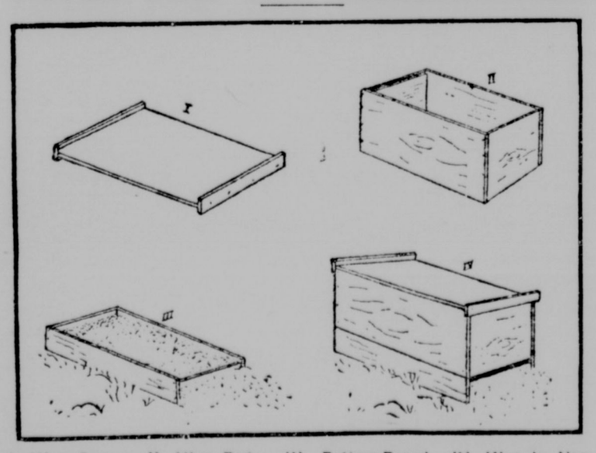
The feed racks are constructed of boards 12 inches wide placed horizontally. The lower portion is 3 feet wide and one board high. The next board is set in 6 inches and raised up 6 or 8 inches to leave a space for the sheep to reach the hay. The upper part is sloped outwardly. The feed troughs are a unique feature. They are 6 inches wide and 2 inches deep inside. They are made of 1-foot boards. They are not fastened rigidly to anything, but are made to raise and lower. Each trough is 70 feet or 80 feet long. Those on the hayracks are made right in the line of parts; that is, the bottom of the trough is cut out where the post goes through and the sides of the trough pass up and down on each side of the post. Then at each post a small rope is fastened to the trough, then passes over a pulley up about 6 feet on the post, then down and once around a three-quarter-inch gas pipe, and then a 15-pound weight is tied to the end of the rope. The gas pipe is one straight line tightly screwed together and placed in brackets so that it is free to turn. There is a crank on one end of the pipe. The iron weight balances the weight of the trough so that by turning the crank the trough can be raised or lowered very easily. Boards 12 inches wide are then nailed on each side of the post, leaving a space of about ten inches through which the trough can be raised and lowered. The inner one of these boards is a part of the hayrack. The grain is fed first and is put in while the trough is up. As the sheep cannot get to the feed while the trough is up, one can take plenty of time in putting out the feed, and then place it all in reach of the sheep in a few moments by lowering the troughs. As soon as the grain is eaten, the troughs are raised and the sheep reach through under the trough for the hay. The lower part of the hayrack comes out even with the outside of the trough, so that the hay rolls out where the sheep can reach it easily. The troughs along the outside of the barn are made in the same manner except that they are placed between two upright pieces. They are just inside the line of posts.

These troughs have been in use for four years. There is no danger of catching sheep under them and choking them to death, but after the sheep become accustomed to being fed in them there is practically no trouble.

Disagree on Perching.

Authorities do not all agree whether a chickens should be allowed to perch early in life or be compelled to squat on the ground.

HIVES FOR ALL EMERGENCIES



I, Hive Cover. II, Hive Body. III, Bottom-Board. IV, Hive In Use.

Generally speaking, cheap contraptions are an abomination in the bee yard, but there are times when something which can be gotten up in a hurry and at a small cost will be appreciated.

In preparing such hives, however, one should see to it that spacing is kept right and nothing but standard frames should be used. Then when you get around to it you can simply transfer your frames to another hive and nothing will be lost, writes L. C. Wheeler in the Michigan Farmer. The hive body can be made by simply nailing four boards together, leaving the ends three-quarters inch lower than the sides. Then form a rabbet by nailing on a strip three-quarter inch wide and three-eighths inch thick on the outer edge of the end boards, nailing it on with the thin edge up. The hive should be just the right depth so that when the frames are hung in the rabbets they will hang with the bottoms just on a level with the bottom of the hive.

A cheap bottom-board may be made by nailing four strips together, leaving one of the ends an inch lower than the sides and the other end. Set this on the ground and fill with sawdust or clean sand and you have a bottom-board that will serve the purpose just as well as a more expensive one. A very good cover may be made by cutting a wide board just the right length and nailing strips on each end to keep it from splitting. I do not advise such hives for general use, but, as I said before, as a makeshift they are all right.

God Uttered His Voice; the Earth Melted

By PASTOR RUSSELL
of Brooklyn Tabernacle

TEXT—We will not fear though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea.—Psalm 14:2.

I have chosen for my text a sea topic, a symbolical prophecy which, I believe, is rapidly nearing fulfillment. All Bible students recognize the fact that many of the Psalms are Messianic; that is to say, they apply to the time of the inauguration of Messiah's Millennial Kingdom. Some of them detail the peace and joy and blessings which will then prevail among men, when the great leveling processes of that time will raise all the worthy poor and degraded and will humble all the proud, establishing society under such new conditions that the new order of things is symbolically styled in the scriptures "a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (II. Peter iii, 13). Others of the Psalms describe in highly figurative terms the work of the Millennial Age. For instance, we read:

"Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea." Fear is the great torment of the majority of our race. It is the lash which the adversary frequently uses to drive away from God those who need his sympathy and love and succor. To such the Lord speaks tenderly saying, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." And again, God declares his name to be Love and says, "Their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men"—not by his word (Isaiah xxix, 13). He would have us trust him as a great, loving, generous father, saying, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord compassioneth those who reverence him" (Psalm ciii, 13). As love, more love, perfect love, comes into our hearts it more and more casts out the fear which the adversary would inculcate and which has burned into men's minds and consciences the "doctrines of devils," to which the apostle refers (I Timothy iv, 1).

The fact that the scriptures prophetically describe the overwhelming of the social order and the great governments of the earth must not be understood to signify that the Bible counsels revolution or anarchy. On the contrary, all of God's people throughout the scriptures are counseled to live peaceably with all men, so far as possible. They are counseled not to use carnal weapons, not to take to the sword for the settlement of disputes, but rather to suffer injury. They are counseled that God is the great Over-Lord, and that although he is not now ruling directly amongst men he is fully the master of the situation in that he could at any time overthrow all opponents. He does not acknowledge that his will is now done in the earth, but tells us that it will be done by and by and encourages us to pray and to hope and to wait for it. He tells us that Satan is now the "Prince of this world" by virtue of the fact that he deceives the minds and hearts of the majority. God would have his people understand something of his great program, but he would keep this hidden from all others; hence the impossibility of explaining spiritual things to a carnal mind (I Corinthians ii, 14). "None of the wicked shall understand." (Daniel xii, 10).

The great creator has contented himself with such a supervision of human affairs as leaves much responsibility in human hands. He merely interferes to raise up or to cast down on occasions when the interest of his cause and program may demand. For instance, the case of the Pharaoh, raised to the throne of Egypt, in Moses' day. God there raised to the throne a man of great determination, and hindered from reaching the throne other men not so favorable to the carrying out of the divine purposes. Thus, without interfering with the free moral agency of the king, God used the wrath of man to praise him and the remainder he restrained. Similarly, God previously raised Joseph to the governorship of Egypt for his own purposes.

We are not of those who would harass the minds of our fellows with fear. Rather we would point them to the fact that behind this cloud of trouble there is a glorious silver lining of millennial joy and blessing for all the families of the earth. Rather we would encourage all who have the hearing ear to zeal and faithfulness in their consecration, that they may "make their calling and their election sure" to a share in the kingdom glories and "escape those things coming upon the earth" (Luke xxi, 36). In a word, the gospel of Christ is not a message of damnation and fear and torture, but, as the angels declared, "Good things of great joy which shall be unto all people" (Luke ii, 10).

Beginning with the sixth verse the Prophet gives a brief synoptical picture of the time of trouble and its consummation and the inauguration of universal peace. "The heathen (Gentile peoples) raged!" These words describe the tumult which will prevail amongst humanity in the great time of trouble before the climax is reached. "Raging," angry voices arise from public meetings, and in the more private meetings of the lodges of labor and capital, and through the columns of the press to the extent permitted. In Germany the "raging" press for some time has been muzzled

WILL LOOK TO CANADA FOR WHEAT

ONE REASON WHY AMERICANS GO TO CANADA.

In the Chicago Inter-Ocean of a few days since reference was made to the fact that in 1909 the United States raised 737,189,000 bushels of wheat, and last year grew only 695,443,000, a decrease of 41,746,000 bushels. The article went on to say: "True we raised last year more than enough wheat for our own needs, but it is apparent that if production continues to decrease in that ratio we will soon be obliged to look to other countries for wheat to supply our rapidly increasing population."

The purpose of the article was to show that reciprocity was to be desired. This is a question that I do not propose to deal with, preferring to leave it to others who have made a greater study of that economic question than I have. The point to be considered is, with the high price of lands in the United States, and with the much lower priced lands of Canada, and their ability to produce probably more abundantly, is it not well for the United States farmer to take advantage of the opportunity Canada affords with its lower-priced lands and take a part in supplying the needs of the United States, which it is quite apparent must come sooner or later? It is probable there are now about 300,000 American farmers in Western Canada, cultivating large farms, and becoming rich, in the growing of 25- and 30-bushel-to-the-acre-wheat, in producing large yields of oats and barley, and in raising horses and cattle cheaply on the wild prairie grasses that are there, both succulent and abundant. All these find a ready market at good prices. Amongst the Americans who have made their homes in Canada are to be found colonies of Scandinavians, and all are doing well. I have before me a letter from an American Scandinavian, now a Canadian, an extract from which is interesting. Writing from Turtle Lake, Saskatchewan, he says:

"I came up here from Fergus Falls, Minn., October 24th, 1910, and thought I would let you know how I have been getting along. We had a very mild winter up to New Year's, but since then it has been quite cold and lots of snow, but not worse than that we could be out every day working, even though we had 65 below zero a few times, but we do not feel the cold here the same as we did in Minnesota, as it is very still and the air is high and dry. This is a splendid place for cattle raising and mixed farming. There is some willow brush and small poplars on part of the land, which is rolling and covered with splendid grass in the summer. Not far from here there is timber for building material. There are only 8 Norwegians here, 6 Scotchmen, 2 Germans. The lake is 20 miles long and full of very fine fish.

"There is a lot of land yet that has not been taken and room for many settlers, and we wish you would send some settlers up here, as there are fine prospects for them, especially for those who have a little money to start with. Send them here to Turtle Lake, and we will show them the land, if they have secured plats, showing the vacant lands, at the Dominion Lands office in Battleford. Send us up some good Scandinavians this spring."

The Canadian government agents will try to meet his wishes.

Labrador's Future.

According to statements made the other day by Dr. Grenfall of Labrador, the Cinderella of British possessions, has a brilliant future before it. Dr. Grenfall, who has lived twenty years in that snowy country, says that in days to come it will carry a population as easily as Norway does today. It is, he says, a better country than Iceland, and to be greatly preferred to Lapland, Finland, Siberia and Northern Alaska.

Why rent? Own your own farm.
Nothing down 9 years to pay.
Don't give up the best of your crops to a landlord.

Haven't the money to buy!
You don't need money.
Here is a wonderful opportunity.
The Panhandle of Texas needs settlers.
It is the country along the Santa Fe, in the northwestern part of Texas.
The land is level prairie. It is the original residual soil—deep, rich and fertile. For years it furnished the finest pasture. Now it is too valuable for range purposes. The owners are selling it for general farming.
I want to tell you about the opportunities for settlers on these Panhandle lands. (The Santa Fe has no land to sell.)
I know one owner who will sell you a farm for only $20 an acre. You don't have to pay a cent for two years. After that you pay one-seventh each year, with interest at 6 per cent from date of purchase.
But you must live on and cultivate the soil.
Have you ever heard of a proposition like that?
Another proposition, at the same price, requires $2 an acre down, the balance in ten equal payments, with interest at only 6 per cent.
These are but two of the many opportunities open to real homeseekers in the Panhandle.
Owners of these lands will not sell to speculators. The land must go to actual settlers. They want to see the country built up. They want the crops coming into their towns and the trade of prosperous farmers who are owners of the land they farm.
The Santa Fe, too, is anxious to see the country developed. It wants to haul the people and their goods and products.
The country is in splendid condition this spring. Nearly 2 inches of rain in February. Everything ready for you.
Let me send you our folder, "The Panhandle and South Plains." It tells all about this country—its soil, climate, rainfall, water supply and crops. Let me put you in touch with the men who own the land. Let me tell you about the opportunity the Santa Fe affords twice a month to go and see this land at reduced rates.
Don't wait. Make the break.
Write me to-night, if only a postal.
You will be glad.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

GRANTSVILLE.

Last week an employe of the Forestry Department of the National government was in this section looking over portions of Negro Mountain with a view toward acquiring a large tract for a national forest. The Bonig tract was the only one to which particular attention was given, but as this tract is typical of a vast area extending southward from the Mason and Dixon line, which is in many places of no practical value under existing conditions, it is to be hoped that a large enough scope will be offered to the Govvrnment to assure the success of the project.

Mr. W. D. Uhler, who has charge of the maintenance of the state roads in this section of Maryland, and L. T. Downey, an engineer who assists Mr. Uhler, passed through Grantsville Friday enroute to Frostburg on a tour of inspection of the primeval roads as existing between here and Frostburg. However, these gentlemen on this trip, paid more particular attention to the stone arches and culverts on the National pike, of which there are quite a number that have been partially destroyed by vandals or have been allowed to fall into a state disrepair from neglect.

On Wednesday night of last week Messrs. Milton Miller and Freedman Stark drove to New Germany to attend service at one of the churches.

Mr. S. S. Miller, of Springs, was noticed in Grantsville on Monday in a 5-passenger touring car which he recently purchased of the Stahl agency in Somerset.

Mr. John Knecht, of West Salisbury, passed through here last Friday on his motor-cycle.

Miss Lizzie Shafer, who spent the winter and spring in Pennsylvania, is staying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shafer, of Shade Hollow.

Mr. Wm. Winterburg exchanged horses the other day. He is now the proud possessor of a beautiful team of grays. The horse disposed of by Will was a black mare which had gone wrong in a shoulder, and while everyone sympathizes with the party who now has the black mare it is pretty generally conceded that no harm is done when one "puts in on" a professional horse trader.

Messrs. J. S. Miller and Val. Bender drove over to New Germany to look over their timber interests in that vicinity last Tuesday.

The Isaiah Fuller property, which was sold last week, was bought by Mrs. Jacob Ringler for $500.

Mr. James Bowser was a business visitor in Grantsville last Friday.

Mr. Memis Hershberger has recently been noticed to smile more broadly than usual and to carry his head at a different angle. Upon inquiry it has developed that he is the father of another daughter.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Miller, on Sunday, a son.

The infant son of Simon Durst, of Jennings, was buried on Sunday.

Mr. J. L. Englehart, of Accident, was a business caller in Grantsville on Monday.

Dog Case from Garrett County.

A dog case, that of George W. Jeffreys against John Garlitz, removed from Garrett county, was tried in the circuit court yesterday. It would seem from the evidence that Mr. Jeffreys owned a valuable dog and that one day while Mr. Jeffreys was fishing in Garrett county that the defendant shot and killed the dog, which had followed the plaintiff to the fishing territory. The plaintiff contended that at the time Mr. Garlitz shot the dog, that the latter was chasing a rabbit. The defendant contended that the reason he shot the dog was that the canine was chasing his sheep. Mr. Jeffreys proved by witnesses the dog in question was worth from fifty to one hundred dollars, and that the animal was never known to kill sheep. The plaintiff was represented by Chas. G. Watson, and the defendant by G. Semmes Hamill, of Oakland, and R. T. Semmes, of Cumberland.

The jury rendered a verdict for the plaintiff.

$5000 Five Per Cent. Bonds.

The undersigned chairman of the Finance Committee of the Mayor and Commissioners of Westernport, will receive sealed proposals for the purchase of all or part, (in sums of five hundred dollars, or multiples thereof) of an issue of five thousand dollars, of The Westernport General Improvement Bonds, proceeds to be used for the building of a concrete bridge across George's Creek within the limits of the town of Westernport. Said bonds bear interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, dating from May the first, nineteen hundred and eleven. They are authorized by Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, and the issue has been specifically voted upon by the people at an election held therein. George W. Magruder and Harriet Magruder, his wife vs. Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder, Alfred H. Magruder, Carrie Wagner and Madana Custer.

No. 1730 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain property in Garrett county, in the State of Maryland, which was conveyed to George W. Magruder, Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder, Alfred H. Magruder and Stephen A. Magruder, by The George's Creek Coal & Iron Co., dated February 10, 1903, and recorded in Liber No. 20, folio 351, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, containing 139 acres. Also a piece of land conveyed to the said grantees by William Pearre, Executor of George A. Pearre, by deed dated the 15th day of December, 1883, and recorded in Liber No. 22, folio 167, one of the Land Records of said county, containing 171 acres. Also a piece of land devised to the said grantees by the last will and testament of James Magruder, said will being recorded in Liber B, folio 94, one of the Will Records of Garrett county, containing 100 acres. Also a piece of land which was conveyed to Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder and Stephen A. Magruder, and as the bill claims one fifth of which was held in trust by them for the said George W. Magruder from William Barnes and wife, by deed dated April 10, 1903, and recorded in Liber No. 58, folio 416, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, containing 212 acres.

The bill states that on or about the 26th day of May, 1903, the said Stephen A. Magruder departed this life, intestate, and left as his heirs at law his four brothers, three sisters, and nieces and nephews, children of his own deceased sisters. That deeds were executed conveying the interest of his three sisters and all his nieces and nephews, in the said 212 acres, to three of his brothers, Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder, except the wife of John Wagner of Hedgesville, W. Va., who did not sign the said deed and has an inchoate right of dowery in her husband's share. That a second deed was executed by his sisters and all of his nieces and nephews conveying their interest in the said property above mentioned to George W. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder; that his two sisters, Mrs. Mandana Custer and the wife of the said John Wagner, refused to execute said deed on their part. The said Mandana Custer being entitled to the one-ninth of one-fifth interest in said first three pieces mentioned in this order of publication. Said Carrie Wagner being entitled to the same interest as aforementioned in these pieces also.

That the said Carrie Wagner the wife of John Wagner, of Hedgesville, W. Va., is a non resident of this State. The bill among other things prays that the property be sold and divided among the parties entitled to share therein, according to their respective interest therein and have further relief.

It is thereupon this 1st day of May, in the year 1911, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett County in Equity, that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in the said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks, before the 3rd day of June, 1911, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, commanding her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 19th day June next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Ministerial Call Extended.

At a congregational meeting of the members of the Oakland Presbyterian church, held last Sunday, a call by the congregation was unanimously extended to Rev. J. Bamford, of New York, to become the pastor of the local church. As yet Mr. Bamford has not signified his intention of accepting the call but it is pretty generally understood that he will do so and will probably arrive here within the next three or four weeks to take up the work. Rev. Bamford preached here a few weeks ago and created a very favorable impression amongst the members of the local church. He bears testimonials of his ability and worth from many high in the church and his coming to this community will add greatly to the spiritual welfare of the people.

MUCH DAMAGE RESULTED FROM FOREST FIRES

A Great Scope of Country Has Been Burned Over and Hundreds of Dollars Loss Sustained.

Fires in the timber in many portions of Garrett county during the past week or ten days have resulted in the burning of much valuable property, consisting of timber, fencing and in one instance the complete destruction of several hundred sugar maple trees in the camps of Albert Brenneman and Thomas B. Wiley near Bittinger.

In the Bittinger section of the country hundreds of acres of valuable land have been burned over and it was with the greatest difficulty that the destruction of dwellings in one or two instances were averted. Conditions were of such nature that the presence of State Forester Besley was required to direct the fire fighting who spent two days in the Bittinger country on this mission.

In the southern and eastern sections of the county considerable difficulty has also been experienced in keeping the fires confined within bounds, and unless rain soon falls and quenches the fires much more serious damage will result.

$100 Reward.

A reward of $100 will be paid for evidence leading to the conviction of the person or persons responsible for the fire which burned over the State Reserve near Hutton.

F. W. BESLEY,
State Forester.

Fined for Dynamiting Fish.

Six Italians, who dynamited fish in the Savage River at a point near Bond Junction on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, last Thursday, were arrested at Piedmont Friday by Sheriff Shartzer and brought to Oakland where they were lodged in jail until Saturday when they were tried on the charge by Justice Teats and five of the offenders fined $25 each. The sixth one was released upon the payment of a fine of $5. The prisoners all plead guilty on the charge. The blasts of the explosive in the water killed many large fish and hundreds of smaller ones

The Sugar King Visited Oakland.

Mr. Elijah Livengood, the Somerset-Garrett county sugar king, spent last Friday afternoon and evening in Oakland on business. While in the city Mr. Livengood made this office a visit and stated that during the sugar season just closed he had manufactured about 3400 gallons of syrup, the product of about 4100 trees growing upon 300 acres of his five hundred and fifty acre farm lying in Garrett county and Somerset county, Pa. Some twenty-five years ago Mr. Livengood set out a number of sugar trees in his orchard and for the past ten years he has tapped these and got from them a fairly good yield of sap. There are two trees in his camp which were named by his father "Sunday" trees. These have been tapped annually for the past fifty-seven years to Mr. Livengood's personal knowledge and they have never failed to produce their accustomed yield. Had Mr. Livengood turned the syrup manufactured by him this year into sugar the yield would have been in the neighborhood of 28,000 pounds.

Muffled Against the Pest

The doctors and sanitary officials on duty in the plague-stricken district of Manchuria breathe, when on their gruesome tasks, through pads of lint soaked in carbolic acid, which kills the bacilli of the pest before they can enter mouth or nose. The doctor shown on the right is wearing his full working kit. He is breathing through a pad of lint soaked in carbolic acid; his linen mask and "goggles" make it impossible for bacilli to reach his face; he is gloved; linen clothes, which can be boiled and disinfected easily, cover him to the boots.

MOST WIDELY KNOWN DOG

In a museum at Washington is the stuffed body of "Owney," the most widely known member of the canine race in America and the proud owner, in his lifetime, of something like 500 medals. Owney did not earn his proud position by rescue work at the seaside or in the mountains. He just traveled, traveled, traveled, anywhere and everywhere, on land and on sea. When Owney first was afflicted with his traveling mania, he stole aboard a mail car, and for ten years thereafter he was seldom off one. He was officially adopted by the United States postoffice department, and now and then, to commemorate a trip longer than usual, a medal, or rather a metal tag, was bestowed upon him. Once Owney even crossed the ocean as the guest of mail clerks.

TALE OF A DONKEY HERO

A tale of the sagacity and heroism of a little burro, or donkey, comes from the Mogave desert. The engineer of the Santa Fe limited suddenly slowed up and the passengers, wondering what had stopped it far from signs of civilization, climbed from the sleepers. They found, standing resolutely in the center of the track a sad-eyed little animal, plainly marked with the life of the desert. It refused to clear the path of the train until the engineer discovered tied to one of its front legs a slip of paper. The curious passengers crowded about the engineer and read an appeal for help from Henry Goodling. Scrawled on the paper was the blunt statement he had broken a leg ten miles south of Siberia and was alone. At the first station the message of the injured man was placed in the hands of men who brought Goodling to the town.

PIGEONS HATCH A CHICKEN

I have two fantail pigeons, both male birds, and I noticed one day that they built a nest and then were sitting on it alternately, as if they were going to hatch eggs, says a writer in the Strand.

It struck me that it might be a good idea to put an egg of my bantams into the nest to compensate the pigeons for the trouble they had taken in building it. Apparently they appreciated my doing so, as from that time they never left the nest for about three weeks, when to my great surprise I found a little chicken peeping from the pigeon's nest.

It was touching to see how the pigeons tried to feed the chicken by opening their beaks, as pigeons do, and inviting the youngster to help himself to the contents of their crops, which, of course, it refused to do, because it is a chicken and not a pigeon. The pigeons are very fond of the little one and take it under their wings to keep it warm whenever it wants it, exactly as a hen treats her chickens.

WAS THE PUSSY A SUICIDE?

Grieved at being parted from her kittens, a black cat owned by Mrs. Stanley Fradansky of Bayonne, N. J., jumped from a third story window recently, after having attacked S. P. C. A. Officer Lambert. Mrs. Fradansky did not fancy harboring kittens and she didn't want to drown them, and so she sent for the S. P. C. A. to take them. When Lambert was picking up the youngsters, the mother cat sprang upon him and bit and scratched him on the face and hands before being pulled off. The officer put the kittens in his wagon while the mother cat sat on a window sill looking down upon him. As the door of the wagon closed the cat let out a loud howl and jumped to the ground, dying instantly.

AFTER THIRTY-SEVEN YEARS

An unusual thing happened recently when a ring was discovered by a Crisfield, Pa., man after being lost 37 years. The husband of the owner was plowing, and while pulling off a glove, pulled off the ring, which could not be found. The other day a child stuck a pitchfork into the ground, and when he drew it up was astonished to find a ring on one of the prongs. The ring bore an inscription which led to its return to its owner.

SAVED BY HIS SUSPENDERS

Pietro Figuro had a lucky escape from a revolver bullet at New York some days ago. He wears very large, heavy metal buckles on his suspenders. So when he had an argument with another Italian in front of his home, and his assailant blazed away at him, the bullet hit the buckle directly over his heart and flattened itself.

The buckle was driven into his side, causing a small abrasion.

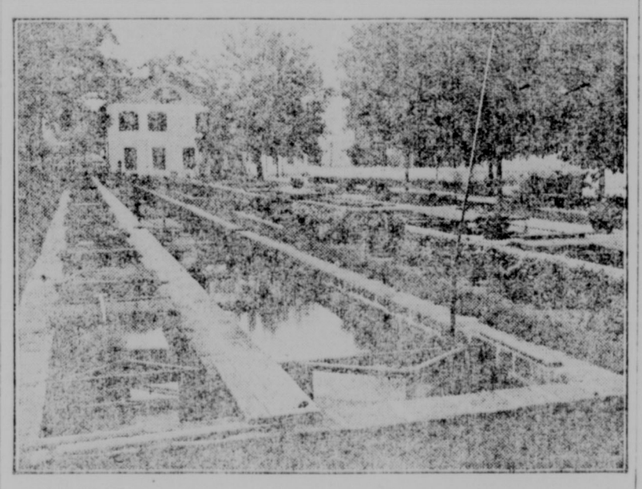
TELESCOPES MADE FOR TWO

In Switzerland, at various prominent look-out stations, are to be found observation telescopes by means of which visitors may survey the wonderful scenery. Some time ago it was found inconvenient to have telescopes through which only one person could look at a time, and the existing instruments were replaced with glasses which allow two people to use them simultaneously.

The new instruments are double-barrelled, and, of course, have a duplicate set of glasses and prisms. They produce a wonderful stereoscopic effect, everything standing out boldly and clearly and appearing to be but a few yards away.

With the instrument shown, objects 40 or 50 miles away can be detected with comparative ease. This is due to the clear atmosphere of the Alps, in part; but, nevertheless, the new telescope has a much better range than the old variety. Moreover, it is attractive to gaze at the scenery in company with a pleasant companion.

Cold Spring Fish Hatchery



One of the largest and most interesting fish hatcheries in the country is that at Cold Springs Harbor, Long Island. Though the pools near the building, shown in the accompanying photograph, are all open, those further down the ravine are of necessity covered because of the depredations of the kingfishers which swarm about the place ever for opportunities to get food without much labor. This hatchery is an attractive place for tourists, and is visited by many thousand persons in the course of the year.

Temperance

PLACE INEBRIATES ON FARMS

Medical Authorities Are Unanimous in Their Belief of the Colony Treatment of Drunkards.

A new method of handling the problem of drunkenness is set forth in The Survey. While it is undoubtedly a suggestion of the right kind for the relief of individual cases of drunkenness it would appear to the casual observer that too much of our effort and time and money are spent in the attempt to repair the damage which we ourselves permit by licensing the public drinking saloon. There is one thing better than to lift a man out of the gutter—that is to remove the gutter. We are dealing too largely with effects and not with causes.

Inebriety is the source of many of the most important problems of government. Recent figures show that 28.9 per cent of the male cases of insanity in New York are due to excessive use of alcohol. In Pennsylvania 41 per cent of the imbeciles owe their condition to intemperance, 30 to 40 per cent of epileptic cases have their origin in alcoholism. The report of the Board of Prison Commissioners of Massachusetts for 1908 states that 86,365, or 60 per cent of the total arrests were made for public intoxication. Drunkenness as a cause of poverty is continually noticed in everyday life.

The use of the short sentence is absolutely ineffective. A man leaves the county jail or workhouse without money and in most cases without friends. He can secure shelter in a saloon and probably by performing menial service for the bartender get a drink. This is the most natural thing for him to do. The alcoholic repeater is the natural result of the short sentence.

The number of persons who appear again and again for drunkenness is alarming. In one case, a man now 61 years of age has been in the workhouse 62 separate times. He has spent 3,163 days there at a total cost for maintenance alone of $1,868.53. Another case has been in the workhouse 34 different times, in the alcoholic wards of a city hospital 31 times, in the municipal lodging house twice, in the almshouse once and in two other hospitals two times each. He has spent a total of 1,943 days in these various places at a total cost of $1,323.12. Still another case, a man about 55 years of age, has been in the workhouse, almshouse, or hospitals 71 times or a total of 5,884 days at a total cost of $2,492.37. In Utica, N. Y., one person has appeared before the police court at least 160 times for public intoxication.

There is substantial unanimity as to the general lines along which changes should be made. A graded series of remedies is needed. First offenders should be released without their appearance in court. For the next grade of cases probation should be tried and a fine imposed to be collected in installments. More serious cases should be committed to a farm colony. To carry out this plan involves extending greatly the principle of probationary oversight of petty offenders. This principle is comparatively recent in application but the results are so satisfactory that it has passed the experimental stage.

Seven states provide for the commitment of habitual drunkards on the petition of relatives accompanied by proper medical certification. When a man has completely lost his self-control and is a constant burden to his family, it should not be necessary for him to become so obnoxious to the community as to incur arrest for disorderly conduct before he can be committed to an institution.

Medical authorities are unanimous in their belief in the farm colony treatment. The prime necessities are: Isolation from alcohol for a continuous period of time, abundance of light and fresh air, therapeutic baths and as much outdoor work as the patient is capable of physically. Not all cases of inebriety, however, can be treated alike. Physical differences due to the stage of the disease require classification and diversified treatment. Incipient and advanced cases cannot be treated together.

The advantage of such colonies are that a large number of rounders would be taken from the streets, courts, prisons, workhouses, and hospitals. Many cases that are a constant menace to society would be removed. Families that are burdened by caring for fathers and brothers who are habitually drunk would be relieved. But most important the individual would be isolated from alcohol and placed in a healthful environment and helped to lead a wholesome and partially self-supporting life.

Temperance Is Christianity.

"From the first, even when most of the churches were as yet hostile, the temperance movement has been a religious movement, deriving its power from a strong faith in God and the belief that the movement was fulfilling His purpose in the moral upbuilding of His children, and in the removal from their path of avoidable temptation. Temperance work is practical Christianity. No other phase of Christian work is so immediately effective on life and character, so helpful in removing temptation, in developing self-control, and thus preparing the soul for deeper religious experiences.—H. G. Chancellor, M. E.

Facts About Motherhood

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at the time of child-birth, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when the strain is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

It isn't as though the experience came upon them unawares. They have ample time in which to prepare, but they, for the most part, trust to chance and pay the penalty.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy, and strong.

Any woman who would like special advice in regard to this matter is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. Her letter will be held in strict confidence.

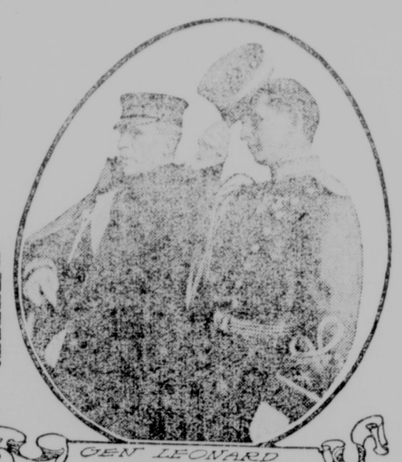
The UNITED STATES ARMY in ACTION

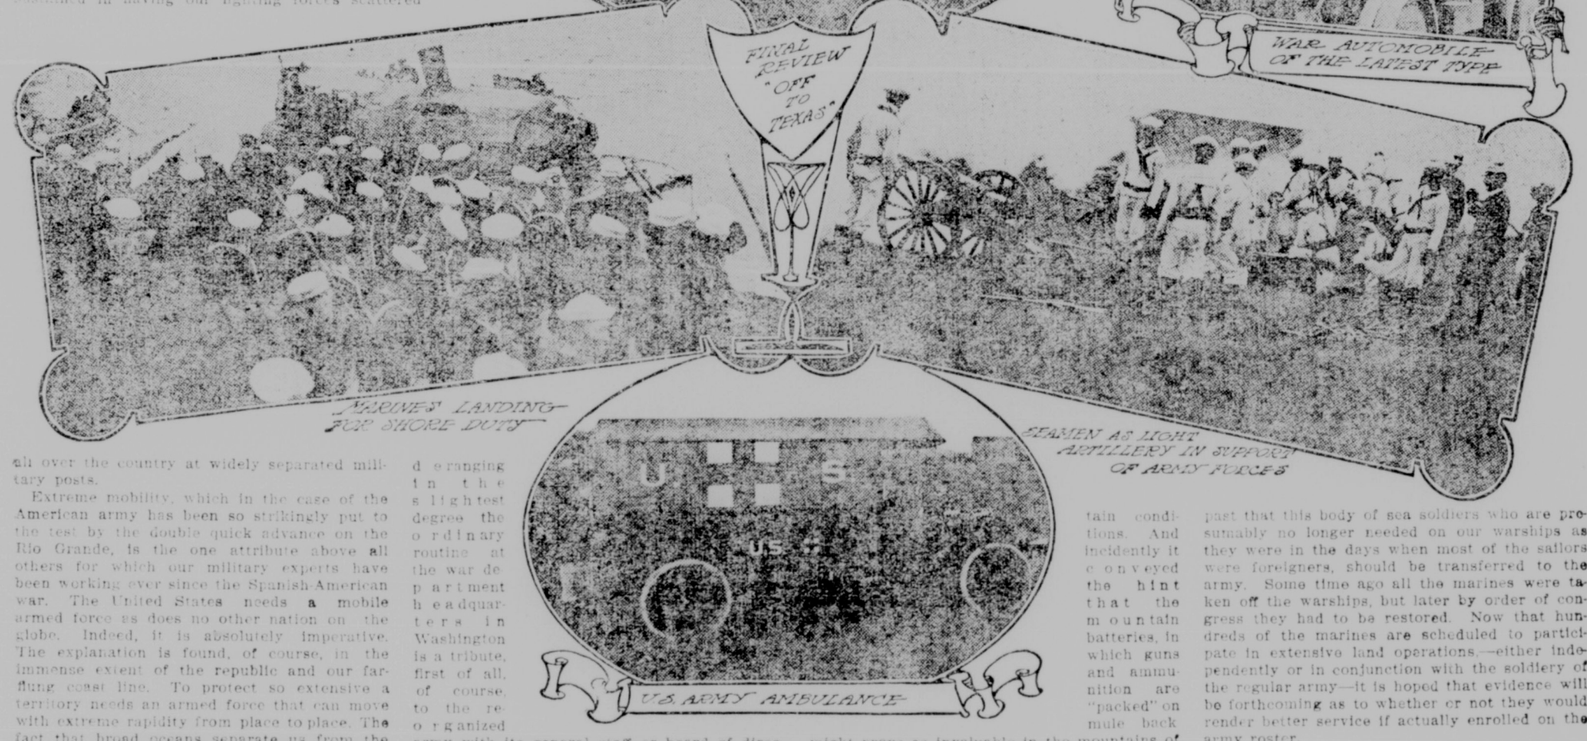
TROOPER WRESTLING WITH A STUBBORN HORSE



GEN. LEONARD WOOD (and AID)

THE rapidity and perfection of working arrangements with which there was recently carried out the mobilization of one-fourth of the American standing army on the Mexican frontier proved a revelation to all but the very limited number of people who have been in a position to keep in touch with the military progress of the nation during the past few years. Incidentally, this object lesson under virtual war conditions has answered not a few of the criticisms recently made against Uncle Sam's military establishment in speeches in congress. Indeed, this hasty rendezvous in Texas discounted to a great extent, as nothing could, the chief bug-a-boo of the recent alarmist utterances,—namely the alleged handicap sustained in having our fighting forces scattered all over the country at widely separated military posts.

WAR AUTOMOBILE OF THE LATEST TYPE



FINAL REVIEW "OFF TO TEXAS"

MARINES LANDING FOR SHORE DUTY

SEAMEN AS LIGHT ARTILLERY IN SUPPORT OF ARMY FORCES

U.S. ARMY AMBULANCE

Extreme mobility, which in the case of the American army has been so strikingly put to the test by the double quick advance on the Rio Grande, is the one attribute above all others for which our military experts have been working ever since the Spanish-American war. The United States needs a mobile armed force as does no other nation on the globe. Indeed, it is absolutely imperative. The explanation is found, of course, in the immense extent of the republic and our far-flung coast line. To protect so extensive a territory needs an armed force that can move with extreme rapidity from place to place. The fact that broad oceans separate us from the nations that, in the event of trouble, would prove our most formidable foes, presumably insures us reasonable warning of attempted invasion but even with this leeway it needs quick-moving soldiery to rush at short notice to any threatened point of attack.

The circumstance that the rushing of troops to our southern boundary left the Atlantic coast virtually unprotected is being made an argument for a larger regular army by the advocates of such an organization. However, our military experts have not waited upon a larger army to perfect a state of military preparedness.

But whatever the merits of this question of a large standing army the military experts have not waited upon its solution. They have gone right ahead, bending every energy to make a force of considerably less than 100,000 men equal in emergency to a body of soldiery several times as numerous. To that end Uncle Sam's soldiery, with due acknowledgement of the modern tendency of specialization, have been rendered as versatile as possible in the arts of warfare. And, best of all, there has been cultivated the "fire alarm" propensity to cut and run for a scene of trouble at the shortest warning. In their part of the preparations, too, the administrative officials in every branch of the army have kept constantly in mind this aim and purpose.

Of all the preparations for war which have gone forward under a clear sky perhaps the most wonderful have had to do with the transportation arrangements. Our military experts have awakened to the fact that the United States is the greatest railroad country in the world and that even in the event of the most serious conflict it is unlikely that many of these communicative lines would be seriously interfered with. Why not then, make these annihilators of time and space a military asset. Indeed it is imperative to do so if the army is to be rendered a mobile force, for no other utility can serve as the twentieth century substitute for the forced marches of other days. Consequently, whereas European nations, with their circumscribed areas and perfect highways have been experimenting with military automobiles and other innovations our war department officials have been wrestling with the problems of the make-up and handling of troop trains, and designing special kitchen cars and hospital cars and the like. The first try-out of the plans that have been in the making these past dozen years has come in the case of the recent hurried advance to Texas.

If a chance visitor could have been in Washington in the early days of the Spanish war and then again when the recent hurry call to the Gulf coast was given he could not fail to be impressed with the contrast,—the turmoil and confusion of 1898 with the well-oiled precision of the present execution of prearranged plans. That 20,000 men could be moved a distance of thousands of miles along a score of different arteries of traffic without apparently deranging in the slightest degree the ordinary routine at the war department headquarters in Washington is a tribute, first of all, of course, to the re-organized army with its general staff or board of directors, but in even greater degree is it evidence of the value of that comparatively new institution, the U. S. Army War College. The newspaper-reading public has been told repeatedly these past few years that it is the special province of the officers detailed to duty in the great red brick building, overlooking the Potomac in Washington, to have on hand and to keep constantly up to date detailed plans of campaign for use in the event of war with any other nation. However, the present instance affords the country at large its first real examplification of the practical value of the information that is kept under such close guard in the plan vault and the map rooms of the War College.

It was shown by the rapidity with which orders were formulated and issued for this sudden movement of the largest body of troops that has been handled at any one time since the Spanish war that the War College has dependable information as to just what can be expected of the railroads in an emergency. This showed, too, the wisdom of Uncle Sam's policy of keeping his war plans up to the minute by revising them every time there is a change of railroad schedules for, in this instance, most of the troops traveled by regular trains instead of by special trains and the latter would presumably be resorted to only in the case of extreme emergency.

Another feature of the plans for the army in action for which the big trek to Texas has proven a most beneficial dress rehearsal is that which contemplates reliance upon the telegraph system of the country in the movement of troops. The use of the network of wires covering the continent, in the event of war, has been the subject of study on the part of the military experts that has gone hand in hand with the investigation as to how the railroad arrangements could be made to promote the mobility of the military force. This worked out just as anticipated the day orders were issued for the advance to Texas and there poured into the department a continual stream of telegrams that kept the officials advised in detail as to the movement of every body of troops headed for the rendezvous in the Lone Star State.

It may be a trifle early to talk about the lessons to be drawn from this taste of war but one is already apparent. It emphasizes that the field artillery yet has a very important place in our military paraphernalia. There has been a disposition on the part of some people, of late years, to regard any considerable amount of field artilery as not the most useful equipment for the American army. Such advocates took the view that Uncle Sam ought to put his money into heavy coast defense guns just as he is concentrating his naval expenditure upon battleships of the heaviest class. However, the unexpected call to Texas, emphasizing as it did, vistas of trouble that had been completely overlooked in contemplation of the "yellow peril," called attention to the possible sore need for ample field artillery under certain conditions. And incidently it conveyed the hint that the mountain batteries, in which guns and ammunition are "packed" on mule back might prove as invaluable in the mountains of Mexico as they have under somewhat similar conditions in the Philippines.

Similarly the conditions existing at the scene of the present campaign are such as to emphasize the fact that there is yet a very important sphere for the cavalry in the army. It as though the crisis in this unexpected quarter were a providential answer to the arguments of those persons in and out of official life who have been urging in recent years that the foot-soldier should be practically the whole thing in our military complement. It must be apparent to everybody who is even casually conversant with geographical conditions that if Uncle Sam is to keep peace "From the Canal to Canada" he will have need of a considerable cavalry force and a force provided with the best possible class of mounts. There are mountainous localities in the region to the south of us where only cavalry could operate successfully. Neither automobiles nor yet aeroplanes would serve as a substitute. And incidentally it may be noted that conditions on the Mexican border have afforded an opportunity much earlier than was anticipated to test the practical military value of the airship. The serviceability of the sky craft for scouting operations ought to be pretty well attested ere the troops return to their home stations.

No better theater of war, real or mimic, than the southwest could be chosen for demonstrating the progress made during the past few years, both in the methods and equipment of the U. S. Signal corps. The general public, with its craving for the spectacular, has heard most regarding the introduction of the aeroplane as a utensil of warfare but as a matter of fact the Signal Corps has recently introduced innovations far more important from a military standpoint than the aerial scouts, and these communicative utilities and novelties for day and night signaling would obviously prove especially valuable in rough country where there are few existing telephone or telegraph wires and where the erection of such lines would be difficult and expensive. The Signal Corps is fully abreast of the times (and of the military establishment of any other nation) in its experiments with wireless telegraphy and wireless telephony and it has developed some very ingenious expedients for the use of rapidly moving forces in the field,—as for instance, the auto-telegraph car or telephone and telegraph station on wheels and the apparatus which enables a mounted trooper to lay or reel in a telephone wire automatically while his horse is at full gallop, the rider meanwhile continuing telephone conversation over this elastic wire.

It is expected that when the joint operations of the army and navy in the south have passed into history the record of operations will afford argument one way or another as to what shall be done with the U. S. Marine Corps. Our readers will recall that this force, the "soldiers of the navy" has been for some time past a bone of contention in service and official circles. Many persons have contended for years past that this body of sea soldiers who are presumably no longer needed on our warships as they were in the days when most of the sailors were foreigners, should be transferred to the army. Some time ago all the marines were taken off the warships, but later by order of congress they had to be restored. Now that hundreds of the marines are scheduled to participate in extensive land operations,—either independently or in conjunction with the soldiery of the regular army—it is hoped that evidence will be forthcoming as to whether or not they would render better service if actually enrolled on the army roster.

The "team work" of the army and navy which is a consistent policy with Uncle Sam is being followed along with other up-to-date ideas in the operations on the Gulf coast. Co-operation between military and naval forces is, of course, an axiom with all the great powers of the world, but many of the European nations which have no very extensive sea coasts have not given the attention to this that has been bestowed in the United States. It will be remembered that in most recent war games on the Atlantic coast there was joint responsibility between the two arms of the service. However many persons had little expectation that such concerted action would be advisable when planning operations not in reference to a foe from overseas, but relative to possible disturbance in a neighbor republic on our own continent. In this respect the present activity has proven something of a revelation. But it has been realized that not only can the warships render a service by a patrol of the Gulf coast but are also a factor in that they can land for shore service thousands of seamen, trained by regular small arms practice for service as infantrymen and light artillerymen.

One of the marvels of the recent quick work in the southwest is found in the very creditable manner in which the commissary department has met the responsibilities suddenly thrust upon it. Here again there has been most gratifying contrast to the conditions of the Spanish war period, but it must be remembered that Uncle Sam has made very tangible progress these past few years in the very vital problems of subsisting troops in the field. The army has made most advantageous use of fireless cooking by means of fireless cookers on wheels, designed to cook the food while the military force to which the equipment is attached is on the march and to have the meal, piping hot and ready to serve the minute the force halts for the noon-day respite or to pitch camp at night.

There has been plenty of work too, for the engineer corps of the army in this "Texas campaign" for there have been big camps to lay out and to lay out such sites in various sizes up to a divisional camp covering 800 acres means an immense amount of work for the surveying corps and the map makers in the field. The engineers are also likely to find some opportunity for their searchlight work,—including that with their new portable searchlights conveyed by automobile trucks and ere the "war game" is concluded they are likely to have more or less practice in bridge building. And finally the operations of 20,000 soldiers in the field cannot fail to afford its share of work for the hospital corps—the more so by reason of the effect upon the health of many of the officers and men of so sudden a change from a cold to a warm climate. And the best part of all this practical try-out of our military preparedness is that not only will the rank and file get experience but the higher officers of the service from Gen. Leonard Wood, down, will personally direct or observe the important movements, thereby learning at first hand the tactical and strategic lessons involved.

SCRATCHED TILL BLOOD RAN

"When my boy was about three months old his head broke out with a rash which was very itchy and ran a watery fluid. We tried everything we could but he got worse all the time, till it spread to his arms, legs and then to his entire body. He got so bad that he came near dying. The rash would itch so that he would scratch till the blood ran, and a thin yellowish stuff would be all over his pillow in the morning. I had to put mittens on his hands to prevent him tearing his skin. He was so weak and run down that he took fainting spells as if he were dying. He was almost a skeleton and his little hands were thin like claws.

"He was bad about eight months when we tried Cuticura Remedies. I had not laid him down in his cradle in the daytime for a long while. I washed him with Cuticura Soap and put on one application of Cuticura Ointment and he was so soothed that he could sleep. You don't know how glad I was he felt better. It took one box of Cuticura Ointment and pretty near one cake of Cuticura Soap to cure him. I think our boy would have died but for the Cuticura Remedies and I shall always remain a firm friend of them. There has been no return of the trouble. I shall be glad to have you publish this true statement of his cure." (Signed) Mrs. M. C. Maitland, Jasper, Ontario, May 27, 1910.

IF THE editor of the Democrat and his friends desire to make the cut in the school appropriation by the Board of County Commissioners a political issue, we suggest that Mr. Deffinbaugh become a candidate for County Commissioner on the Democratic ticket, and then we shall see the strength of the School Board crowd.

THE KNOCKER.

One of the worst menaces to the country's progress is the "dog in the manger" fellow who finds his chief delight in "knocking" at the man who does things. He is not to be feared as a competitor because he can't compete. If he could he wouldn't "knock." The damage he does is not by his gossip, to those who know him, either because it don't go with them, but he surely goes after a chance to get in his work with strangers.

If he sees his neighbor about to consummate a deal he sallies forth to assert his short sightedness, narrow mindedness and general cussedness by his pretended heartfelt interest in the stranger, being too shallow-minded to realize that what helps his neighbor helps the community. The progressive element of the community always has to reason with and endure such fellows and only make the best of them and go ahead.

FIFTY YEARS AGO.

Fifty years ago the nation was just entering upon the greatest test of its stability. Abraham Lincoln, the great Emancipator appeared before the nation and the world, as a man, whose ability was not fully recognized, whose statesmanship had yet not been established, and whose wisdom and philosophy were not generally accepted. Before he had taken his seat as the chief executive of the nation there was much discontent, predictions were made, and rumblings were heard. All these were the forerunners of the great Civil War, which tested the cohesive power of the national life with regard to holding the states under the stars and stripes.

The contest was made whether or not states had rights to contradicting the authority of the Federal government. The struggle was a trying one, North against South. The very best of young manhood that the North had, was pitted against the finest of the South. That four years struggle left sorrow, suffering, and destruction in its wide pathway. The government of this country, the business industries, the social order—all phases of this country's progresssiveness are moulded and directed by a generation, that was not then living, or by a body of people which was too young to know the significance of that epoch in the nation's life.

The lesson was a hard one that had been learned, and we cherish the knowledge that there is but one great country, which has no serious lines of demarkation between the North and the South. Those who went forth at their country's call, are now in the Indian summer of their lives. This is an age of memorials and anniversaries, it would be a fitting thing, that while we are in the enjoyment of peace, in fraternal relations with all men, with the prospect of continued contentment with all people, to commemorate fittingly while the remaining heroes of fifty years ago could enjoy the tribute paid to their valor, throughout the land by all sections; the fact that while fifty years ago we were entering a great civil strife, now we are a united and happy people, under one flag which symbolizes our unity, our strength, our progressiveness, our spirit of good will, our frown for the oppressor and our smile for the benefactor.

High School Efficiency.

Those who contend that the high schools are not efficient and are making rapid strides should see some of the rhetoric questions that the County Superintendent asked at the final examinations here. For example: Define mimesis; write an essay on the distinction between sin and crime; explain the difference between style and taste; name the eight kinds of poetry.

The question naturally arises: Who was the County Superintendent's prompter.

Governor Determine to Stop Reckless Auto Drivers.

With the hope of breaking up reckless automobile driving Governor Crothers said yesterday that he would within the next few days address a letter to all the justices of the peace in the State urging them to impose the heaviest penalty provided in all cases where it is shown that there has been a flagrant violation of the law. The letter will be sent through Automobile Commissioner George.

In speaking of the crusade Governor Crothers said:

"No man has a right to run his automobile over the highways of the State in a reckless manner. Not only do reckless drivers make it dangerous for others but also for themselves. In my judgment 'scorching' is one of the worst evils with which the present generation has to contend."

The Governor proposes to appoint a special officer to make investigations into automobile accidents. This officer will be appointed upon the recommendations of the Automobile Club of Maryland. The Governor's efforts to break up speeding has the support of the members of the club.

Forest Fire Penalties.

A correspondent writes: "Please publish in your columns that section of the law prohibiting the firing of woods, etc., with the penalties for the violation of the same."

State Forester Besley being in Oakland this morning the request was handed him and the following was penned by the State officer:

To the Editor of The Republican:

The maximum penalty for wilful firing the woodlands, or grasslands or lands other than the property of the owner, is one year s imprisonment and a fine of $1000. Where fire is set out by a man on his own property without taking proper precaution against its spread to neighboring lands and the fire does escape, the man who started the fire is responsible for all damages caused by it, and for the cost of extinguishing it. Furthermore, the fact that a fire escapes is recognized by the law as prima facia evidence of carelessness on the part of the land owner who set the fire out on his lands.

F. W. BESLEY, State Forester.

Rattlesnake Season at Hand.

One day this week as Messrs. W. S. Sharpless and J. L. Abernathy, of near Swanton, were engaged in the woods near their homes patrolling a forest fire, they came upon a den of rattlesnakes. The reptiles being very much awake and showing fight, a battle between Messrs. Sharpless and Abernathy on the one side and their snakeships on the other, ensued, with the result that five large snakes were killed, leaving quite a large number still in the den.

BITTINGER.

Forest fires have been raging in this neighborhood for several days and considerable loss has resulted from the burning of fences and killing timber.

State Forester F. C. Besley, of Baltimore, with a number of associates, spent last Sunday and Monday in this district.

On Thursday night of last week Jonas Bittinger was smitten by a partial stroke of paralysis and is still in a critical condition at this time.

Mrs. P. F. Mellinger and little son John, of Beckman, are spending this week in this village.

The forest fires last week swept thro sugar groves owned by Elias Orendorf, Thos. B. Wiley and Albert Brenneman, killing many trees, Mr. Brenneman having lost in the neighborhood of five hundred good trees, besides other valuable growing timber.

The last of this season's crop of maple sugar was shipped out this week.

On last Monday morning Walter Bittinger, son of Wilson Bittinger, a farmer residing near Jennings, was killed by a runaway team on his father's farm.

Dr. Robinson of Grantsville, was in this village last Monday afternoon.

Miss Leanora Wiley went to Grantsville last Monday to spend a few weeks with her grandmother.

GRANTSVILLE.

Killed in a Runaway.

Walter Bittinger, fourteen years old, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Bittinger, who reside four miles south of Grantsville on the Oakland road, was fatally injured Monday about noon when the team, which he had been driving, became frightened and ran away, dragging the young man under the horses' hoofs and under the wheels of the wagon.

It appears Walter had driven into the barnyard and was unhitching the horses when his attention was called to some stock in the stable nearby by a younger brother. While he was thus engaged the team, which had been fully detached from the wagon except one breast chain, started to run. Walter caught one of the horses and clung to his head until torn from it by the maddened team.

For some time it was thought that life was extinct and no attempt was made to secure medical aid, but after half an hour the youth partially regained consciousness and Dr. Bowen was hurriedly summoned who realized at once that there was no hope. The collar bone and several ribs were literally crushed into the lungs. Death resulted from hemorrhages within an hour after the physician's arrival.

On last Thursday another accident which might have terminated fatally, was narrowly averted when a team driven by a young Mr. Kalbfleisch of of Keyser's Ridge, became frightened and dashed along the National Pike for a distance of several hundred yards. The unfortunate young man was thrown between the horses onto the wagon tongue and there was dragged quite a distance. Dr. Bowen rendered medical aid, and while Mr. Kalbfleisch had a badly lacerated scalp, he was not seriously injured.

Among those who recently invested in benzine buggies are Mr. Lewis Hanft, manager of the Keystone Lime Co., and Mr. Milton E. Hershberger, of Elk Lick, Pa., both of whom have Ford touring cars.

Last Thursday afternoon great volumes of smoke were noticed in the vicinity of Springs. It developed later that D. P. Miller's saw mill was in danger of being reduced to ashes. As it was a considerable extent of woodland was burned over and only by much stubborn fighting was the mill and lumber saved. Several hundred rods of fence was destroyed.

During all of last week Negro Mountain has been wrapped in a mantle of smoke caused by forest fires. On Sunday night a number of men from Grantsville formed a volunteer fire brigade and assisted the farmers and settlers west of town in fighting the flames which threatened to burn several buildings on the mountain side.

Mr. W. E. Livengood is at present drilling a well for Mr. D. J. Stevanus.

Mr. Frank Folk recently moved into the property vacated by Mr. Truman Bittinger.

Mr. Jas. Younkin now occupies Miss Nell Broadwater's tenant house.

Misses Nell Broadwater and Blanche Miller drove to Salisbury on Thursday of last week with the avowed intention of meeting Miss Miller's aunt, but—

Mr. Edward Pendergast, of Corinth, spent a few days in Grantsville last week.

Mr. Henry Baker and Mrs. Susan Durst formerly of this place, now of Hyndman, drove up last Sunday accompanied by Miss Pauline Gastor, and spent Monday with Mrs. J. D. Miller. Mr. Baker was formerly employed in the First National Bank here, but is now engaged in the marble business. He reports a good business.

The last unfortunate horse owner for this vicinity is Mr. S. D. Yoder, who lost a two hundred dollar animal on Sunday night.

Mr. N. S. Yoder, manager of the Washington Bottom Farms, passed through Grantsville on Saturday in his automobile enroute to his old home several miles west of here.

SANG RUN.

Probably the oldest house in Oakland is being razed today to make room for a more modern structure. The building in question is the old Totten home on Oak street, which was built in the late 1840's or early 50's. The property was recently purchased by Mr. Michael Boyle and upon the sight of the old building he will erect a modern dwelling and business house combined.

An accident occurred between Piedmont and Cross, W. Va., on Saturday by which two of Mr. Josiah Kight's daughters were seriously injured and a horse killed. While the two young ladies were driving to the Tri-towns in some way the horses became frightened and ran off, throwing the occupants out of the buggy and dashed off down the mountainside, where it was later found dead. The buggy was demolished.

HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.

Exercises Held Tuesday Evening in Empire Theatre.

The Fourth Annual Commencement of the Oakland High School was held in the Empire Theatre at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the presence of an audience that tested the house to its utmost capacity.

The stage was handsomely decorated with Oakland pennants, palms, ferns, &c. Over the center of the stage hung a banner with the class motto "Rex non Verba." The class flower, the pink carnation, was much in evidence on every hand.

On the stage sat the graduating class, the high school faculty, the speakers of the evening and the school officials.

The ushers were Harry Weimer, Fred Peddicord and Harold Harned.

The three pieces by the band orchestra added much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

The two choruses by the school under the direction of Dr. Robinson showed the presence of much talent among the students when given the benefit of a thorough drill.

The vocal solo by Miss Rasche and the violin solo by Milton Turney were particularly well rendered.

The essays were all well written, showing both original research and careful preparation.

The Class Recitation, "James' Graduation," by Miss Hart, was greatly appreciated as attested by the applause.

Miss Porter's Class History was both a prophecy and a history and was filled with wit and good natured allusions to the characteristics and eccentricities of the various members of tht class.

Several of the essays will be published in our issue of May 25.

Dr. Shelton's address of twenty minutes was full of good advice not only to the graduates but particularly to the under-graduates. He urged upon the young the great importance of learning two vital lessons early, viz: First, Getting your money's worth, that is, making the most of your opportunities; and Second, The genius of hard work.

Hon. Philip Willett presented the diplomas in a ten minute speech brimful of eloquent advice on the importance of character building and the beauty of love and charity toward our fellow men.

The class, which is the largest in the history of the school and consists of eight ladies and four gentlemen, made a most pleasing impression, not only upon their relatives and friends, but it is the subject of favorable comment by outsiders and those disinterested.

Following is the class roll:

Academic—Mary Cecelia Harsch, Marguerite Agnes Hart, Ruth McRobie, Mary Barnes Porter, Mary Catharine Salzman, Bertie Florence Turney, Thomas J. C. Little, A. Milton Turney, Gilderoy A. Whorton.

Commercial—Ella E. Cleveland, Veronica M. Rasche, Patrick E. Murphy.

Johnson Ushered in a Tall Blonde Man, a Stranger to All Of Us.

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the Bronson case to get the deposition of John Gilmore, millionaire. A lady requests Blakeley to buy her a Pullman ticket. He gives her lower 11 and retains lower 10. He finds a drunken man in lower 10 and retires in lower 9. He awakens in lower 7 and finds his clothes and bag missing. The man in lower 10 is found murdered. Circumstantial evidence points to both Blakeley and the man who stole his clothes. The train is wrecked and Blakeley is rescued from a burning car by a girl in blue. His arm is broken. The girl proves to be Alison West, his partner's sweetheart. Blakeley returns home and finds he is under surveillance. Moving pictures of the train taken just before the wreck reveal to Blakeley a man leaping from the train with his stolen grip. Investigation proves that the man's name is Sullivan. Mrs. Conway, the woman for whom Blakeley bought a Pullman ticket, tries to make a bargain with him for the forged notes, not knowing that they are missing. Blakeley and an amateur detective investigate the home of Sullivan's sister. From a servant Blakeley learns that Alison West had been there on a visit and Sullivan had been attentive to her. Sullivan is the husband of a daughter of the murdered man. Blakeley's house is ransacked by the police. He learns that the affair between Alison and his partner is off. Alison tells Blakeley about the attention paid her by Sullivan, whom she was on her way to marry when the wreck came. It is planned to give Mrs. Conway the forged notes in exchange for Sullivan. Mrs. Conway kills herself and Bronson, and the ashes of the forged notes are found in the room.

CHAPTER XXX.—Continued.

"When did you find it?" asked the lean detective, bending forward.

"In the morning, not long before the wreck."

"Did you ever see it before?"

"I am not certain," she replied. "I have seen one very much like it." Her tone was troubled. She glanced at me as if for help, but I was powerless.

"Where?" The detective was watching her closely.

At that moment there came an interruption. The door opened without ceremony, and Johnson ushered in a tall, blonde man, a stranger to all of us. I glanced at Alison; she was pale but composed and scornful. She met the newcomer's eyes full, and, caught unawares, he took a hasty backward step.

"Sit down, Mr. Sullivan," McKnight beamed cordially. "Have a cigar? I beg your pardon, Alison, do you mind this smoke?"

"Not at all," she said composedly. Sullivan had had a second to sound his bearings.

"No—no, thanks," he mumbled. "If you will be good enough to explain—"

"But that's what you're to do," McKnight said cheerfully, pulling up a chair. "You've got the most attentive audience you could ask. These two gentlemen are detectives from Pittsburg, and we are all curious to know the finer details of what happened on the car Ontario two weeks ago, the night your father-in-law was murdered." Sullivan gripped the arms of his chair. "We are not prejudiced, either. The gentlemen from Pittsburg are betting on Mr. Blakeley, over there. Mr. Hotchkiss, the gentleman by the radiator, is ready to place ten to one odds on you. And some of us have still other theories."

"Gentlemen," Sullivan said slowly, "I give you my word of honor that I did not kill Simon Harrington, and that I do not know who did."

"Fiddlededee!" cried Hotchkiss, bustling forward. "Why, I can tell you—" But McKnight pushed him firmly into a chair and held him there.

"I am ready to plead guilty to the larceny," Sullivan went on. "I took Mr. Blakeley's clothes, I admit. If I can reimburse him in any way for the inconvenience—"

The stout detective was listening with his mouth open. "Do you mean to say," he demanded, "that you got into Mr. Blakeley's berth, as he contends, took his clothes and forged notes, and left the train before the wreck?"

"Yes."

"The notes, then?"

"I gave them to Bronson yesterday. Much good they did him!" bitterly. We were all silent for a moment. The two detectives were adjusting themselves with difficulty to a new point of view. Sullivan was looking dejectedly at the floor, his hands hanging loose between his knees. I was watching Alison, from where I stood, behind her, I could almost touch the soft hair behind her ear.

"I have no intention of pressing any charge against you," I said with forced civility, for my hands were itching to get at him, "if you will give us a clear account of what happened on the Ontario that night."

Sullivan raised his handsome, haggard head and looked around at me. "I've seen you before, haven't I?" he asked. "Weren't you an uninvited guest at the Laurels a few days—or nights—ago? The cat, you remember, and the rug that slipped?"

"I remember," I said shortly. He glanced from me to Alison and quickly away.

"The truth can't hurt me," he said, "but it's devilish unpleasant. Alison, you know all this. You would better go out."

His use of her name crazed me. I stepped in front of her and stood over him. "You will not bring Miss West into the conversation," I threatened, "and she will stay if she wishes."

"Oh, very well," he said with assumed indifference.

Hotchkiss just then escaped from Richey's grasp and crossed the room.

"Did you ever wear glasses?" he asked eagerly.

"Never." Sullivan glanced with some contempt at mine.

"I'd better begin by going back a little," he went on sullenly. "I suppose you know I was married to Ida Harrington about five years ago. She was a good girl, and I thought a lot of her. But her father opposed the marriage—he'd never liked me, and he refused to make any sort of settlement.

"I had thought, of course, that there would be money, and it was a bad day when I found out I'd made a mistake. My sister was wild with disappointment. We were pretty hard up, my sister and I."

I was watching Alison. Her hands were tightly clasped in her lap, and she was staring out of the window at the cheerless roof below. She had set her lips a little, but that was all.

"You understand, of course, that I'm not defending myself," went on the sullen voice. "The day came when old Harrington put us both out of the house at the point of a revolver, and I threatened—I suppose you know that, too—I threatened to kill him.

"My sister and I had hard times after that. We lived on the continent for a while. I was at Monte Carlo and she was in Italy. She met a young lady there, the granddaughter of a steel manufacturer and an heiress, and she sent for me. When I got to Rome the girl was gone. Last winter I was all in—social secretary to an Englishman, a wholesale grocer with a new title, but we had a row, and I came home. I went out to the Heaton boys' ranch in Wyoming, and met Bronson there. He lent me money, and I've been doing his dirty work ever since."

Sullivan got up then and walked slowly forward and back as he talked, his eyes on the faded pattern of the office rug.

"If you want to live in hell," he said savagely, "put yourself in another man's power. Bronson got into trouble, forging John Gilmore's name to those notes, and in some way he learned that a man was bringing the papers back to Washington on the Flier. He even learned the number of his berth, and the night before the wreck, just as I was boarding the train, I got a telegram."

Hotchkiss stepped forward once more importantly.

"Which read, I think: 'Man with papers in lower ten, car seven. Get them.'"

Sullivan looked at the little man with sulky blue eyes.

"It was something like that, anyhow. But it was a nasty business, and it made matters worse that he didn't care that a telegram which must pass through a half dozen hands was more or less incriminating to me.

"Then, to add to the unpleasantness of my position, just after we boarded the train— I was accompanying my sister and this young lady, Miss West—a woman touched me on the sleeve, and I turned to face—my wife!

"That took away my last bit of nerve. I told my sister, and you can understand she was in a bad way, too. We knew what it meant. Ida had heard that I was going—"

He stopped and glanced uneasily at Alison.

"Go on," she said coldly. "It is too late to shield me. The time to have done that was when I was your guest."

"Well," he went on, his eyes turned carefully away from my face, which must have presented certainly anything but a pleasant sight. "Miss West was going to do me the honor to marry me, and—"

"You scoundrel!" I burst forth, thrusting past Alison West's chair. "You—you infernal cur!"

One of the detectives got up and stood between us.

"You must remember, Mr. Blakeley, that you are forcing this story from this man. These details are unpleasant, but important. You were going to marry this young lady," he said, turning to Sullivan, "although you already had a wife living?"

"It was my sister's plan, and I was in a bad way for money. If I could marry, secretly, a wealthy girl and go to Europe, it was unlikely that Ida—that is, Mrs. Sullivan—would hear of it.

"So it was more than a shock to see my wife on the train, and to realize from her face that she knew what was going on. I don't know yet, unless some of the servants—well, never mind that.

"It meant that the whole thing had gone up. Old Harrington had carried a gun for me for years, and the same train wouldn't hold both of us. Of course, I thought that he was in the coach just behind ours."

Hotchkiss was leaning forward now, his eyes narrowed, his thin lips drawn to a line.

"Are you left-handed, Mr. Sullivan?" he asked.

Sullivan stopped in surprise.

"No," he said gruffly. "Can't do anything with my left hand." Hotchkiss subsided, crestfallen but alert. "I tore up that cursed telegram, but I was afraid to throw the scraps away. Then I looked around for lower ten. It was almost exactly across—my berth was lower seven, and it was, of course, a bit of exceptional luck for me that the car was number seven."

"Did you tell your sister of the telegram from Bronson?" I asked.

"No. It would do no good, and she was in a bad way without that to make her worse."

"Your sister was killed, I think?" The shorter detective took a small package from his pocket and held it in his hand, snapping the rubber band which held it.

"Yes, she was killed," Sullivan said soberly. "What I say now can do her no harm."

He stopped to push back the heavy hair which dropped over his forehead, and went on more connectedly.

"It was late, after midnight, and we went at once to our berths. I undressed, and then I lay there for an hour, wondering how I was going to get the notes. Some one in lower nine was restless and wide awake, but finally became quiet.

"The man in ten was sleeping heavily. I could hear his breathing, and it seemed to be only a question of getting across and behind the curtains of his berth without being seen. After that, it was a mere matter of quiet searching.

"The car became very still. I was about to try for the other berth, when some one brushed softly past, and I lay back again.

"Finally, however, when things had been quiet for a time, I got up, and after looking along the aisle, I slipped behind the curtains of lower ten. You understand, Mr. Blakeley, that I thought you were in lower ten, with the notes."

I nodded curtly.

"I'm not trying to defend myself," he went on. "I was ready to steal the notes—I had to. But murder!"

He wiped his forehead with his handkerchief.

"Well, I slipped across and behind the curtains. It was very still. The man in ten didn't move, although my heart was thumping until I thought he would hear it.

"I felt around cautiously. It was perfectly dark, and I came across a bit of chain, about as long as my finger. It seemed a queer thing to find there, and it was sticky, too."

He shuddered, and I could see Alison's hands clenching and unclenching with the strain.

"All at once it struck me that the man was strangely silent, and I think I lost my nerve. Anyhow, I drew the curtains open a little, and let the light fall on my hands. They were red, blood-red."

He leaned one hand on the back of the chair, and was silent for a moment, as though he lived over again the awful events of that more than awful night.

The stout detective had let his cigar go out; he was still drawing at it nervously. Richey had picked up a paper-weight and was tossing it from hand to hand; when it slipped and fell to the floor, a startled shudder passed through the room.

"There was something glittering in there," Sullivan resumed, "and on impulse I picked it up. Then I dropped the curtains and stumbled back to my own berth."

"Where you wiped your hands on the bed clothing and stuck the dirk into the pillow." Hotchkiss was seeing his carefully built structure crumbling to pieces, and he looked chagrined.

"I suppose I did—I'm not very clear about what happened then. But when I rallied a little I saw a Russia leather wallet lying in the aisle almost at my feet, and, like a fool, I stuck it, with the bit of chain, into my bag.

"I sat there, shivering, for what seemed hours. It was still perfectly quiet, except for some one snoring. I thought that would drive me crazy.

"The more I thought of it the worse things looked. The telegram was the first thing against me—it would put the police on my track at once, when it was discovered that the man in lower ten had been killed.

"Then I remembered the notes, and I took out the wallet and opened it."

He stopped for a minute, as if the recalling of the next occurrence was almost beyond him.

"I took out the wallet," he said simply, "and, opening it, held it to the light. In gilt letters was the name, Simon Harrington."

The detectives were leaning forward now, their eyes on his face.

"Things seemed to whirl around for a while. I sat there almost paralyzed, wondering what this new development meant for me.

"Do you believe me now?" He looked around at us defiantly. "I am telling the absolute truth, and not one of you believes me!

"My wife, I knew, would swear I had killed her father; nobody would be likely to believe the truth.

"After a bit the man in lower nine got up and walked along the aisle toward the smoking compartment. I heard him go, and, leaning from my berth, watched him out of sight.

"It was then I got the idea of changing berths with him, getting his clothes, and leaving the train. I give you my word I had no idea of throwing suspicion on him."

Alison looked scornfully incredulous, but I felt that the man was telling the truth.

"I changed the numbers of the berths, and it worked well. I got into the other man's berth, and he came back to mine. The rest was easy. I dressed in his clothes—luckily, they fitted—and jumped the train not far from Baltimore, just before the wreck."

"There is something else you must clear up," I said. "Why did you try to telephone me from M——, and why did you change your mind about the message?"

He looked astounded.

"You knew I was at M——?" he stammered.

"Yes, we traced you. What about the message?"

"Well, it was this way; of course I did not know your name, Mr. Blakeley. The telegram said: 'Man with papers in lower ten, car seven,' and after I had made what I considered my escape, I began to think I had left the man in my berth in a bad way.

MOTIVES

By HENRY F. COPE

TEXT—Then didst well that it was in thine heart.—I. Kings, 8:18.

By their motives men are both measured and made. These are the motors, the engines of our humanity. Fortune may offer many allurements and fate may seem to lay many a lash on our shoulders, but when and how we shall reach the goal and whether that goal be worth the race depends on the character and power of the ideals and desires within us.

Many a life lies by the wayside, on the junk heap that on superficial examination seems to be an admirable piece of mechanism. It lies there because it is just that and no more, only mechanism, intricate, adjusted, polished, but powerless, valueless for lack of a sufficient dynamic force, a power and motion of its own.

Efficiency is a plendid thing, wholly desirable and essential, but life demands also sufficiency, motive as well as mechanism. Schools and daily experience give us the training in efficiency, but from within must arise the dynamic forces, the motives, passions, aspirations, and real powers of the personality.

The sun of our motives makes the purposes of our lives and this determines the course we go, the work we do, the character we have, and the destiny that is ours. The deepest need of every life is a passionate purpose in living, an end and goal that calls forth all the possibilities and enlists all the powers.

Life's purpose depends on its philosophy; that, is your aim and goal will depend on your interpretation of the meaning of life, on the answer which you make to life's significance. What is the meaning of it all to you? Is it but accident or chance? Then you will drift without purpose. Is is a bloody fight? Then you will wage war for yourself and against all others. Are there yet higher purposes running through all? Then you will seek them.

In a most important sense this answer which a man makes to the enigma of living constitutes his religion and religion becomes the dominating motive in life. For religion surely for us all, as for all people and in all time, is our conception of that which, for us, is highest and best, that which, because it seems to us to give meaning to existence, furnishes the motives for whatever we may be and do in the world.

This has been at the root of all high endeavor; this spirit accounts for all great and worthy work the world has seen. Because they have believed that existence has meaning only as it contributes to progress, only as it finds fruitage in larger, nobler being, they have rejoiced to lay down life if need be that the race might find larger life.

Faith in the future, hope for our fellows, love of that which is highest and best fuse together and make a sufficient motive for living and toiling. And life is a tedious business, without such motives. A man becomes merely a part of the bread winning machine, a slave bound to the wheel, unless he has some sense of his own life as being worth while for the contribution it makes to all life.

Youth abounds with high motives normally; the years often blast them with the curse of cynicism. We despoil our own hearts and steal our own happiness whenever we allow the embittering experiences of daily living to take from us the faith that it is possible to do good, to increase the world's store of joy and strength and hope, and to make our lives worth something to our times.

When all has been said and all other ways tried we find that the only motives that give perennial satisfaction and constantly strengthen the heart are the unselfish ones. One gets weary of gaining, but never of giving. Ambition falters on its wings. But the aspiration to serve, to help, to bless, to cheer, to love never dies down.

You may measure any man's religion by the extent to which it acts as a constant motive in his life, whether it gives him a vision of the life that awakens an enthusiasm for living, of a world that is worth living in and dying for and a race that has such promise in itself as to call for the investment of all that is worthy in us.

In Christ Our Hope.

Prayer is not the most effective thing in the Christian's life. Jesus Christ is better and more effective than the best prayer ever offered. In him, and not in prayer, lies our whole hope. One who dated the beginning of his richest Christian life and experience from a time of prayer when he had asked everything and received everything, was reminded of this as he prayed later, in gratitude for his new blessings: "Not because it was an effective prayer, but because thou art an effective Christ, was my prayer so gloriously answered." Those who are called "mighty in prayer" think least about prayer as such, and most about Christ. Yet the more we think about Christ and the better we come to know him, the greater will be the place that we give to prayer in our lives.

All of a Christian's power is imparted power.

Headaches, Colds, Indigestion, Pains, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Dizziness? If you are not, the most effective, prompt and pleasant method of getting rid of them is to take, now and then, a dessertspoonful of the ever refreshing and truly beneficial laxative remedy—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna. It is well known throughout the world as the best of family laxative remedies, because it acts so gently and strengthens naturally without irritating the system in any way.

To get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., bearing the name of the Company, plainly printed on the front of every package.

New York city now has in operation twelve open air schools and classes, and definite provision has been made for fourteen similar classes to be opened by next fall, according to an announcement made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Chicago has six open air classes in its schools, and Boston has five.

Like Home Touch.

Tired and dusty, a party were returning by rail from a holiday trip. Simkins, a little bald man, seated himself to read, but dropped off to sleep. On the rack was a ferocious crab in a bucket, and when Simkins went to sleep the crab woke up, and finding things dull in the bucket, started exploring. By careful investigation Mr. Crab reached the edge of the rack. Down it fell, alighting on Simkin's shoulder, where it grabbed the man's ear to study itself. The passengers held their breath and waited for developments, but Simkins only shook his head and said: "Leggo, Sarah! I tell you I've been at the office all the evening!"

A Missionary Tree.

A missionary, during a Lenten tea, said, pointedly:

"I have established missionary trees all over the country. But perhaps you don't know what a missionary tree is? A missionary tree is one whose profit goes entirely to missions.

"A Roxborough farmer has in his apple orchard a golden pippin tree that helps to support the Chinese mission. A Florida woman has an orange tree that helps to uplift the cannibals of New Guinea. A California nut farmer devotes a walnut tree to the spread of the faith in Zanzibar.

"Missionary trees," the speaker ended, "are very good things, but the principle that underlies them need not be confined to farms and farmers."

A WIDOW'S LUCK

Quit the Thing That Was Slowly Injuring Her.

A woman tells how coffee kept her from insuring her life:

"I suffered for many years chiefly from trouble with my heart, with severe nervous headaches and neuralgia; but although incapacitated at times for my housework, I did not realize the gravity of my condition till I was rejected for life insurance, because, the examining physician said, my heart was so bad he could not pass me.

"This distressed me very much, as I was a widow and had a child dependent upon me. It was to protect her future that I wanted to insure my life.

"Fortunately for me, I happened to read an advertisement containing a testimonial from a man who had been affected in the same way that I was with heart trouble, and who was benefited by leaving off coffee and using Postum. I grasped at the hope this held out, and made the change at once.

"My health began to improve immediately. The headaches and neuralgia disappeared, I gained in flesh, and my appetite came back to me. Greatest of all, my heart was strengthened from the beginning, and soon all the distressing symptoms passed away. No more waking up in the night with my heart trying to fly out of my mouth!

"Then I again made application for life insurance, and had no trouble in passing the medical examination.

"It was seven years ago that I began to use Postum and I am using it still, and shall continue to do so, as I find it a guarantee of good health." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

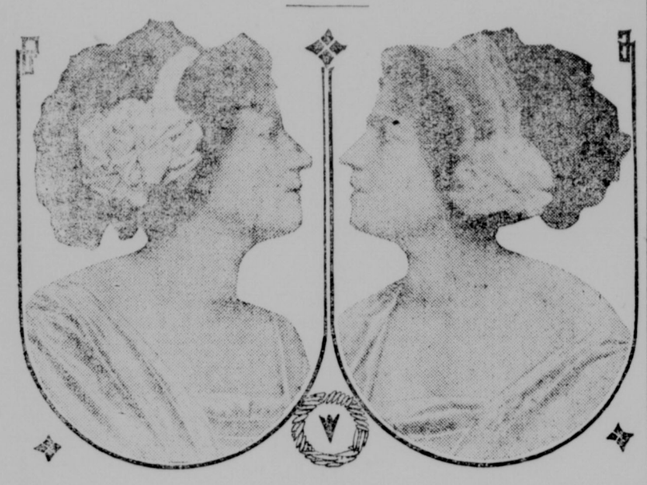
The Coiffure



EVERY one (with an eye for beauty values in the new styles) will want a hair band. The hair band is not a novelty, but it is a revival which, for two reasons, has been steadily gaining ground in favor.

Those consummate judges of the beautiful and artistic—the ancient Greeks—show us, in what remains of their art, that their women bound up their hair with bands, and the Greek coiffure, like the Greek architect, still stands the most excellent of all achievement in its line, writes Julia Bottomley in the Illustrated Milliner. The demand for the band has become so general that bands of many descriptions and styles, designed for women of various ages, complexions and build, are now manufactured and put on the market, all ready to adjust to the head.

There are plain black bands of velvet or silk ribbon, finished with a plain flat bow, or a rosette for morning wear, which means also that they are appropriate for the business woman during her working hours. They fasten with one or two hooks and eyes, and are not confined to black but are shown in black with a little silver or white, or in white with black markings suitable for very gray hair.

The hair band supports the hair which, as the day wears on, has a tendency to sag, unless provided with some artificial support. It keeps the "scolding locks" from flying loose and straggling about the neck and face. The charm of neatness is hardly second to that of beauty, and has a beauty of its own, which has been known to win out over very beautiful but "sloppy" creatures. Besides these virtues the hair band is becoming. If the hair is dull and lifeless, the band brightens it. The older ladies with beautiful white hair, understand the life and sparkle resulting from the vivid contrast of the black velvet band, or one of vivid green. The glow of silver strands or the sparkle of cut steel or rhinestones on the band makes the white coiffure a thing of distinction and beauty which is different from any other. The black hair, that is lacking in the luster and "shine" essential to beauty in dark shades, borrows brilliancy from gold and silver and spangles. Women with brown hair, and all the intermediate shades or tones that gradually lead to auburn, red, deep gold, pale gold and drab and then to ash blonde, will find the selection of a band as interesting as the selection of a hat. All of them may be sure that black looks well, bringing out the wonderful colors which nature seems to delight in giving to human hair. The band is not necessarily of a contrasting color. The possessor of copper colored hair may achieve a color harmony with copper color and green or copper color and black, which will make the most jaded observer of things beautiful (if such a being lives) turn round to look and rejoice. Adopt the hair band, make a study of it, and it will be a part of you, waking or sleeping. For her modern ladyship gives attention to her night time disposition of the hair, with an eye to making it attractive as well as comfortable. If she finds it necessary to roll it up on curlers about the face, then the broad band of soft ribbon covers up a lot of unsightliness. The soft rosette at the side is a touch of frivolity which we not only forgive, but adore. Little net or silk caps with a frill of lace or band of ribbon about the face are also very nice for night wear.

Figure 1 shows a band of wide ribbon finished with a rosette. The color, in this instance, is turquoise blue and the wearer possesses a gift of nature, in hair of deep yellow, a regular gold. She should wear with equally fine effect, yellow, white, pale green, pale and deep blues, black, white, gray, lavender and yellow browns. The band shown is called the "Hortense." The ribbon of which it is made is six inches wide and two yards are required. The rosette is fastened back of the tip of the ear. The new coiffures are either quite high or very low, and are designed for different types.

Fig. 2 is called the "Lady Vivien," and is designed for evening wear. It is simply a strip of spangled tulle 10 to 12 inches wide finished with a small rosette. A barrette of shell, set with rhinestones, is worn with it, forming a more substantial support for the chignon.

FICHU AND COLLAR

The charm of the quaint, old fashioned fichu is not to be denied, and this summer fichus are to be much worn with frocks of thin, summery material. This fichu of white tucked batiste and embroidery is combined with a broad sailor collar and the whole arrangement fastens at the throat with an old fashioned brooch, the folds of the fichu being drawn down and pinned at the belt line. One reason for the almost universal becomingness of the fichu is its V shaped arrangement at the neck. The V'd neck opening is much more apt to be flattering to the face above it than the round Dutch neck.

Lace Watch Fobs.

Lace watch fobs are very dainty. They are also new, and a charming adjunct to the light frock. The girl who is deft with her fingers should be able to make one easily at home. For this, remnants of Irish or Cluny insertion may be utilized. The strips of insertion are folded over the gold or brass catch, which may be bought for fobs, and the end is pointed and finished with a white silk tassel. The girl with a military friend from whom she may beg souvenirs might substitute for the white tassel one of gold strands such as is worn on a sword.

CURVES NO LONGER IN STYLE

Decree of Fashion Is That Woman Must Be Perpendicularly Parallel.

This is the season of the Disappearance Figure.

Figures—as figures—are no more. They make excellent clothes props, or pillow-case advertisements. But as figures their day is done.

Venus has now vanished. Not by sleight-of-hand or force of circumstances, but by word of mouth. The decree of fashion has gone forth, and Venus has bowed to the inevitable. Not only has she mislaid her arm; she has now lost her shape. The curves and contours of yesterday have become the lines and angles of today. Women have gone back a decade. They have discarded their corsets and curves; their broad shoulders and narrow waists. They are now perpendicularly parallel, from head to heels. In brief—they are waistless.

We do all we can nowadays to hide our figures. If Nature has blessed—or cursed—us with a few fascinating curves, we rush to the nearest Disappearing-Figure-Factory, and purchase a casing to fill the unnecessary spaces.

Children's Hair Ribbons.

They are larger than ever.

To please the youngsters they must be stiff and perky.

Plain colors will always be regulation, both for morning and afternoon wear in the hair.

There is a decided preference for plaids and stripes for school hours.

A good deal of smartness is given to a plain frock by topping it with a striking contrast of colors.

A blue serge, for example, looks vastly better if a big blue, red and green plaid hair ribbon catches the eye at the same time.

Plaids are not suitable for afternoon.

When a little miss changes her dress for the afternoon she may wear a flowered ribbon in her hair if she likes.

Dusty Face.

During the day use a mixture of glycerine and rose water, half and half, for cleansing the face. On retiring you may wash the face thoroughly with hot water and a mild soap, and after this apply cold cream

Some Good Soups.

Soups are always a frequent dish on our tables, and the making of soup is worthy space and discussion. The art of soup making is easily mastered and it is not necessary for a good soup to have a large variety of ingredients. When celery is expensive the outer stalks and the roots are saved for flavoring soups.

There are two classes of soups—those made with stock and those without. Under the soups with stock there is bouillon, brown soup stock, white soup stock, consomme and lamb stock.

Under soups without stock are the creams, purees, bisques and fruit soups.

Pea Soup.

Drain a can of marrow fat peas from their liquor, add a pint of cold water, two teaspoonfuls of sugar and simmer 20 minutes. Rub through a sieve, reheat and thicken with two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter. Scald a pint of milk with a slice of onion, remove the onion and add the milk to the pea mixture; season with salt and pepper. Peas that are too old to serve as a vegetable may be used in soups.

Veal and Sago Soup.

Remove all fat from two and a half pounds of veal and chop fine. Cover the meat with three quarts of cold water and bring slowly to the boiling point. Simmer two hours, skimming occasionally; strain and reheat. Soak a quarter of a pound of sago with water to cover for half an hour then turn into the hot stock and cook 30 minutes; add two cups of scalded milk and pour slowly over the yolks of four eggs slightly beaten. Season with salt and pepper and serve.

Swiss Rice Soup.

Cook half a cup of rice in two quarts of boiling water; add a tablespoonful of chopped onion, a bit of mace, a sprig of parsley and a teaspoonful of salt. When the rice is soft rub through a sieve, bind with a tablespoonful of flour mixed with a little cold milk, season and pour over a half cup of cream and two eggs. When serving, sprinkle each dish with grated Swiss cheese and chopped parsley.

HOMES become a palace when the daughters are maids of honor and the sons are noble in spirit, then the father is a king, and the mother a queen, and royal residences are more than outdone. A city built up of such dwellings is a city of palaces and a state composed of such cities is a republic of princes.

—Spurgeon.

Ways of Serving Rice.

Rice is one of our most easily digested foods and because of it is often served in invalid cookery.

When cooking rice have a large proportion of water, drop in the rice a little at a time so that the water is not cooled enough to cease boiling. The agitation of the water will keep the rice in motion. It should be stirred as little as possible. When it is cooked each kernel will stand apart by itself plump and whole. After draining the rice set it for a few minutes into the oven to dry. It may be salted while cooking and served with bits of butter over the dish, taking the place of potatoes.

The addition of a little cold boiled rice to griddle cakes and muffins makes the dish more nutritive.

A delicious dessert called rice custard is prepared by adding a cupful of cold boiled rice to a custard before baking.

Rice is used as a stuffing for fowls. To prepare the stuffing, brown one onion finely chopped in a tablespoon of butter and mix it with four cups of boiled rice and a cupful of bread crumbs that have been moistened with boiling water. Season with sage, parsley or any herb desired; add a half pound of sausage meat or finely chopped salt pork and salt and pepper to taste.

Sweet Rice.

Boil one cup of rice in three pints of water until every grain is dissolved and the mixture a thick paste. Stir into it one cup of sugar, rind of a lemon and one teaspoonful of salt. Beat half a cup of cream to a stiff froth and stir it into the rice. Add a half cup of preserve juice of a bright color and pour into moulds.

Creamed Codfish in Potato Shells.

Bake good sized long potatoes, scoop out the centers and season with salt and pepper. Refill the shells with a layer of potato then a layer of creamed codfish, heaping it up well on top. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve hot.

Onion Soup With Cheese.

Slice a large onion very thin and fry in butter, add a quart of beef broth. Serve the soup in bowls, season, and on the top of each bowl place a circular piece of buttered toast, sprinkled with grated cheese.

Apprentice Carried Out Orders of His Employer, but the Result Was Sad.

"Ay, ay, zur," replied William.

"First, now, I want thee to take out the old white mare and have her shod."

"Ay, ay, zur," said William, and departed.

He returned two hours later and the old farmer questioned him.

"Thee hast not been quick, lad," he said, reprovingly, "but if thee hast done thy work as I ordered thee thou shalt be forgiven. Didst thee have the mare shod, as I telled thee?"

"Ay, ay, zur!" replied William, beaming. "Didst thou not hear the gun? I shot her myself and I've just buried her."—London Answers.

Why rent? Own your own farm.

Nothing down 9 years to pay.

Don't give up the best of your crops to a landlord.

Haven't the money to buy!

You don't need money.

Here is a wonderful opportunity.

The Panhandle of Texas needs settlers.

It is the country along the Santa Fe, in the northwestern part of Texas.

The land is level prairie. It is the original residual soil—deep, rich and fertile. For years it furnished the finest pasture. Now it is too valuable for range purposes. The owners are selling it for general farming.

I want to tell you about the opportunities for settlers on these Panhandle lands. (The Santa Fe has no land to sell.)

I know one owner who will sell you a farm for only $20 an acre. You don't have to pay a cent for two years. After that you pay one-seventh each year, with interest at 6 per cent from date of purchase.

But you must live on and cultivate the soil.

Have you ever heard of a proposition like that?

Another proposition, at the same price, requires $2 an acre down, the balance in ten equal payments, with interest at only 6 per cent.

These are but two of the many opportunities open to real homeseekers in the Panhandle.

Owners of these lands will not sell to speculators. The land must go to actual settlers. They want to see the country built up. They want the crops coming into their towns and the trade of prosperous farmers who are owners of the land they farm.

The Santa Fe, too, is anxious to see the country developed. It wants to haul the people and their goods and products.

The country is in splendid condition this spring. Nearly 3 inches of rain in February. Everything ready for you.

Let me send you our folder, "The Panhandle and South Plains." It tells all about this country—its soil, climate, rainfall, water supply and crops. Let me put you in touch with the men who own the land. Let me tell you about the opportunity the Santa Fe affords twice a month to go and see this land at reduced rates.

Don't wait. Make the break.

Write me to-night, if only a postal.

You will be glad.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 84 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 53 bushels per acre, 25 to 40 bushels per acre were common crops. As high as 107 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

The Silver Cup

at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured, mixed farming a success.

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale-people lack good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach.

A remedy that makes the stomach strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease-producing bacteria and cures a whole multitude of diseases.

Get rid of your Stomach Weakness and Liver Laziness by taking a course of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—the great Stomach Restorative, Liver Invigorator and Blood Cleanser.

Mother's Day was observed in the M. E. church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Miss Anna DeBerry presided and Miss Lucile Echard acted as organist. Rev. N. L. Baumgardner extended a greeting to Mothers, and Mrs. McIntosh, of Washington, D. C., delivered the main address. One of the entertaining features was a song by a quartet composed of the following: Messrs. H. N. Cupett, C. V. Leighton, T. B. Doman and H. V. Leighton. A large and interested audience was present.

Mr. Lou A. Stone and family, of Wheeling are in their cottage, known as the Allen cottage, on G street, which Mr. S. purchased and has improved greatly.

Hipsley Brothers are painting the large Stone cottage on G street.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen, of Cumberland, arrived here yesterday and opened their cottage on F street and Oakland avenue.

Mrs. Pierce is occupying her cottage on H street.

Mr. Warren Rathbun has added a large porch to his handsome new cottage in Loch Lynn.

Messrs. Leighton & Harvey have added two large and handsome new floor show cases and rearranged their handsome storeroom so as to make it more convenient for themselves and their customers.

A Mr. Wright of near Altamont, has purchased the Mrs. Swearingen cottage on Baltimore avenue, and will occupy it as soon as he can get possession. Mr. Wiley Welling has it leased at present.

Washington Letter.

Washington, D. C.—The million and a half of Republicans who stayed at home last election and permitted a Democratic House of Representatives, are now wishing they had gone to the polls. Not alone was a Democratic House of Representatives made possible but several State Legislatures, hitherto Republican, went Democratic, resulting in a gain of Democratic Senators. The extra session called by President Taft has given us an early opportunity to see what the Democratic party of today stands for and what legislation it would enact if given full control of the Government.

So far the attention of the country has been given to the House of Representatives, and the press agent of the Democrats has given out the claims of that party with several assertions that are contrary to facts. It was of course to be expected that one or two men would make up the Committees as they pleased, giving one section of the country, with few exceptions, all the important places. Then a claim of economy was made because a few committees were abolished and it was telegraphed to the country that $182,000 had been saved But as Mr. Mann said: "Those expenses have been reduced only in the caucus, not on the pay rolls."

Not only has there not been any real economy, but the present Democratic House is going to increase expenditures enormously. From ten to twenty so-called investigating committees have been or will be formed and a small army of clerks employed with expenditures running up into the hundreds of thousands. This of course is simply playing politics, but at the expense of the people. It is time therefore that the economy dodge was exploded and the Democratic extravagance emphasized. The Democratic press agent should give al the facts.

The business men of the country are alarmed today as they have not been since 1893. They know what Democratic legislation means. They know what low duties and no duties mean. They know that free imports or increased imports mean a closing of mills and and hundreds of thousands of idle men who must withdraw their savings, who must buy less, who must go without all the luxuries and many of the necessaries of life. Then it will affect the farmer seriously, it will affect the railroad employees, it will affect merchants and clerks and every wage earner in the land. It means hard times and nothing else.

It cannot be stopped for certain till a year from next November. Then complete Democratic control means four years of adversity, the greatest adversity we have ever known.

On the other hand, the election of a Republican President and both Houses of Congress would mean an immediate resumption of business and a restoration of prosperity in every city and town and on every farm in the country. The campaign of 1912 is already begun. The result is in the hands of 15,000,000 who must decide between adequate protection or free trade

As was expected the first free trade bill of the Democrats passed the House by almost unanimous Democratic vote.

In the meantime while the free trade propaganda is going on, business is suffering throughout the country and we are again facing Democratic hard times. The mercantile agencies and newspapers generally as well as Republican Congressmen, have been loath to call attention to the poor conditions of trade, but it is becoming too manifest to conceal. We are in many industries producing on a 50 per cent. basis with a most dismal outlook. We are doing a hand to mouth business waiting to see what are to be the prospects. We are anticipating Democratic ascendancy and Democratic adversity.

George W. Magruder and Harriet Magruder, his wife vs. Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder, Alfred H. Magruder, Carrie Wagner and Madona Custer.

No. 1340 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain property in Garrett county, in the State of Maryland, which was conveyed to George W. Magruder, Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder, Alfred H. Magruder and Stephen A. Magruder, by The George's Creek Coal & Iron Co., dated February 10, 1896, and recorded in Liber No. 39, folio 51, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, containing 130 acres. Also a piece of land conveyed to the said grantees by William Pearre, Executor of George A. Pearre, by deed dated the 15th day of December, 1886, and recorded in Liber No. 42, folio 500, one of the Land Records of said county, containing 171 acres. Also a piece of land devised to the said grantees by the last will and testament of James Magruder, said will being recorded in Liber B, folio 98, one of the Will Records of Garrett county, containing 16 acres. Also a piece of land which was conveyed to Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder and Stephen A. Magruder, and as the bill claims one fifth of which was held in trust by them for the said George W. Magruder, from William Barnes and wife, by deed dated April 10, 1886, and recorded in Liber No. 38, folio 418, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, containing 242 acres.

The bill states that on or about the 20th day of May, 1907, the said Stephen A. Magruder departed this life intestate, and left as his heirs at law his four brothers, three sisters, and nieces and nephews, children of his own deceased sisters. That deeds were executed conveying the interest of his three sisters and all his nieces and nephews, in the said lands, to the use of his brothers, Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder, Alfred H. Magruder and Carrie Wagner of Hedgesville, W. Va., who did not sign the said deed and has an inchoate right of dowery in her husband's share. That a general release was executed by his sisters and all of his nieces and nephews conveying their interest in the said property above mentioned to George W. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder, but the two sisters, Mrs. Madona Custer and the wife of said Carrie Wagner, refused to execute said deed on their part. The said Madona Custer being entitled to the one-fifth of one-fifth interest in said first three pieces mentioned in this notice of publication, said Carrie Wagner being entitled to the same interest as aforementioned in these pieces also.

That the said Carrie Wagner, the wife of John Wagner, of Hedgesville, W. Va., is a non resident of this State. The bill among other things prays that the property be sold and divided among the parties entitled to share therein, according to their respective interest therein and have further relief.

It is thereupon this 1st day of May, in the year 1911, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in the said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks, before the 3rd day of June, 1911, notify the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, commanding her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 19th day June next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

CIVIC CLUB SUCCESSES

"Pop" Concert Well Attended and Ladies Return Their Thanks.

The "Pop" concert, given under the auspices of the Woman's Civic Club on last Friday night at the Empire Theatre, was quite well attended and an enjoyable evening was spent by those present. The ladies of the club desire to thank everyone for their generous patronage, especially Mrs. Nally, who donated the hall; the Oakland Band and orchestra who furnished such excellent music; the H. Weber & Sons Co., for their donation of flowers and the town people generally who made such liberal donations of cake, etc., thereby making it possible for the financial success of the affair. A good sum has been added to the credit of the club as a result of the success of the concert.

There has been general interest shown in the cleaning of the cemetery and quite an improvement in the appearance of the city of the dead may be noticed. The ladies hope to have the plots throughout the cemetery in good condition for Decoration Day and to this end they desire to impress every property owner there to exert every effort to this end.

Owing to the lack of a place for dumping the trash of the town the general "clean up" day has had to wait, hence the delay, but as soon as a proper place can be secured the work will be completed. The ladies would be glad to have any suggestions or offering of a suitable spot for this purpose and request correspondence from anyone in a position to offer the same.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the court house next Wednesday, the 31st, when those not now members are requested to join. All are urgrd to be present.

MEMORIAL DAY IN OAKLAND.

Annual Decoration of the Graves of the Honored Dead.

Crook Post No. 35, Grand Army of the Republic, desires that there be a general turnout of the citizens, public school children, Knights of Pythias and all other organized bodies of the town, and visitors from the surrounding country are also invited to participate with the Post on Memorial Day, Tuesday, May 30th, in decorating the graves of the noble dead who have answered the last roll call and are now resting in our cemeteries.

Crook Post will assemble at Sturgiss' drug store at 10 o'clock a. m., and at 10.30 proceed to the cemetery where the beautiful ritual of the order will be carried out.

Donations of flowers will be thankfully received and can be left at Sturgiss' drug store.

PRESIDENT TAFT TO VISIT MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

Where He Will Address Meeting On His Philippine Experiences.

Yesterday President William H. Taft accepted an invitation extended by the officials of the Mountain Lake Park Association to visit that place on June 25th, where he will make on address on "My Experience With the Missions in the Philippines."

Those of the Association who waited upon the President and secured his consent to come to the Park were Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton, superintendent; Dr. Charles W. Baldwin, of Baltimore, and Mr. Charles S. Davis, of Oakland. The delegation was introduced to the President by Senator Cummins, of Iowa, who is a personal friend of Dr. Shelton.

Incidentally the delegation put in a bid for Garrett county to be the summer capital of the country. The gentlemen cited the fact that the cottage at Deer Park, occupied by President Cleveland and his wife, and later by President Harrison and family, could be secured. This suggestion the President said he would take under advisement.

The National Pike Proposition.

In addition to item under this heading on fourth page the Journal is glad to record the visit here on Thursday of Ovid F. Winslow, representing the Hassam Paving Company, Worcester, Mass. who with W. E. G. Hitchins, of this place, traversed the 4.18 miles of National Pike, referred to.

Mr. Winslow says the "pitch macadam" is the proper treatment, and he is going to bid on the work after it is ascertained what the farmers along the Pike will do in the way of providing and hauling stone.

A canvass by Thomas J. Johnson is now under way to this end, and judging from the feeling manifested, it is believed the stone will cost nothing and the hauling will be done at the lowest rate possible.

Mr. Winslow has seen several members of the State Commission, whom he reports are earnestly anxious to have the work done.

The outlook, therefore, is bright—never brighter for nearly six miles of first-class road west of Frostburg.—Frostburg Journal.

Mrs. Lee Malone Again a Bride.

Mr. M. M. Foster, and Mrs. Lydia Malone, of Fairmont, W. Va., were united in marriage at Buffalo, N. Y., on Tuesday morning, according to a telegram received at Fairmont by friends. Announcement of the marriage does not come as a surprise to the friends of the newly married couple, as rumors of the wedding have been heard for some time. Mr. Foster and Mrs. Malone left Fairmont on Monday and it was then understood that the wedding was to take place during their absence. Mr. and Mrs. Foster are expected home in a day or two, and upon their return will reside at the bride's home on Fairmont avenue.

Mr. Foster is manager of the Fairmont Ice Company and Mrs. Malone is the widow of Mr. Lee L. Malone, who was general manager of the Consolidation Coal Company at the time of his death nearly two years ago.

Mrs. Malone and her daughter Blanch, who recently married her chauffeur, Al Saunders, of Baltimore, upon the death of Mr. Malone fell heir to about $800,000, the greater part of which, however, is held in trust for a number of years.

Mrs. Malone's pretty home on Fairmont avenue was recently completely renovated and is now one of the handsomest in Fairmont. The bride is aged 50. Mr. Foster is 34 years old, and is a native of Baltimore. After going to Fairmont he was for a time employed in the office of the division superintendent of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

CIVIC CLUB SUCCESSES

"Pop" Concert Well Attended and Ladies Return Their Thanks.

The "Pop" concert, given under the auspices of the Woman's Civic Club on last Friday night at the Empire Theatre, was quite well attended and an enjoyable evening was spent by those present. The ladies of the club desire to thank everyone for their generous patronage, especially Mrs. Nally, who donated the hall; the Oakland Band and orchestra who furnished such excellent music; the H. Weber & Sons Co., for their donation of flowers and the town people generally who made such liberal donations of cake, etc., thereby making it possible for the financial success of the affair. A good sum has been added to the credit of the club as a result of the success of the concert.

There has been general interest shown in the cleaning of the cemetery and quite an improvement in the appearance of the city of the dead may be noticed. The ladies hope to have the plots throughout the cemetery in good condition for Decoration Day and to this end they desire to impress every property owner there to exert every effort to this end.

Owing to the lack of a place for dumping the trash of the town the general "clean up" day has had to wait, hence the delay, but as soon as a proper place can be secured the work will be completed. The ladies would be glad to have any suggestions or offering of a suitable spot for this purpose and request correspondence from anyone in a position to offer the same.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the court house next Wednesday, the 31st, when those not now members are requested to join. All are urgrd to be present.

MEMORIAL DAY IN OAKLAND.

Annual Decoration of the Graves of the Honored Dead.

Crook Post No. 35, Grand Army of the Republic, desires that there be a general turnout of the citizens, public school children, Knights of Pythias and all other organized bodies of the town, and visitors from the surrounding country are also invited to participate with the Post on Memorial Day, Tuesday, May 30th, in decorating the graves of the noble dead who have answered the last roll call and are now resting in our cemeteries.

Crook Post will assemble at Sturgiss' drug store at 10 o'clock a. m., and at 10.30 proceed to the cemetery where the beautiful ritual of the order will be carried out.

Donations of flowers will be thankfully received and can be left at Sturgiss' drug store.

PRESIDENT TAFT TO VISIT MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

Where He Will Address Meeting On His Philippine Experiences.

Yesterday President William H. Taft accepted an invitation extended by the officials of the Mountain Lake Park Association to visit that place on June 25th, where he will make on address on "My Experience With the Missions in the Philippines."

Those of the Association who waited upon the President and secured his consent to come to the Park were Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton, superintendent; Dr. Charles W. Baldwin, of Baltimore, and Mr. Charles S. Davis, of Oakland. The delegation was introduced to the President by Senator Cummins, of Iowa, who is a personal friend of Dr. Shelton.

Incidentally the delegation put in a bid for Garrett county to be the summer capital of the country. The gentlemen cited the fact that the cottage at Deer Park, occupied by President Cleveland and his wife, and later by President Harrison and family, could be secured. This suggestion the President said he would take under advisement.

The National Pike Proposition.

In addition to item under this heading on fourth page the Journal is glad to record the visit here on Thursday of Ovid F. Winslow, representing the Hassam Paving Company, Worcester, Mass. who with W. E. G. Hitchins, of this place, traversed the 4.18 miles of National Pike, referred to.

Mr. Winslow says the "pitch macadam" is the proper treatment, and he is going to bid on the work after it is ascertained what the farmers along the Pike will do in the way of providing and hauling stone.

A canvass by Thomas J. Johnson is now under way to this end, and judging from the feeling manifested, it is believed the stone will cost nothing and the hauling will be done at the lowest rate possible.

Mr. Winslow has seen several members of the State Commission, whom he reports are earnestly anxious to have the work done.

The outlook, therefore, is bright—never brighter for nearly six miles of first-class road west of Frostburg.—Frostburg Journal.

The MAN in LOWER TEN

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the Bronson case to get the deposition of John Gilmore, millionaire. A lady requests Blakeley to buy her a Pullman ticket. He gives her lower 11 and retains lower 10. He finds a drunken man in lower 10 and retires in lower 9. He awakens in lower 7 and finds his clothes and bag missing. The man in lower 10 is found murdered. Circumstantial evidence points to both Blakeley and the man who stole his clothes. The train is wrecked and Blakeley is rescued from a burning car by a girl in blue. His arm is broken. The girl proves to be Alison West, his partner's sweetheart. Blakeley returns home and finds he is under surveillance. Moving pictures of the train taken just before the wreck reveal to Blakeley a man leaping from the train with his stolen grip. Investigation proves that the man's name is Sullivan. Mrs. Conway, the woman for whom Blakeley bought a Pullman ticket, tries to make a bargain with him for the forged notes, not knowing that they are missing. Blakeley and an amateur detective investigate the home of Sullivan's sister. From a servant Blakeley learns that Alison West had been there on a visit and Sullivan had been attentive to her. Sullivan is the husband of a daughter of the murdered man. Blakeley's house is ransacked by the police. He learns that the affair between Alison and his partner is off. Alison tells Blakeley about the attention paid her by Sullivan, whom she was on her way to marry when the wreck came. It is planned to give Mrs. Conway the forged notes in exchange for Sullivan. Mrs. Conway kills herself and Bronson, and the ashes of the forged notes are found in the room. Sullivan is found and explains how he got in the power of Bronson, who ordered him to steal the forged notes from Blakeley.

"He would probably be accused of the crime. So, although when the wreck occurred I supposed everyone connected with the affair had been killed, there was a chance that you had survived. I've not been of much account, but I didn't want a man to swing because I left him in my place. Besides, I began to have a theory of my own.

"As we entered the car a tall, dark woman passed us, with a glass of water in her hand, and I vaguely remembered her. She was amazingly like Blanche Conway.

"If she, too, thought the man with the notes was in lower ten, it explained a lot, including that piece of a woman's necklace. She was a fury, Blanche Conway, capable of anything."

"Then why did you countermand that message?" I asked curiously.

"When I got to the Carter house, and got to bed—I had sprained my ankle in the jump—I went through the alligator bag I had taken from lower nine. When I found your name, I sent the first message. Then, soon after, I came across the notes. It seemed too good to be true, and I was crazy for fear the message had gone.

"At first I was going to send them to Bronson; then I began to see what the possession of the notes meant to me. It meant power over Bronson, money, influence, everything. He was a devil, that man."

"Well, he's at home now," said McKnight, and we were glad to laugh and relieve the tension.

Alison put her hand over her eyes, as if to shut out the sight of the man she had so nearly married, and I furtively touched one of the soft little curls that nestled at the back of her neck.

"When I was able to walk," went on the sullen voice, "I came at once to Washington. I tried to sell the notes to Bronson, but he was almost at the end of his rope. Not even my threat to send them back to you, Mr. Blakeley, could make him meet my figure. He didn't have the money."

McKnight was triumphant.

"I think you gentlemen will see reason in my theory now," he said. "Mrs. Conway wanted the notes to force a legal marriage, I suppose?"

"Yes."

The detective with the small package carefully rolled off the rubber band, and unwrapped it. I held my breath as he took out, first, the Russia leather wallet.

"These things, Mr. Blakeley, we found in the sealskin bag Mr. Sullivan says he left you. This wallet, Mr. Sullivan—is this the one you found on the floor of the car?"

Sullivan opened it, and, glancing at the name inside, "Simon Harrington," nodded affirmatively.

"And this," went on the detective—"this is a piece of gold chain?"

"It seems to be," said Sullivan, recoiling at the blood-stained end.

"This, I believe, is the dagger." He held it up, and Alison gave a faint cry of astonishment and dismay. Sullivan's face grew ghastly, and he sat down weakly on the nearest chair.

The detective looked at him shrewdly, then at Alison's agitated face.

"Where have you seen this dagger before, young lady?" he asked, kindly enough.

"Oh, don't ask me!" she gasped, breathlessly, her eyes turned on Sullivan. "It's—it's too terrible!"

"Tell him," I advised, leaning over to her. "It will be found out later, anyhow."

"Ask him," she said, nodding toward Sullivan.

The detective unwrapped the small box Alison had brought, disclosing the trampled necklace and broken chain. With clumsy fingers he spread it on the table and fitted into place the bit of chain. There could be no doubt that it belonged there.

"Where did you find that chain?" Sullivan asked, hoarsely, looking for the first time at Alison.

"On the floor, near the murdered man's berth."

"Now, Mr. Sullivan," said the detective, civilly, "I believe you can tell us in the light of these two exhibits, who really did murder Simon Harrington."

Sullivan looked again at the dagger, a sharp little bit of steel with a Florentine handle. Then he picked up the locket and pressed a hidden spring under one of the cameos. Inside, very neatly engraved, was the name and a date.

"Gentlemen," he said, his face ghastly, "it is of no use for me to attempt a denial. The dagger and necklace belonged to my sister, Alice Curtis!"

CHAPTER XXXI.

And Only One Arm.

Hotchkiss was the first to break the tension.

"Mr. Sullivan," he asked suddenly, "was your sister left-handed?"

"Yes."

Hotchkiss put away his notebook and looked around with an air of triumphant vindication. It gave us a chance to smile and look relieved.

"I Understand Now What Puzzled Me Then."

After all, Mrs. Curtis was dead. It was the happiest solution of the unhappy affair. McKnight brought Sullivan some whisky and he braced up a little.

"I learned through the papers that my wife was in a Baltimore hospital and yesterday I ventured there to see her. I felt if she would help me to keep straight, that now, with her father and my sister both dead, we might be happy together.

"I understand now what puzzled me then. It seemed that my sister went into the next car and tried to make my wife promise not to interfere. But Ida—Mrs. Sullivan—was firm, of course. She said her father had papers, certificates and so on, that would stop the marriage at once.

"She said, also, that her father was in our car, and that there would be the mischief to pay in the morning. It was probably when my sister tried to get the papers that he awakened and she had to do what she did."

It was over. Save for a technicality or two, I was a free man. Alison rose quietly and prepared to go; the men stood to let her pass, save Sullivan, who sat crouched in his chair, his face buried in his hands.

McKnight saw her, with Mrs. Dallas, to their carriage and came back again. The gathering in the office was breaking up; Johnson had slipped away as unostentatiously as he came. Sullivan, looking worn and old, was standing by the window, staring at the broken necklace in his hand. When he saw me watching him, he put it back on the desk and picked up his hat.

"If I cannot do anything more—" he hesitated.

"I think you have done about enough," I replied, grimly, and he went out.

I believe that Richey and Hotchkiss led me somewhere to dinner and that, for fear I would be lonely without him, they sent for Johnson. And I recall a spirited discussion in which Hotchkiss told the detective that he could manage certain cases, but that he lacked induction. Richey and I were mainly silent. My thoughts would slip ahead to that hour, later in the evening, when I should see Alison again.

I dressed in savage haste finally and was so particular about my tie that Mrs. Klopton gave up in despair.

"I wish, until your arm is better, that you would buy the kind that hooks on," she protested, almost tearfully. "I'm sure they look very nice, Mr. Lawrence. My late husband always—"

"That's a lover's knot you've tied this time,' I snarled, and, jerking open the bow knot she had so painfully executed, looked out of the window for Johnson—until I recalled that he no longer belonged in my perspective. I ended by driving frantically to the club and getting George to do it.

I was late, of course. The drawing room and library at the Dallas country home was very empty. I could hear billiard balls rolling somewhere and I turned the other way. I found Alison at last on the balcony, sitting much as she had that night on the beach—her chin in her hands, her eyes fixed unseeingly on the trees and lights of the square across. She was even whistling a little, softly. But this time the plaintiveness was gone. It was a tender little tune. She did not move, as I stood beside her, looking down. And now, when the moment had come, all the thousand and one things I had been waiting to say forsook me, precipitately beat a retreat and left me unsupported. The are-moon sent little fugitive lights over her hair, her eyes, her gown.

"Don't—do that," I said unsteadily. "You—you know what I want to do when you whistle!"

She glanced up at me and she did not stop. She did not stop! She went on whistling softly, a bit tremulously. And straightway I forgot the street, the chance of passers-by, the voices in the house behind us. "The world doesn't hold anyone but you," I said, reverently. "It is our world, sweetheart. I love you."

And I kissed her.

A boy was whistling on the pavement below. I let her go reluctantly and sat back where I could see her.

"I haven't done this the way I intended to at all," I confessed. "In books they get things all settled and then kiss the lady."

"Settled?" she inquired.

"Oh, about getting married and that sort of thing," I explained with elaborate carelessness. "We—could go down to Bermuda—or—or Jamaica, say in December."

She drew her hand away and faced me squarely.

"I believe you are afraid!" she declared. "I refuse to marry you unless you propose properly. Everybody does it. And it is a woman's privilege: she wants to have that to look back to."

"Very well," I consented with an exaggerated sigh. "If you will promise not to think I look like an idiot, I shall do it, knee and all."

I had to pass her to close the door behind us, but when I kissed her again she protested that we were not really engaged.

I turned to look down at her. "It is a terrible thing," I said, exultantly, "to love a girl the way I love you and to have only one arm!" Then I closed the door.

From across the street there came a sharp crescendo whistle and a vaguely familiar figure separated itself from the park railing.

"Say," he called, in a hoarse whisper, "shall I throw the key down the elevator shaft?"

THE END.

Pungent Flavors.

"One of these food experts says that a cactus leaf is edible."

"Well," said the man who is not an epicure, "a cactus leaf is a little spiny. But I shouldn't think it would hurt any worse than horseradish or chile con carne."

The Privilege of Prayer

By REV. GEORGE R. LOCKWOOD

TEXT—Be careful for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understandings, shall keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ.—Philippians 4, 6-7.

Let me ask you, in the very beginning of this sermon, four very personal questions: Do you realize what a privilege prayer is? Has prayer been of real blessing to you? Can you put your finger on any particular prayer and say: "I know that prayer was answered; it was a particular blessing to me?" Is your God not your mother's God, or your father's God, or somebody else's God, but is your God a prayer-answering God?

Now, if anybody had any knowledge of God except yourself and you were to bear witness to the fact that God is hearing and answering prayers, would you be able to bring illustrations out of your own individual experience? That is an intensely personal and practical question. And the fourth one: Do you feel free to go to God at any time; are you so much at home with God that you cannot hold yourself back at times from going and having a talk with Him? In prayer a privelege that you enjoy?

Now, let us clear the field for action by bringing the testimony of Christ before us. In the chapter that I have just read you will notice certain ones coming to Jesus on a very interesting occasion. They saw Him praying, and when He got through praying they immediately came to Him and said: "Teach us to pray, Lord."

It seems to me that that picture comes right before our minds. We can see Jesus kneeling there in prayer, and there is a radiance about His countenance; there is a sincerity about His voice; there is an intimacy in the whole atmosphere that surrounds Jesus, and the disciples who are looking at Him feel, "Why, I have never had an experience of that sort in my life; that man is enjoying something I wish I could."

And so they come to Him manfully and bravely and say: "Lord, teach us to pray." And Jesus teaches the great Lord's prayer. And you will notice that as He goes on down in His beautiful conversation with them He says: "Knock, and it shall be opened unto you; ask, and ye shall receive."

Prayer is a privilege we may all enjoy. Anybody, anywhere, any time, anything. Anybody—"Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." Any time—"men ought always to pray." Anywhere—you remember that woman of Samaria, there at the well. She had an idea that it was necessary to go on a long pilgrimage to Jerusalem, to a certain particular temple, in order to come in communion with God. Jesus said: "Woman, not Jerusalem; God is a spirit, and they that would worship God must worship Him in spirit and in truth." Anything—"in everything let your requests be made known unto God."

I will tell you three reasons that are the real enemies of prayer. It is interesting sometimes to look into your life and ask yourself the question: "Who are my enemies, after all?" They are not on the outside; the real enemies of prayer are on the inside. And what are those things in your life that make it difficult for you to realize how near God is, and how willing God is to answer your prayer? The first answer that very naturally comes is "Sin." It is the business of sin to close our eyes to the presence of God; to separate the soul from its Creator.

Who are the people who say: "I don't believe there is a God?" They are those who don't believe that there is any God, because their lives are in a condition of sin. Sin creates in our hearts a distaste for prayer.

The second enemy of prayer is "Reason." Reason would take the bread out of the hand of a starving child. Reason would go to the bedside of a sick and dying soul and would take the wise physician and drive him away from the bed. Reason would even reach its arm out into the sky and tear God out of the universe, if it only had the power to do it. Reason is one of the biggest blessings and one of the biggest curses that this world has ever had; it all depends upon whether reason is in its rightful place or not.

Then there is another enemy, and that is "Formality." Some of us are taught to pray at this hour or that hour; some are taught to pray in the morning or at night when we retire. But the very minute that you discover that formality in prayer is becoming simply a little fetich that you are putting in the place of God, that moment stop right where you are and say: "God forgive me; I have been making a little fetich out of prayer and that little fetich has blinded me to thy presence."

Let me place upon your lips two prayers. The first one: "Oh, God! help me to realize Thy presence." And when you feel God coming right through the darkness and standing right in front of you, your prayers will become a real blessing to you. Also, place on your lips this prayer: "Oh, God! help me to be very honest in my prayer." "And the peace that passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus."

A NEW IDEA.

Politician—There were several ungrammatical sentences in your speech last night.

The Candidate—I know; I'm making a play for the uneducated vote.

AN ESTABLISHED FACTORY

Producing standard goods used by stores, banks, farmers and practically everybody, is sending its special representative to open a distributing office for this district and other unoccupied territory and desires a resident distributer with $600 to $3,000 in cash, carrying stock for immediately filling orders; we allow $100 to $200 monthly compensation, extra commissions, office and other expenses, per contract, according to size of district allotted and stock carried; permanent arrangements; references required. If you can fill requirements write promptly. "Liberty" Manufacturing Association, 230 West Huron St., Chicago.

The Impossible.

Andrew Carnegie, at a recent dinner in New York, said of a certain labor trouble:

"It is silly of employers to pretend in these troubles that they are always in the right. Employers are often in the wrong; often unreasonable. They often—like Mrs. Smith-Jones—ask impossible things:

"Mrs. Smith-Jones, taking a villa at Palm Beach, engaged for butler a stately old colored deacon.

"'Now, Clay,' she said to the old fellow, 'there are two things I must insist upon—truthfulness and obedience.'

"'Yes, madam,' the venerable servant answered, 'and when yo' bids me tell yo' guests yo's out when yo's in, which shall it be, madam?'"

The Lesser Evil.

Gresham college in 1719 was the scene of a famous serio-comic duel between two celebrated doctors, Doctor Mead and Doctor Woodward, both of whom were lecturers at the college. While walking down Bishopsgate street one morning they quarreled over some medical question and adjourned to the square of the college to fight it out with swords. Woodward fell, wounded in several places, whereupon Mead magnanimously said, "Take thy life." "Anything but your physic," hissed back the chagrined Woodward ere he swooned away.—London Chronicle.

The Most Beautiful Thing.

A newspaper recently invited its readers to state in a few words what they considered the most beautiful thing in the world. The first prize was awarded to the sender of the answer: "The eyes of my mother." "The dream of that which we know to be impossible" suggested an imaginative person, and this brought him second prize. But the most amusing thing was that which read, "The most beautiful thing in the world is to see a man carrying his mother-in-law across a dangerous river without making any attempt to drop her in."

FOOD IN SERMONS

Feed the Dominie Right and the Sermons Are Brilliant.

A conscientious, hard-working and successful clergyman writes: "I am glad to bear testimony to the pleasure and increased measure of efficiency and health that have come to me from adopting Grape-Nuts food as one of my articles of diet.

"For several years I was much distressed during the early part of each day by indigestion. My breakfast seemed to turn sour and failed to digest. After dinner the headache and other symptoms following the breakfast would wear away, only to return, however, next morning.

"Having heard of Grape-Nuts food, I finally concluded to give it a trial. I made my breakfasts of Grape-Nuts with cream, toast and Postum. The result was surprising in improved health and total absence of the distress that had, for so long a time, followed the morning meal.

"My digestion became once more satisfactory, the headaches ceased, and the old feeling of energy returned. Since that time I have always had Grape-Nuts food on my breakfast table.

"I was delighted to find also, that whereas before I began to use Grape-Nuts food I was quite nervous and became easily wearied in the work of preparing sermons and in study, a marked improvement in this respect resulted from the change in my diet.

"I am convinced that Grape-Nuts food produced this result and helped me to a sturdy condition of mental and physical strength.

"I have known of several persons who were formerly troubled as I was, and who have been helped as I have been, by the use of Grape-Nuts food, on my recommendation." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

UNCLE SAM'S PART in the KING'S CORONATION

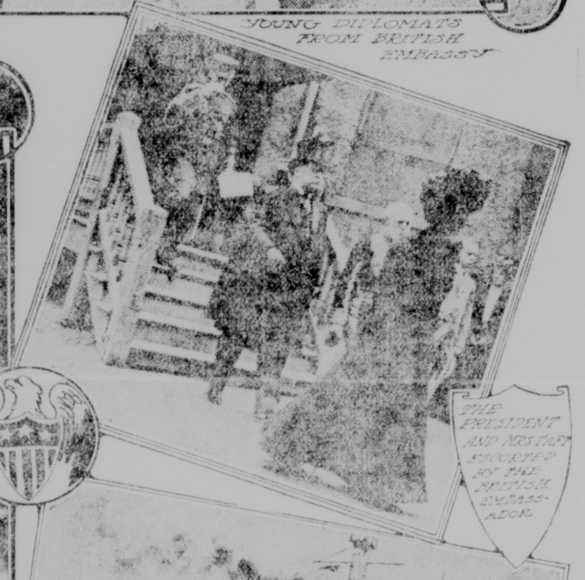
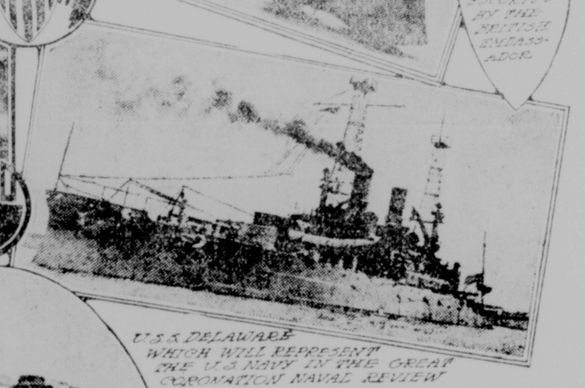
HISTORIC ST. JOHN'S CHURCH AT WASHINGTON WHERE COMMEMORATIVE SERVICES WILL BE HELD

YOUNG DIPLOMATS FROM BRITISH EMBASSY

SPECIAL AMBASSADOR JOHN HAYS HAMMOND AND MRS. HAMMOND



THE PRESIDENT AND MRS. TAFT GREETED BY THE BRITISH EMBASSADOR



U.S.S. DELAWARE WHICH WILL REPRESENT THE U.S. NAVY IN THE GREAT CORONATION NAVAL REVIEW

AMBASSADOR JAMES BRYCE, GREAT BRITAIN'S ENVOY TO THE UNITED STATES

UNCLE SAM, in one way and another, is to play quite a prominent part in connection with the coronation in June of King George, Great Britain's new monarch. First and foremost, of course, will be the representation, official and unofficial, of the United States at the spectacular exercises in London. But aside from this there will be recognition of the momentous event in the American capital and while it will be, perforce, infinitely less showy than the elaborate program in the British metropolis, this echo on this side of the Atlantic will have much of significance for all believers in the hands across the sea tradition.

A kingly coronation is always a magnet for tourists and sightseers of all nationalities—as witness the thousands of spectacle-loving Americans who have planned to be in London for the big show early this summer—but no government is expected to send official representatives to a coronation unless specifically invited by the government whose sovereign is to be crowned. However, Uncle Sam was duly invited, all right, to send special envoys to London for this supreme event of British history. Indeed in the present instance, as in the case of the coronation of the late King Edward, the United States was one of the first nations to whom an invitation was dispatched and this is something of an honor, for John Bull invites very few republics to participate in his big celebration and even purposely overlooks some of the less important monarchies in sending out his "bids."

From the minute that the state department accepted Brittania's invitation immense interest was aroused all over the country as to whom the president would appoint special ambassador to the coronation. There is no salary attached to the place and the allowance which the government makes for expenses cannot be expected to cover the outlay of a man who has such a position to maintain. But it is a great honor to be sent as coronation envoy—carrying with it such privileges as dinners with the king and queen in addition to choice reserved seats at all the big functions—and so the place is eagerly sought by men who have the wealth to enable them to carry out its obligations. President Taft bestowed this plum upon his close personal friend, John Hays Hammond, the multimillionaire mining engineer who, for the first time, broke into politics just prior to the last presidential campaign and was mentioned for nomination as vice-president on the ticket with Mr. Taft.

The California mining expert who rolled up the greater part of his wealth in the gold fields and diamond mines of South Africa, has the reputation of being a very liberal spender, but he will needs be to outshine his American rival, Mr. Whitelaw Reid, in the coronation hospitalities. Mr. Reid was the special envoy (the post now held by Mr. Hammond) at the coronation of King Edward, as he had been previously at Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee, and on both occasions he entertained in a manner to cause British eyes to open wide with astonishment. Now, Mr. Reid is our regular ambassador at the Court of St. James and as such he has to play second fiddle to the special ambassador, Mr. Hammond. But that is only in official precedence. There is no official etiquette that puts a check upon his private hospitalities. However, President Taft's chum has leased a large London mansion for the coronation season, paying a fortune as rental, and it is likely that no temporary resident of the city of fogs will play host more splendidly during the six weeks of gayety.

Special Envoy Hammond will have one immense advantage over the regular ambassador, Mr. Reid, and, of course, over all the Americans who are present in London at this time as private citizens. It will arise from the circumstance that the British government will, in order to make things easy for the special visitor, detail to attend him military and naval aids and court officials who will act as gentlemen-in-waiting just as is the case when a king visits the capital of a friendly nation. These British courtiers will pilot the proxy of President Taft all through the intricate problem of the coronation festivities, telling him just where to go, when to go and what to do when he gets there. In addition Mr. Hammond will enjoy all the privileges and immunities which are secured by international custom to the ambassadors of all countries.

Whereas Mr. Hammond will be the most conspicuous American at all the public events connected with the coronation, he is the head of what is known as a "special embassy" and the other members will come in for their respective shares of glory. The official staff of the special ambassador will include a military aid who will be a brigadier general of the regular army and a naval aid who will be of the rank of rear admiral, and in addition there will be three secretaries—young men chosen more for their social qualifications than because of clerical ability.

The army and navy representatives in the special embassy will of course don their special full dress uniforms on all ceremonial occasions during their stay in London, but the special ambassador, alike to the regular envoy, will not be asked to appear in fancy court attire of any kind or to make any elaboration of the conventional evening clothes such as he would wear at a White House reception. There will be this difference, however, that Mr. Hammond will have to venture forth at all hours of the day in his claw-hammer coat instead of reserving such attire for evening events as he would do here at home. And being somewhat short of stature anyway, this plain American citizen in his unobtrusive costume can scarcely expect to attract as much attention in the big public parades as will the princes of various nationalities who will be present in all the splendor of vivid-hued court costumes, bedecked with jeweled decorations.

Yet another American who will have official standing at the coronation events will be Captain Gove, the naval officer in command of the U. S. S. Delaware, our newest and most powerful battleship. The Delaware, be it explained, is to be sent to England for this special occasion. The huge warship, it may be added, does not go to afford an impressive conveyance for the special ambassador and his suite. On the contrary they will travel on the regular ocean liners, but Great Britain has invited all the nations on the globe to send warships to the coronation marine parades and more especially to a great naval review off the English coast, and it is to enable the stars and stripes to have a creditable color bearer in this history-making spectacle that our latest "dreadnaught" has been ordered to cross the Atlantic.

Uncle Sam's participation in the coronation will have preludes of a social nature in the United States prior to the departure of the special embassy for London. The British ambassador to the United States may be expected to entertain the special ambassador, and probably all the members of the special embassy, at a formal dinner, provided he follows precedent in the matter, as doubtless he will, for Hon. James Bryce, the present British ambassador to the United States, has earned a reputation for doing the right thing at the right time and, moreover, he is strongly in sympathy with everything American. This hospitality will doubtless be returned by Ambassador Hammond, who is well equipped for entertaining, having, in addition to his spacious summer home at Gloucester, Mass., a rented house in Washington which he has leased at a rental of upward of $10,000 a year and where he is residing with his wife and children pending the completion of a mansion specially constructed for him at the national capital.

And speaking of Ambassador Hammond's family it may be noted that Mrs. Hammond is as well qualified for the duties of special ambassadress as is her husband for the post of special ambassador. Prior to her marriage she was a resident of the state of Mississippi, but since she formed a life partnership with the mining engineer she has traveled all over the world—one of her latest jaunts being to St. Petersburg, Russia, whither Mr. Hammond was summoned by the czar only a few months ago for a consultation regarding the development of Russian and Siberian mines. Moreover, Mrs. Hammond has lived for considerable intervals in London during the time that her husband was associated with Cecil Rhodes and the British capitalists who developed South Africa, so that she has had considerable experience to fit her for her duties as a hostess during the gayest social season in the interim of the world's metropolis.

If precedent is followed in the case of the coronation of King George commemorative services will be held in Washington (and in all the world's capitals where Great Britain has embassies and legations) simultaneously with the significant ceremony in London. Such commemorative exercises when under the auspices of British diplomats are always especially impressive, one of the most notable within the memory of official Washington being the memorial service in honor of the late King Edward, which was held in Washington at the same hour that the funeral was held in England. Such services are attended by the president of the United States and the members of his cabinet and by all the members of the diplomatic corps in full uniform. When, as in this case, the services are in honor of a British monarch, they are always held in an Episcopal church, that being the denomination of the Church of England. The scene of such commemorative events in Washington is old St. John's church, the famous "Court Church" or "Church of the Presidents," which is located directly opposite the White House. Unfortunately the general public gets never a peep at such ceremonials because the church is a tiny one, seating only a few hundred persons and virtually every pew in the edifice has to be reserved for the diplomats and public officials who by virtue of their positions are entitled to attend.

Vehicles of the Air

In his comprehensive book on vehicles of the air Victor Loughead, engineer and student of aviation, emphasizes a few points on the relation of the aeroplane to warfare that serve to bring out his notion that the day is not far off when the expenditure of millions for dreadnaught battleships will be unknown.

The engineer believe many things are possible with the aeroplane and compares the aviator dropping destructive shells into the vulnerable works of a modern battleship from his aerial position to bringing down ducks with a little shotgun.

"If one aeroplane at a cost of, say, $500, does not destroy a battleship," says Mr. Loughead, "why, 50 or 100 might do the work. The West Point and Annapolis students may dreamt upon getting guns that would destroy the daring aviator if he flew low enough to make accuracy possible in hitting a battleship, and they may say that if the aeroplane destroyer flies beyond the range of those guns he would not be able to drop a shell where it would do its work.

"They may forget, however, that the funnel of a great battleship offers a wide target, and that a perfect swarm of the little, destructive biplane gnats might be turned loose over a battleship and some one of them might drop the shell in the funnel. You could construct a big fleet of these aeroplanes for less than the cost of one battleship.

"Carry the parallel still further. Suppose a hunter out after ducks with a shotgun were to understand that if he left one of the flock that this one survivor might be able to annihilate him he would not place so much confidence in his shotgun."

Particularly interesting is the relation of navigation to warfare, and the subject obsesses many now that the governments are taking up the experiments along scientific lines. This latest of man's inventions probably will serve first in adding to the terrors and then in laying the grim specter of the centuries.

A very few of the military authorities have pointed out that in the development of the flying machine there is placed, for the first time in history, in the hands of the weak and strong combatants alike, a weapon capable of as effective and unpreventable direction against the kings, congresses, presidents and diplomats who declare war as it is of direction against the fighting men on the faraway battle fronts.

Already more than one great military and naval captain has suffered disquieting visions of what will happen when, maneuvering unopposed and unseen in the obscurity of the night, not merely one or a few, but veritable swarms of light aeroplanes, in 20,000 lots, costing no more than single dreadnaughts, commence trailing asortments of high explosives at the end of 1,000 foot lengths of piano wire over cities and palaces and through fleets and armies.

Many authorities are inclined to disparage the fighting ability of the aeroplane, basing their views on the fact that it has been demonstrated exceedingly difficult to drop bombs with any considerable accuracy from great heights. But from a slow-moving aeroplane flying very low it should be an easy matter to cast generous parcels of picric acid or fulminate of mercury into the 20-foot diameters of a battleship's funnels.

Fancy for a moment the disillusionment to come when in some great conflict of the future a splendid up-to-date battleship fleet of the traditional order, with traditional admiral and traditional tactics, finds itself beset in midseas by a couple of great, unarmored, liner-line hulls, engined to admit of speeds and steaming radii such as will permit them to pursue or run away from any armored craft yet built, and designed with clear and level decks for aeroplane launching.

Conceive them provided with storage room for hundreds of demountable aeroplanes, with fuel, repair facilities and explosives, and with housing for a regiment or two of expert air navigators.

SCALP WAS BADLY AFFECTED

"I am more than gratified by the successful results I obtained by the use of the Cuticura Remedies. For several years my scalp was very badly affected with dandruff and scales. My scalp itched terribly at times and my hair fell out. My coat collar would be actually white with the dandruff that had fallen from my head. My profession being that of a barber, I was particular about having my hair in good condition, and was also in a position to try many lotions, etc., for the scalp. These had little or no effect. I had heard so much about the Cuticura Remedies that I resolved to try them. I shampooed my head with Cuticura Soap twice a week and after drying my head thoroughly, I anointed parts of my scalp with Cuticura Ointment. I was pleased from the outset, and continued to keep up this treatment. To think that only three cakes of Cuticura Soap and one and one-half boxes of Cuticura Ointment rid my head of this annoying trouble made me feel quite contented. I have now got a thick growth of hair and I am never troubled with any dandruff or itching of the scalp. There is no question but that the Cuticura Remedies cured me. I frequently recommend them to my customers, and they think a great deal of them." (Signed) John F. Williams, 307 Norfolk Street, Dorchester, Boston, Mass., July 28, 1910.

Breaking a Hobo's Heart.

Manager Gus Hartz was standing near the opera house box office when one of two panhandlers who had entered the lobby approached him, and holding out an addressed and sealed envelope, begged for the price of a postage stamp.

"It's for me mudder, boss," he snivveled. "You'se wouldn't turn down er guy fer de price er de stamp, would youse?"

"Never," said the manager, deftly grasping the envelope and throwing it through the box office window. "Here, Fred," addressing himself to Treasurer Fred Coan, "stamp this and have it mailed."

The velocity of the proceeding fairly took the panhandler's breath away. Then, backing away to where his partner awaited him, he whispered, "Nothin' doing, bo—the guy's wise."—Cleveland Leader.

Now He Doesn't Believe It.

A Cleveland man was reading some jokes about how the English weren't so slow as they are supposed to be to get a joke. He believed it, too. So he tried his theory on a British guest of his.

"Did you ever hear Mark Twain's joke about how the report of his death had been greatly exaggerated?" he asked.

"No," answered the Englishman eagerly, "but I'll wager it was good. What was it?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"LIBERAL" IMMIGRATION LLWS.

Speakers at the convention of the National Association of Manufacturers now in session in New York have been making fervent remarks in favor of "liberal" immigration laws.

The constant eagerness of big employers of labor. Americans by birth and with a big stake in the country, to keep the doors open to practically unrestricted immigration has provided one of the most pathetic chapters in American history. These men have been so eager to get labor, and to get it as cheaply as possible, that they have been chronically willing to trade the future interests of their country for their own immediate financial profit.

We would have had stricter immigration laws long ago had it not been for lobbies maintained in Washington by big American employers and by steamship companies. These interests blocked advanced immigration legislation for a number of years. Then there came a movement for organization along racial lines in some of the thickly crowded immigration settlements in the Eastern States; today with these organizations ready to strike at any member of Congress who endeavors to push through advanced immigration legislation, and with the old lobbies still in fine working order, the chance for any immediate improvement in immigration does not seem particularly bright.

Just in passing it may be remarked that a congressional committee, after years spent in the study of the immigration question, recently recommended radical restrictive laws. The report of this committee was very full and very conclusive. But today it is decorating some forgotten pigeon hole in the Capitol. It is doubtful if such a report, submitted by such a body, on any other subject would be so utterly disregarded by Congress.

DROUGHT WAS BROKEN TUESDAY

Forest Fire Dangers Eliminated by Copious Fall of Rain.

For several weeks past this section of Maryland and the adjacent sections of West Virginia and Pennsylvania suffered severely from the lack of moisture, but the drought was not so severe as to destroy vegetation. Conditions were relieved Tuesday noon by a heavy shower, followed throughout the latter portion of the day by bountiful falls of rain which effectually quenched forest fires which raged for several days in nearly every section of the county.

From the Cumberland News of yesterday the following relative to conditions in this county lying just west of the Alleganv county line is taken: "Since the destruction of the homes of Silas Platter and Mrs. Hugh Ward on Savage mountain in Garrett county, by forest fires, information has been received that the home, barn and other buildings on the farm of Charles Platter on Negro mountain in the New Germany neighborhood, have been destroyed. Another barn near the Platter farm was also burned. A number of farmers in that section saved their buildings by covering their roofs with coarse salt. Men have been sent from Lonaconing and Frostburg, to assist in fighting the flames."

By the fire which destroyed Mr. Platter's home he lost everything, including the clothing belonging to himself and family, leaving them almost destitute. Friends and neighbors of the family have come to their rescue however, and furnished them with the necessities of life which added to an amount of money collected by Mr. James Wiley, who was in Oakland Tuesday with a subscription paper for the relief of Mr. Platter and which was very generously signed, will tide them over for the time being.

Up to the County Court.

The county court of Tucker county, W. Va., at a special meeting rescinded a former order passed relating to the grantiug or refusing of liquor licenses for the towns voting on the licenses question. The order specified that if a town voted wet or dry the court would be governed accordingly, indicating that it means to act as it pleases on the license question, and it is now the general belief that the court will grant no liquor license in the towns of Thomas and Laneville, the only towns that went wet in the county.

Order of Publication.

George W. Magruder and Harriet Magruder, his wife vs. Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder, Alfred H. Magruder, Carrie Wagner and Mandana Custer.

No. 1730 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain property in Garrett county, in the State of Maryland, which was conveyed to George W. Magruder, Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder, Alfred H. Magruder and Stephen A. Magruder, by The George's Creek Coal & Iron Co., dated February 19, 1903, and recorded in Liber No. 39, folio 350, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, containing 139 acres. Also a piece of land conveyed to the said grantees by William Pearre, Executor of George A. Pearre, by deed dated the 15th day of December, 1906, and recorded in Liber No. 42, folio 500, one of the Land Records of said county, containing 171 acres. Also a piece of land devised to the said grantees by the last will and testament of James Magruder, said will being recorded in Liber B, folio 94, one of the Will Records of Garrett county, containing 100 acres. Also a piece of land which was conveyed to Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder and Stephen A. Magruder, and as the bill claims one fifth of which was held in trust by them for the said George W. Magruder, from William Barnes and wife, by deed dated April 10, 1908, and recorded in Liber No. 58, folio 416, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, containing 217 acres.

The bill states that on or about the 26th day of May, 1908, the said Stephen A. Magruder departed this life, intestate, and left as his heirs at law his four brothers, three sisters, and nieces and nephews, children of his own deceased sisters. That deeds were executed conveying the interest of his three sisters and all his nieces and nephews, in the said 317 acres, to three of his brothers, Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder, except the wife of John Wagner of Hedgesville, W. Va., who did not sign the said deed and has an inchoate right of dowery in her husband's share. That a second deed was executed by his sisters and all of his nieces and nephews conveying their interest in the said property above mentioned to George W. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder; that his two sisters, Mrs. Mandana Custer and the wife of the said John Wagner, refused to execute said deed on their part. The said Mandana Custer being entitled to the one-ninth of one-fifth interest in said first three pieces mentioned in this order of publication, said Carrie Wagner being entitled to the same interest as aforementioned in these pieces also.

That the said Carrie Wagner, the wife of John Wagner, of Hedgesville, W. Va., is a non-resident of this State. The bill among other things prays that the property be sold and divided among the parties entitled to share therein, according to their respective interest therein and have further relief.

It is thereupon this 1st day of May, in the year 1911, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett County in Equity, that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in the said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks, before the 3rd day of June, 1911, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, commanding her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 19th day June next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

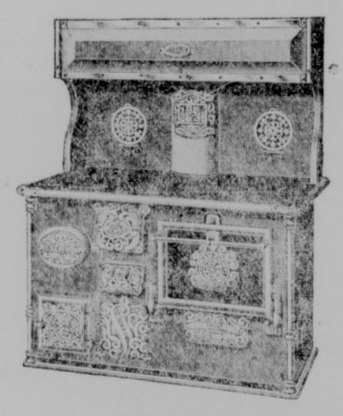
THIS HIGH GRADE STEEL RANGE COSTS YOU NOTHING



as compared with any other range of any make whatsoever, that you might buy.

¶ Any other range; any range you ever saw takes its draft through the front end, next to the fire and right underneath the grate.

¶ This air is about 50 to 70 degrees in temperature. The range must burn enough coal to bring the temperature up to 700 degrees, or baking heat

¶ Notice that - ordinary ranges have to burn enough coal to raise the air from 70 to 700 or 630 degrees.

CHAMPION RANGES

take the draft in at the opposite end, pass it under the bottom before it goes under the grate, and the air picks up enough from the waste heat under the bottom to reach about 250 degrees.

¶ The fire has to burn only enough coal to raise it from 250 to 700—450 degrees, as against 630 in ordinary ranges.

¶ CHAMPION RANGES save about 1-3 in fuel, every day they are used. This will pay the full cost of ther ange in 3 to 5 years, making it cheaper to you than any other.

¶ No experiment; been made and used for 18 years by thousands. Patented; can only be had from our agents. Guaranteed as represented or money back.

Fell and Broke His Thigh.

Last Thursday Nicholas Paugh, a well-known resident of the Frankville section of this county, fell as he was passing along a roadway near Frankville and broke his thigh. For a number of hours he lay in the road where the accident befel him before he could attract the attention of anyone. About five o'clock however, Baltimore and Ohio trackmen passing along the railroad track were attracted by his cries and later in the afternoon he was taken to a hospital in Cumberland where he is receiving treatment. The chances for his recovery are very slight as Mr. Paugh is quite an old man, having passed his seventieth year.

These gentlemen became acquainted 18 years ago, and although they rarely enjoy opportunity to exchange experiences, there is no abatement of the esteem in which they hold each other.—Frostburg Journal.

Mr. N. U. Bond, who recently acquired the D. M. Dixon residence on Oak street, is contemplating extensive improvements on the property. The building will be raised about three feet and a basement built beneath the entire structure. The interior finish will be replaced with polished woodwork throughout and the lawn will be filled in so that it will be on a level with the street.

Another crowd of foreigners, seventeen in number, were arrested last Saturday by Sheriff Shartzer for complicity in the dynamiting of Savage river near Bond Junction a week or two ago. The men were held in jail here until yesterday when their hearing took place in Justice Teats' court. The absence of two of the prosecuting witnesses, who left the county Sunday night, prevented the conviction of the men and they were discharged.

The store of Marx Layman at Jennings, was broken into Monday night and robbed of money amounting to fifteen or twenty dollars which was contained in a slot machine. Bloodhounds from Fairmont were secured by Sheriff Shartzer who accompanied the dogs and their trainer to Jennings where the trail was picked up and led to the bunkhouse of a gang of foreigners, all of whom protested their innocence and as no evidence against any of their number could be found no arrests were made and the officers returned to Oakland Tuesday afternoon.

The Senior Class of the Oakland High School have been entertained at the following homes since the graduation exercises: Miss Marguerite Hart's, Mr. G. A. Whorton's and Miss Veronica Rasche's. G Palmer gave a most delightful treat to the Senior's at Lauer's. After the commencement the Senior boys gave a banquet at Hinebaugh's Restaurant at which everyone had a good appetite. On Wednesday evening of last week they went on a hay ride to Deer Park. Today they are out on a fishing trip. We hope the may return home safe and with a number of fish.

A stage will be erected in the Park surrounding the old auditorium and upon this the play will be presented by the troupe of fifteen players. The program arranged by the committee for the reunion will include vocal and instrumental music, speaking by one of the prominent ministers of the church and a short time devoted to sociableness. The Park management devotes the use of the building and grounds free of charge and has also tendered the services of the Chautauqua band and talent at the meeting, which has been accepted with pleasure by the committee.

GRANTSVILLE.

Tuesday night of last week witnessed the burning of another saw mill near this locality. The entire mill and equipment of Opel's operation on Miller and Bender's tract in New Germany was incinerated. The fire was not discovered until Wednesday morning and it is probable that the blaze started before midnight as a considerable quantity of railroad ties had been reduced to ashes when the alarm was given. Several large stacks of lumber were also burned. Mr. Opel expects to rebuild at once and reports the damage to the boiler and engine is slight. The aggregate loss is about twelve to fifteen hundred dollars, with no insurance.

The establishment of Marx Layman, of Jennings, who is a dispenser of "near beer" and soft drinks, was entered by burglars last Saturday night and a quantity of money stolen. The Fairmont bloodhounds have been put on the trail but as yet no information is available as to whether any arrests have been made.

The drought in this section is assuming serious proportions and unless rain soon falls the various crops will suffer accordingly. Grass is very short and the hay crop will be very light, while the pastures are if possible in a worse condition.

On Monday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Moses D. Yoder, accompanied by Mrs. Yoder's sister, Mrs. Jacob S. Miller, started on a western trip with Arthur, Illinois, as the first stop. After spending several weeks with Mr. D. J. Beachy, who is a brother of Mrs. Yoder and Mrs. Miller, they expect to journey to Johnson county, Iowa, to visit a sister, Mrs. S. D. Guengerick.

POTATO PROFITS IN IDAHO

The modest potato is not sufficiently taken into account as a producer of profit for the man who tills the soil.

We hear about the romance of Wheat, the kingly rule of Corn, the commercial dignity of Oats and Alfalfa, of Barley and Rye, and we count them as sources of great wealth for those who make the earth their servant.

But, granting to the grains and forages the credit that is due, there are wide stretches of land in Idaho producing cash yields from potatoes that make the average grain production of states farther east appear exceedingly small.

And there are so many more acres, of the same kind, that have not yet been given a chance to show what they can do, that the money-making possibilities of Idaho, so far as potatoes alone are concerned, cannot be estimated.

Idaho won national publicity in 1910 as the result of the awarding of prizes of $500 and $250, given by Mr. D. E. Burley of Salt Lake City, Utah, for the best and second best yields of potatoes produced on a single acre of land in territory tributary to the Oregon Short Line, Pacific & Idaho Northern, Idaho Northern, Idaho Southern and Payette Valley railroads.

The Oregon Short Line, together with the affiliated lines mentioned above, traverses the states of Idaho, Utah, Oregon, Washington, Montana and Wyoming, so it will be readily seen that the winning of prizes for which there were competitors from so wide a territory was an accomplishment of great importance to the victorious state and of lasting credit to the successful growers.

The results of this contest, participated in by so many of the most progressive farmers in the prescribed district, were amazing, and the following account of those results, with figures showing what the returns signify in the matter of profits from the land, should prove interesting to everyone concerned in agricultural affairs.

Through Mr. L. A. Snyder, the first prize of $500 was won by Twin Falls county, Idaho, with the "Dalmeny Challenge" variety of potatoes. The second prize of $250 went to Canyon county, Idaho, through Mr. W. B. Gilmore, with the "Peachblow" variety.

On his winning acre of Idaho land Mr. Snyder raised 645 bushels of potatoes, weighing 38,685 pounds. The culls weighed 4,150 pounds, leaving 84 535 pounds of the finest marketable potatoes, or about 575 bushels.

At 70 cents per 100 pounds, or 42 cents per bushel, the price Mr. Snyder received, the one prize acre produced in money, therefore, the sum of $241.74, besides the 4,150 pounds, or almost 70 bushels, in culls, which were available for home use.

Mr. Snyder has given to the Commercial Club of Twin Falls some further facts showing the possibilities of potato raising in his section of the country. He reports that from three acres of land he harvested 895 sacks of potatoes, averaging 110 pounds to the sack. He sold 1,500 bushels at 42 cents per bushel, receiving $630, and he had 75 sacks left for seed.

An average gross profit of $210 per acre, when we consider how much smaller is the average gross profit from an acre of grain, gives the reader a fair idea of what the intensive potato farming opportunities of Idaho really are.

Going a little more extensively into figures, we may safely presume that the average family of, say, five persons consumes about five pounds of potatoes per day. That ought to be a liberal estimate—a pound of potatoes per day for each member of the family, large or small.

The 38,685 pounds of potatoes raised by Mr. Snyder on his prize acre of Idaho land would, therefore, supply the potato needs of more than 22 such families for a year, allowing each family 1,725 pounds, or 28¾ bushels.

It is fair to say that a $30 gross yield from an acre of wheat is a good return. So we see that Mr. Snyder's prize acre of potato land brought forth as much money as would eight acres of wheat land.

If Mr. Snyder were to realize from ten acres of his potato land as well as he did from the three acres which gave him $630, he would have $2,100 at the end of the season, besides more than enough spuds for his own use and for the next season's planting.

There's "real money" in Idaho potatoes.

"The combination that won the Burley prize," says Mr. Snyder, "was the most productive soil in the West, climate unexcelled, plenty of water for irrigation at all times, one of the best varieties of spuds, and a man with some experience and not afraid of work."

His words make clear the advantages and possibilities of the Oregon Short Line country. All of the farmers who entered the contest in which Mr. Snyder carried off first honor came out wonderfully well. Mr. Gilmore harvested 37,476 pounds of "Peachblow" potatoes from the acre that won for him the second prize, and many others were close competitors.

Added encouragement for those who have never tried potato growing as a profit-making business is found in the fact that Mr. Snyder's potato experience began only five years ago.

Up to 1905, when he moved to Idaho, he had lived upon cattle and hay ranches, had engaged in dairy, livery and mining work, but had not had experience as a farmer. He took up potato growing in Idaho because he thought it offered an agreeable and profitable occupation, and he has made the results of each year better than those of the year before.

Speaking a short time ago, Mr. Snyder said: "I have always said that we have the best irrigated country in the United States. Mr. Burley gave us a chance to prove it, and it was as much the opportunity of showing that we could make good, as the money, which induced me to go into this competition."

Notwithstanding his achievement, Mr. Snyder does not believe that his record will stand. He has too great a faith in the potato industry and in Idaho to permit such an opinion. "I do not think we have reached the limit, by a long way," he remarks, confidently, and there are thousands who are familiar with that country who are ready to echo the assertion.

The fact is that large profits from potato raising in Idaho are the rule, not the exception. H. P. Frodsham, a farmer in the American Falls district, commonly takes 500 bushels from an acre, his yield per acre thus being, at 42 cents per bushel, $210.

Someone who knows the conditions in and the possibilities of Idaho has said that "it is a maxim in southern Idaho that the new settler, with little or no capital or implements, but with a willingness to work, can plant potatoes on his irrigated farm the first year and make a good living for his family, besides laying aside money to make all necessary payments on his land."

William B. Kelley, who owns a ranch near Gooding, says: "We get so many potatoes to the acre that we don't stop to count the sacks."

Samuel Lewis, also living near Gooding, reports as follows: "Potatoes grow large and thick. Six potatoes from my field weighed 21 pounds. The crop runs 500 to 600 bushels to the acre, and can aways be depended upon."

The price received by Mr. Snyder for his prize-winning potatoes does not by any means represent the "top" of the Idaho market. Much higher prices have been commanded at various times, yet at the 42-cent rate received by Mr. Snyder his profits were very large.

Scores of instances may be cited to show what the lands of Idaho hold in store for those who will put forth the effort that must precede success.

Those who have succeeded in this one task of potato raising, trace their accomplishments to industry, of course, and to a study of conditions and needs. But they could not have reaped such harvests if industry and determination had not been fortified by ideal conditions of climate and soil.

Such conditions prevail in the agricultural districts of Idaho. There the ground is rich and eager. There the climate is conducive to the outdoor task. There the scheme of irrigation has been so well prepared and is so unfailing in its supply that growing crops have water when they need it.

With water, sunshine and cultivation to bless the crops at proper intervals, the growing of potatoes, or any other agricultural or horticultural industry in Idaho, is as sure of abundant cash returns as any of man's tasks can be.

matter is absorbed, causing diseases and symptoms. To attain perfect health keep your filters right. You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. O. W. Erwin, 308 Third St., Little Falls, Minn., says: "My whole body became bloated and swollen and at night I had to gasp for breath. Kidney secretions were in terrible condition and to bend my back was agony. Life was one constant round of suffering and I really thought death would be a relief. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and today am a well, happy woman."

In Hat Trimming

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

WITH a remarkable vogue in black and white in ribbons and straw shapes the liking for flowers to provide color, follows "as night the day." But flowers are everywhere used, whether the hat is quiet or gay. A group of three models shown here portray what may truthfully be termed the three leading ideal shapes and their popular and tasteful trimming.

In Fig. 1 a French sailor with a decided upward roll to the brim and a low dome crown, is pictured. The shape is in white chip, but any other white braid will give good effects. The bow across the back is of white satin ribbon having a border of black velvet ribbon stitched on one edge. The loops are wired. There are four of them making a wide double Alsatian bow, extending across the back of the hat, mounted against the crown.

Small, full blown garden roses are massed over the crown, concealing it, and a few glossy leaves peep out about the base, outlining the shape and making a good finish.

One of the hats on the helmet order is shown in Fig. 2, made of rough braid in tones of bronze and purple. A bronze velvet faces the brim and is laid in a flat plaited bow at the left. Here a spray of wild flowers in shaded colorings in which dark red, purple and green tints appear. This hat may be designed in almost any color. In amethyst shades, with deep purple facing, and cerise flowers, it is very handsome. It is a good model in all black.

Shapes which flare off the face have captivated many fancies and are apt to lead all others for summer wear. Fig. 3 shows a smooth straw in leghorn color, in which the brim droops about the head but lifts abruptly at the front with a sharp turn upward. Two bouquets of roses and moss joined by a band of black velvet ribbon, which extends about the crown, make this a hat which will harmonize with almost any costume.

This shape is to be had in many colors as well as black and white. It is pretty in black hemp or tagal, and in good black chip will prove serviceable. The color of the roses is a matter of taste, which the wearer may settle to suit herself.

DESIGNED FOR HOME WEAR

Mulberry-Colored Cashmere Would Make Up Well for This Pretty House Dress.

Here is a smart little dress made up in mulberry-colored cashmere. The under skirt is of lining, to which is attached a deep kilting; the tunic is wrapped over at left side and stitched, and is trimmed then with passementerie.

The material of bodice is tucked each side, and is then crossed over a vest of tucked cream ninon; the oversleeves are cut in with the bodice and are trimmed like edge of fronts to match tunic. The tight fitting undersleeves are of tucked ninon.

Material required: Six yards 46 inches wide, six yards lining, one and one-half yard ninon 40 inches wide, three yards trimming.

Linen for Needle Work.

Heavy gray linen is much used for the background for embroideries which are to be employed as house decorations. Bedrooms and living rooms for country houses are furnished in gray in many instances, and the linen is used for bed hangings, cushion covers, tablecloths and window hangings. Ambitious needlewomen are embroidering these articles in quite elaborate designs in several colors. For one bedroom a set of hangings for the bed and window is being made of the gray linen embroidered with designs of wood fairies and fuchsias in tons of violet, green, pale yellow and fuchsias red.

HATBAG FOR THE TRAVELER

Simple and Easy Method That Will Preserve the Much-Prized Headgear.

The season for traveling is once more nearly upon us, and our hats, if not broader, are higher than ever. Of course you may ask the porter for a paper bag to hold your hat on the train. But how often will it fit?

Try, instead, laying the hat on a sheet of stout brown paper, so as to get the correct size. Then make the paper into a large envelope by gathering the two sides in the middle and pasting them down. Slit up the sides about two inches and turn these down to form the closed ends; but before pasting them cut away the inner part of the turned-up ends and snip the corners to give a neat edge.

Do the same with the top of the big, but, of course, do not paste down the flap. Sew to each side of the bag cord or plaited twine handles by which to heid the bag. The whole may be folded and tucked in a corner of your suitcase.

Explosive Neckties.

There are several processes of manufacturing artificial silk which are based on the use of ordinary cellulose, reduced to a plastic condition so that it may be drawn into threads. These are woven into various forms whose chief difference from real silk, to the eye, is that the material is glossier.

All but one of these processes yield a "silk" that is as safe as cotton. The other employs nitro-cellulose, or soluble guncotton, from which the threads are drawn in ether or alcohol. After the thread has been drawn and is ready for weaving it is supposed to be denitrated. If it is, then it is entirely safe. Otherwise it may be exceedingly dangerous, for it then remains nothing less than guncotton spun into a fabric.

Small Girl's Hobble-Skirt.

There is apparently considerable diversity of opinion as regards the correct position for the belt on the small girl's frock. Many of the smartest little French dresses show the sash in practically normal place, while on other frocks the belt is so far down as to hamper the tiny wearer in her walk almost as absurdly as does the hobble-skirt of the moment inconvenience her elders. The abnormally long-waisted effect obtained by placing the belt almost at the hem of the frock is charmingly quaint on some children, but is not becoming to every type.—Harper's Bazar.

The Boy's Outfit.

Severity must mark the outfit for a small boy. In the morning a Russian-blouse suit of natural-colored linen, worn with a wide patent-leather belt, is practical. To complete this dress should be brown boots and stockings. Low shoes and socks are fashionable for all children, leather leggings being worn out-of-doors until the weather is really warm. This fashion should not be kept up after the boy has grown big, any more than he should be forced to keep to his knickerbockers when he is tall enough to wear long trousers.—Harper's Bazar.

Health For Sick Women

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or secured so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Almost every woman you meet has either been benefited by it, or knows some one who has.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing over one million one hundred thousand letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved many women from surgical operations.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made exclusively from roots and herbs, and is perfectly harmless.

The reason why it is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the female organism, restoring it to healthy and normal activity.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials such as the following prove the efficiency of this simple remedy.

Coloma, Wisconsin.—"For three years I was troubled with female weakness, irregularities, backache and bearing down pains. I saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking several bottles I found it was helping me, and I must say that I am perfectly well now and can not thank you enough for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. John Wentland, R. F. D., No. 3, Box 60, Coloma, Wisconsin.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

A READER CURES HIS CONSTIPATION—TRY IT FREE

Simple way for any family to retain the good health of all its members.

The editors of "Health Hints" and "Questions and Answers" have one question that is put to them more often than any other, and which, strangely enough, they find the most difficult to answer. That is "How can I cure my constipation?"

Dr. Caldwell, an eminent specialist in diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels has looked the whole field over, has practised the specialty for forty years and is convinced that the ingredients contained in what is called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the best claim to attention from constipated people.

Its success in the cure of stubborn constipation has done much to displace the use of salts, waters, strong catharties and such things. Syrup Pepsin, by training the stomach and bowel muscles to again do their work naturally, and with its tonic ingredients strengthening the nerves, brings about a lasting cure. Among its strongest supporters are Mr. John Gravelino of 98 Milwaukee Ave., Detroit, Mich., Mr. J. A. Vernon of Oklahoma City and thousands of others. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, or if you want to try it first a free sample bottle can be obtained by writing the doctor.

Prize-Winning English Sire.

(By CAPTAIN WADDELL.)

There are pleasant profits to be made by the man who is seeking a country home and rural pursuits by way of relaxation from business, than the ordinary man of this kind has any idea of.

A country home with land attached to it would be a dull place if there were not something besides the fresh air, scenery, babbling brooks, song birds and flowers to admire and occupy one's mind in a way that combines rest with pleasure.

Of all pursuits that the city business or professional man with a country home and farm can indulge in, nothing is so pleasant and remunerative as that of pedigreed stock breeding. This may comprise horses of the various breeds, cattle, sheep and swine, either of which when taken hold of practically and sensibly will bring much pleasure and a good deal of profit to the man who indulges in it. In the first place, there is a ready market for good pedigreed stock of every kind, and apart from the pleasure of breeding them and seeing them flourish and grow into maturity there is the delightful fascination of exhibiting them at the various horse and live stock shows, competing with friends and neighbors and beating them with animals one has bred himself.

In the case of horses almost all the great stables of this country that have been and still are winning the majority of the blue ribbons throughout the country have imported all these horses from Great Britain, which robs him of much of the pleasure of winning with home-bred animals, this is particularly the case with heavy harness horses, but the same holds good in regard to Shires, Clydesdales, Suffolks, Percherons and Belgians. All the great winners at the great shows throughout this country where these horses are shown are importations from England and Scotland in the first three cases and France and Belgium in the two latter.

As far as polo ponies are concerned it is only necessary to say that nine-tenths of the polo ponies that competed for the American cup at Hurlingham two years ago were English bred and English purchased, which robbed that splendid achievement of much of its glory.

All these animals as well as hunters, hackneys and Shetland and Welsh ponies, which are all in great demand could be bred in this country as successfully as they are in the countries in which their breeds originated, and it remains for the man of wealth with a country home and farm to show Americans how easily this can be done, and so make it as pleasant and profitable as it is in Great Britain.

LICE INFECTED FARM ANIMALS

Insects More Troublesome During Spring When Live Stock Kept Inside Until Warm Weather Arrives.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

Lice seem to be more troublesome during the spring when the farm animals are kept inside until warm weather comes than at any other time during the year and as soon as an animal is discovered to be lousy, the lice should be destroyed at once. We have found a strong decoction of tobacco an excellent wash for the purpose of destroying lice, but during recent years we have been using a mixture of crude oil and crude carbolic acid mixed 50 parts crude oil to one part crude carbolic acid, and find that this does the work in a very thorough and effective manner. On the cattle we appiy it with a hand sprayer, but for the hogs we prefer to use a brush, or to saturate a few gunny sacks or old blankets and wind them around a post in the hog yards and allow the hogs to make their own toilets by rubbing against these posts. They will soon learn how to apply the mixture where it is most needed and will keep themselves free from these posts if their beds and houses are kept clean and disinfected.

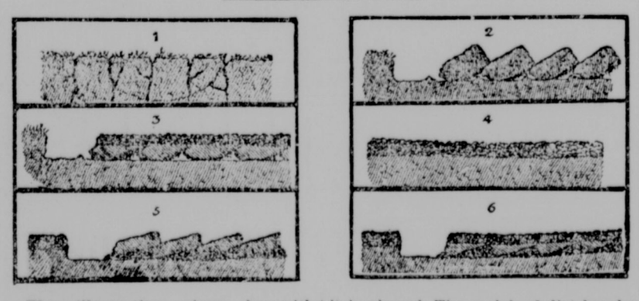
Lamb Is Helpless.

Considerable attention should be given to ewes and young lambs. A new-born lamb is just about the most helpless thing on the farm, and frequently needs a little help to get started in life, but when fairly under way no young stock will give the owner more satisfaction; and it will pay to have patience and do all one can to assist them at first.

Good for Scours.

A half cupful of wheat flour and a raw egg in the milk, if given to a calf with scours, is said to be very beneficial.

GOOD USE FOR DISK HARROW



The illustration given herewith shows the various uses to which the disk may be put in preparing the soil for a crop:

Fig. No. 1 represents hard, cracked-open soil that has not been tilled, showing how clod formation takes place and the depth at which moisture can escape from the ground.

Fig. No. 2 represents ground plowed, showing air space between the turned over slice and the ground beneath. This air space prevents a firm and compact seed bed from being made and stops capillary attraction with the subsoil.

Fig. No. 3 is plowed ground disked. Note that the air spaces still exist. This is what happens when corn stalk ground is plowed without first being disked. Corn stalk roots and other trash prevent the ground from becoming compact and firm.

Fig. No. 4 is ground disked before it is plowed. The mulch of dirt breaks up capillary attraction so that moisture cannot escape from the top of the ground. This permits what moisture there is in the ground to come close to the surface.

Fig. No. 5 is the disked surface shown in Fig. 4 plowed. Disking the ground before it is plowed leaves a mulch of fine dirt which fills up the air spaces left between the furrowed slice and the ground beneath, thus making the foundation for a firm and compact seed bed.

Fig. No. 6 illustrates disking before and after plowing. When the ground is treated in this manner the seed bed becomes compact and firm in a much shorter time and forms a means of capillary attraction. This treatment puts the ground in such condition that whether the season be wet, dry or normal, the farmer is not taking any chances.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

ALCOHOL LEADS TO DISEASE

Most Potent Factor in Propagation of Tuberculosis, Declares Prof. P. Brouardel of Paris.

It has long been known that the use of alcohol induced in man a condition which makes his system liable to disease of various kinds, and also made the cure of disease even more difficult.

At a recent medical congress of tuberculosis in London, a number of declarations were made concerning the effect of alcohol drinking in producing the disease, which were practically ignored by the general press, and received very scant treatment in scientific papers.

At that gathering of medical scientists Prof. P. Brouardel, dean of the Faculty of Medicine of Paris, read a paper on tuberculosis in which he stated that, in some countries, it was "accountable for a sixth, a fifth, and sometimes a fourth of the total mortality from all causes." He further stated that "the public house is the purveyor of tuberculosis," and that "alcoholism is the most potent factor in its propagation."

Tuberculosis is one of the most deadly of all the physical diseases which scour humanity, and we have it on very high authority that most of it is due to drink. It is a startling statement, and ought to have received wide publicity. But anything which would hinder the consumption of alcohol, that "pleasant poison" to which so many are passionately devoted, is carefully concealed.

The following is the salient portion of Professor Brouardel's important declaration:

"In fact, alcoholism is the most potent factor in propagating tuberculosis. The strongest man, who has once taken to drink, is powerless against it. Time is too short for me now to draw comparisons between the laws in force in different countries, those which are proposed, private efforts, associated efforts, and temperance societies. But I car say, that a universal cry of despair rises from the whole universe at the sight of the disaster caused by alcoholism."

"Any measures, state or individual, tending to limit the ravages of alcoholism, will be our most precious auxiliaries in the crusade against tuberculosis, but the question is too large a one to deal with here. Still, I should like to draw attention to a mistake made too easily in the different countries by ministers who have charge of the financial department of the State. They like to calculate the sum the state gets from the duty on alcohol, but they should deduct from it the cost to the community of the family of the ruined drunkard, his degenerates, infirm, scrofulous and epileptic children, who must have shelter.'

"This invasion of alcoholism ought to be regarded by every one as a public danger, and the principle, the truth which is incontestable, should be inculcated into the masses, that the future of the world will be in the hands of temperance."

The dean of the Faculty of Medicine in Paris was not alone in his contention. At the same congress Dr. A. T. Kelynack of Manchester, in the course of a paper on the same subject, said:

"Alcoholism and tuberculosis stand foremost amongst the conditions hampering human progress and limiting man's happiness. Through them the evolution of the race has long been impeded, and, unfortunately, in spite of numerous restraining and restricting efforts, their baneful influence is still accountable for a high degree of mortality and an immense amount of sickness and suffering.

"With two such morbid influences barring human advance, it was but natural that eager minds studying the one should have been compelled to recognize the presence and action of the other."

Drunkenness Among Women.

Among the incurable drunkards of London, that is, among persons charged with the offense of drunkenness who have been convicted more than ten times, 8,900 are women and 4,390 are men. So there are more than twice as many incurable women drunkards in London as there are men. This sounds appalling. It is appalling. Add to this the fact that in the last twenty years the deaths of women from chronic alcoholism—or in plain words, from drink—have increased 145 per cent, and there is all too evident a position of things that may well shock the English people, and cause them to look very seriously into the situation.

Ruined by Liquor.

In a late issue of the Scientific Magazine, published in Leipsic, an article on alcohol states that the Germans in America are largely ruined mentally and physically, by liquor. On the foundation of long experience in the United States the author says that much more beer is consumed by the Germans in America than in the home country, and that this has greatly increased the mortality among them.

Share Responsibility.

"By legalizing this traffic we agree to share with the liquor sellers the responsibilities and evils of his business."—William McKinley.

325,000 IN ONE YEAR

THE IMMIGRATION TO CANADA SURPASSES ALL RECORD.

The returns recently issued by the Canadian Immigration Branch shows that upwards of 325,000 persons arrived in Canada during the past twelve months, declaring their intention of becoming settlers in that country. Of this number about 130,000 were from the United States, the balance being from the British Isles and Northern Europe. It will thus be seen that the sturdy farming element that has gone forward from the United States is being splendidly supplemented by an equally sturdy settlement from across the seas. The lure of Canadian wheat, oats, barley and flax grown on the rich prairie of Western Canada is constantly attracting more and more, and year by year the tide of immigrants to the Western Canada plains increases; there is no ebb to this tide. The Canadian authorities are not surprised at the number from the United States being as large as it is but they did not look for so large an immigration from the old countries. Still, they will not be found unprepared. Reception halls are in readiness at all important points in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, surveyors were at work during the past season opening up new districts on which to place those seeking free homesteads of 160 acres each, railways have been projecting laterals from their main lines, and every provision has been taken to accommodate the newcomer. A recent dispatch from Antwerp reads: "The diversion of European emigration from the United States to Canada is said to be seriously affecting the Atlantic steamship lines. The Red Star today gives up to the America-Canada line two of the best special emigrant steamers afloat, the Gothland and the Samland. These vessels heretofore in the Antwerp-New York service are now to be operated from Rotterdam to Canadian ports."

On the date of the above dispatch word came to the Immigration branch that the "Vanguard of the 1911 army of United States settlers reached Winnipeg at 1:30 o'clock this morning. There was a solid train load of effects, comprising 41 carloads and two colonist sleepers attached to the train, which contained the members of 25 families. Every man Jack in the party is a skilled farmer, and all have come north prepared to go right on the land, which was purchased last year. They are equipped with everything that experience has shown is necessary to make a start on virgin prairie. In addition to machinery and household effects there were a large number of horses and cattle. Some of the farmers had also brought along gas tractors, which will be put right to work on ground breaking."

One of the agents of the Canadian government advises that it would appear as if each month of the present year would show a large increase over the past year. The demand for the literature of the department, describing the country and its resources, is greater than it ever has been.

Next!

There were a couple of dandy fish liars in the Colonial lobby. We didn't have time to get their names, addresses and photographs, but we lingered long enough to hear the conversation. The poignant part thereof was as follows:

"How much did your fish weigh?"

"I didn't have no hay scales with me, you mut. But when I pulled him out it lowered the lake four inches."

"Some fish," commented the other, without the quiver of an eyelash. "Reminds me of some good sport I had duck hunting last fall. I fired at a flock of ducks and gathered up four quarts of toes."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MEMORIAL DAY WAS FITTINGLY OBSERVED

Few Old Soldiers Remain to March In the Annual Parade.

Excellent weather, inspiring music by the Mountain City Band, a refreshing breeze and a splendid outpouring of the residents of Oakland and the surrounding country, went a long way Tuesday toward making the celebration of Decoration Day in Oakland a marked success.

There was a marked absence of disorder upon the streets and as a consequence nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the day.

At the hour of 10.30 o'clock the parade for the cemetery was formed in front of Sturgiss' Pharmacy, led by the Mountain City Band. The band was followed by fourteen survivors of the conflict, among them being one ex-Confederate, Mr. C. M. Miller, of Swanton, who assisted in decorating the graves of his one-time enemies. The soldiers were in turn followed by more than half a hundred school children, all of whom carried large bouquets of flowers and ferns. The local lodge Knights of Pythias brought up the rear.

At the cemetery the usual ritualistic services of both the G. A. R. and the K. of P. were carried out in full. At the cemetery after the decoration of the graves had been made, Capt. Jarboe read a paper which he had prepared and which we had intended to publish this week but which has been crowded out at the last minute by the press of other matter. Rev. Dr. Ward made a few remarks after Capt. Jarboe had finished and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. E. Manges and the return march was made into town.

Business was almost entirely suspended during the day.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Cottages are being rented for the season at a rapid rate. Since our last report the Elberon, the Knappenburger, the U. A. Clayton and possibly other cottages have been taken.

Mrs. Geo. Swartzwell and Misses Kate and T. Brown, of Washington, D. C. spent Sunday last with Mrs. Captain Pierce.

Mr. A. R. Sperry, of Harpers Ferry, spent Sunday here with his family.

Ground was broken Tuesday for the new postoffice building.

Mrs. S. E. Flowers, of Baltimore, is the guest of Mrs. J. A. Enlow.

Mrs. S. L. Allen, of Baltimore, came to the Park Saturday, returning to Baltimore Tuesday night. She has leased Allenhurst to a lady who will take lodgers during the summer.

The Epworth League excursion to Boiling Spring Tuesday afternoon was participated in by about seventy-five Leaguers and others, who were conveyed to that delightful spot by two large hay wagons and other vehicles. A bountiful lunch was spread in the evening of which all partook heartily except Albert White—who said he hadn't seen so much good eatin's for a long time, and were it not for a case of dyspepsia he would have enjoyed the lunch immensely. The party returned home before dark.

Preaching in the M. E. church Sunday at 11.00 a. m. and 8.00 p. m.

The opening of the residence season, which takes place this week, June 1st, is a quiet affair, and attended with no other formality than the starting of the electric light plant and the running of the ice wagon Electrician Hayden has been at work for the last month, and while encountering most exasperating delays as the result of tardy transportation and accidents to the unused machinery, which have necessitated repairs, seems to have put everything in first class working order. Two trial runs have been made for the benefit of residences and the street service. The imperfections disclosed have been remedied as far as possible, and it is confidently expected that electrical service this year will be better than for several years.

The Board of Directors have undertaken the putting of grounds and building in first class repair. The Old Auditorium has been almost entirely rebuilt, concrete bases have been given to each supporting post, the floor entirely relaid, roof repaired, and a strong woven wire barrier placed at a distance of thirty feet around the entire building, so that uninterested promenaders may be kept at a proper distance from those who wish to take part in the exercises, and also that the Auditorium may be more conveniently used for pay entertainments. The rustic entrances and other building have been in the hands of Mr. Adam Long, of the Police force. New coats of paint have freshened up the Hall of Philosophy until it looks like new, and the relaying of the floors in the Amphitheatre recitation rooms puts the Summer School in first class order.

The lake, it is hoped, will be more attractive this year. The launch and row boats are being compietely renovated and put in first class condition; the landings rebuilt, and the launch house restored to perpendicular. But the main change is the developing of the island into what it is hoped will be quite a resort feature. A rustic foot bridge extends from the mainland to the west side of the island, and a Bungalow Bath House has been erected on the southeast "corner." A floor in the shallow part of the lake with appropriate stairs and platform of approach, giving ample opportunties for the uninitiated to be inducted into the swimming art, while two spring boards over the main channel provides for the daring and diving experts. A pergola on the highest part of the island will give shelter to those who on our hot days want to enjoy the cool breezes that blow here as no where else in the "Park." The H. Weber & Sons Co. have consented to take on them the landscape gardening. The beds have been laid out by Mr. Will McRobie, and under his supervision the Webers will make the island a bower of beauty before the summer crowds appear.

Mr. Lipscombe has been working for two months upon the golf links under the direction of a Committee of the Woman's Civic Club, assisted by Mr. Dunnington, and it is hoped that in a few weeks the grounds may be in condition for satisfactory playing. Before the busy portion of the season opens in July and August it is hoped that the bowling alley, tennis courts, as well as all the attractions supplied by nature, will be all in working order, that our guests may be properly entertained outdoors as well as in.

The concession of the refreshment stand this year has gone to Mr. W. H. Mallette, and he is planning to accommodate the public in a better and bigger way than every before.

The thanks of the Association are due to the Morrison Music Co., of Cumberland for their courtesy in furnishing pianos for the public work and the instruction by the teachers of the Summer School of Music. They have engaged to furnish us the best new pianos so that our performers will have occasion to be grateful, as well as those of the audience.

President William Howard Taft has, in his usual gracious way, consented to open the formal Convention season on Sunday morning, June 25th, at 10:30 with a talk on "The Work of the Christian Churches in the Philippines." We are certain that this will be the great day of the year, as the coming of the President of the United States is an event in itself, and when that President comes to speak upon a subject with which he has such intimate knowledge, and that is in thorough accord with our work, it ought to be the gala day of the summer. We are assured that special week-end rates will be offered by the Railway Companies, on sale Friday and Saturday, and good returning Monday. That will enable those who cannot come for Camp Meeting, or later conventions, to have a few days delightful visit at the Park and enjoy the great event with those who live close at hand. A most attractive musical program will be a feature of the day and it is hoped that one of the Bishops of the Methodist church or some one of the great divines of our sister churches, may be present and preside.

All arrangements are complete for the usual summer conventions. The Camp Meeting is being exploited as never before by Mr. Tushingham of Pittsburg, Pa., who has been called to that work by Brother Joseph Smith. The Good Roads and Missionary conventions, Home and Foreign, have exceptionally strong programs, and the Christian Workers' and Bible Conference will keep up the reputation made for this section of the summer by Dr. Ostrom and his force last year. The plans for this latter feature have been modified somewhat by the undertaking of systematic schools of Sunday School Methods, practical evangelistic plans and Bible study. Such names as Ex-Gov. Buchtel, of Colorado; Dr. C. L. Goodsell, of New York City; Dr. Thomas Nicholson, of the Methodist Board of Education; Bishop J. M. Thoburn; Senator Wellington; Secretary Arnold of the West Virginia State Sunday School Association; Auditor Andrews of the Treasury Department, and Dr. Riker, of Moundsville, and a dozen others are a guaranty of a most profitable session.

The Chautauqua program is one of the strongest in entertainment features that Dr. Davidson has given us for years. Such men as Gov. Glennand Jehu DeWitt Miller make up his lecture attractions. Orchestras, Glee Clubs and Concert Companies of various sorts, Sprague and wife in "Rip Van Winkle" and "Esmerelda," Walden the magician, and Moving Pictures would seem to take care of the purely entertainment features. But this year he has even excelled himself in this line by bringing to us "Conner's Outdoor Players" for two Shakespearean productions. The Baltimore and Ohio railway is helping with special rates for everything, and there is every promise of a season of delight.

The Summer Schools bid fair to bring many people to us for the whole season. The established departments of Kindergarten and Primary, Photography, china painting and water color, are in the same hands, and will without doubt be as efficient as ever. The Summer School of Music, under Dean McCutchon of De Pauw University, will bring to us the best talent, both for instruction and entertainment, the country affords. The School of Oratory and Public Speaking will be in the hands of Miss Hobbs of Boston, one of the most accomplished impersonators and teachers of the country. The College, High School and Normal School work will be presented by the faculty brought from the best Universities and Colleges from Denver to Baltimore.

The correspondence is very heavy, and the daily arrival of summer guests has changed the "Park" from a deserted village to a forest city.

Shortage of Water on the B. & O.

The B. & O. is running short of water in many places for the operation of engines. Two water trains were put on the road last week to haul water from Grafton to Rowlesburg. The Cheat river, it seems, has become so polluted with mine water and other substances that in its present low stage the water is unfit for use in boilers, and the water necessary for that point must be hauled until rains relieve the situation. During the drought of last summer and autumn the railway company had much difficulty in obtaining supplies of water on nearly all divisions, but particularly and for a great period of time in regions west of Oakland. The railroad made an effort to provide against this trouble last winter by constructing a dam near Newburg. The dam was constructed so as to hold water on a space of ground of about ten acres. But the dam was a failure. It was not not properly constructed and when the basin was partly filled with water in the spring the retaining wall of the dam gave way and the water went out. This occurred too late to rebuild in time to catch the spring rains and the entire work availed nothing. The result is the railway has the same difficulty facing it now that it has been troubled with in the past.

No Partnership.

Mr. A. D. Naylor and Mr. Lee Hoffman are not going to form partnership in the automobile business, as was contemplated in the spring, but Mr. Hoffman is going to take charge of the new garage which will be ready for operation in about 10 days. A. D NAYLOR.

Bought 20,000,000 Feet Tract.

The Kingwood Lumber Company of West Virginia has secured the title to 2,500 acres of timber land near Parsons, W. Va., paying $75,000 for same. The entire tract is covered with virgin timber and it is estimated it will cut 20,000,000 feet. The tract fronts on the Western Maryland railway and the new owners will move their mill equipment from their operation which will be abandoned at Cadell, W. Va., near the Garrett county line. A standard gauge road will be built into the tract from Parsons. The Kingwood Lumber Company, in addition to their new purchase, hold options on 3,000 acres of fine timber land on the Big Sand river in West Virginia.

An American girl is said to have paid $25,000 for a handkerchief in Paris the other day. She must be getting ready for the hay fever season.

It is estimated that Americans will pay $5,000,000 for seats from which to view the coronation pageant. England certainly is getting a rich revenge for 1776.

The author of a book entitled "How to Be Happy" recently tried to poison himself because he thinks his life has been a failure. Evidently his book was one also.

The sensible masculine view would be that there is no objection to women putting on the divided skirt so long as they do not try to make the men wear the discarded petticoat.

The "pasha" skirt is the latest. You can make one by sewing two flour sacks together down to a little below the middle and punching holes through the bottoms. Try it. We haven't time.

At a dance given in New York the host wore a live snake wound around him. Opinion as to the inadvisability of this sort of decoration was probably freely given by the guests on sober thought.

Sixty-seven vessels arrive in Chicago daily during the navigation season. This does not include the gasoline launch that comes in at the end of a towline after having gone dead four miles out.

Velvet trouser cuffs will be the rage this summer, according to a report from New York. If the style ever is adopted it will behoove mere man to maintain a deep silence on the subject of the harem skirt.

The latest fad taken up by Washington society girls is learning how to cook. And how with eager and admiring commendation will that fad be met by the self-constituted critics of much-abused femininity!

Bugs are asserted to have damaged the peach crop to the extent of $8,000,000. If bugs and frosts did not keep the peach crop down the produce combinations would be dumping the fruit into the river next summer.

Now arises a historian to say that Columbus was an impostor. It has already been denied that Queen Isabella pawned her jewels, and it may be that in future generations George Washington will be proclaimed a myth.

A French aviator flew 208 miles in 132 minutes. When one can fly at more than 80 miles an hour, and carry 12 persons safely, the possibilities of human flight in heavier-than-air machines become simply unlimited.

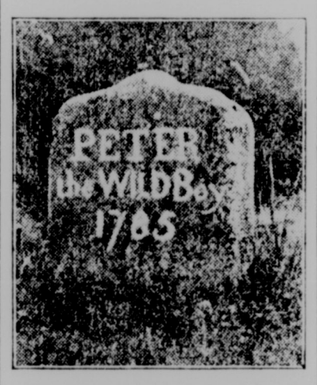
MARVELS of THE EARTH

CURIOUS, ODD AND INTERESTING OBJECTS AND PLACES

Spearing the Hippopotamus

The natives of Africa have various ways of killing the hippopotamus—the "river horse." On occasion, they will attack it with harpoons, to which are attached lines ending in floats. The wounded beast, its position marked by these floats, will then be followed up in canoes, and finally speared to death. At other times they will arrange great pitfalls; at others, some device as that here illustrated. This particular method calls for the use of a strong spear-head fixed in a heavy block of wood, which is hung from a line passed over a branch of a tree in the animal's path. The cord by which the spear is suspended is made to run across the path, a few inches above the ground, and is so arranged that when the beast stumbles against it the spear and wood shall be released, to fall and strike it. Well knowing that their quarry, though badly wounded, may yet take to the water and escape, the natives attach to the wood holding the spear a long line which ends in a float; thus the great beast can always be located, whether it be alive or dead.

GRAVE OF REAL PETER PAN



The gift to London by Mr. Barrie of a statue of Peter Pan has served to recall the fact that such a character as he imagined really lived in the flesh at Northchurch, England, where his tombstone is still to be seen. Peter the Wild Boy (1712-85) was found in 1725 in the woods near Hamelin, about 25 miles from Hanover. In the words of contemporary pamphleteers he was observed "walking on his hands and feet, climbing trees like a squirrel, and feeding on grass and moss." In November, 1725, he was deposited in the house of correction at Zell, and in the same month he was presented to George I., who happened to be on a visit to Hanover. The king's interest and curiosity were excited, but the wild boy was not favorably impressed and escaped to his wood and took refuge in a lofty tree, which had to be cut down before he was recaptured. In the spring of 1726 by the king's command he was brought to England and "exhibited to the nobility." The boy, who appeared to be about fourteen years old, was baptized and committed to the care of Dr. Arbuthnot, but he soon proved to be an imbecile and could not be taught to articulate more than a few monosyllables. He became a strong, muscular man, but his intellect always remained dormant.

NEW HAT BURNS ON HER HEAD

Sparks from a passing locomotive lodged in the trimmings of the new hat worn by Mrs. D. H. Burke of Central City, Neb., and destroyed it while she was driving. Mrs. Burke was informed of her danger when the hat was in flames by her daughter, who screamed.

COSTUME OF FISH SKINS.

Among the most wonderful garments worn at the present day are the curious fish-skin dresses of wealthy women of the Gold tribe, living along the Amur river, East Siberia. Though they can neither read nor write these people are producing astonishing ornaments, designs and embroidery work.

The dress is composed of several layers of fish skin, the undermost representing the skin of the garment proper, the uppermost showing the ornaments in their cut-out forms. Between these two layers is inserted a middle layer, which serves as a background, throwing out distinctly all parts of the ornaments. The pieces of fish skin forming the ornaments are generally colored blue. The front and back of the dress is adorned with these cut-out pieces of fish skin sewed with fish skin thread.

TWO HAIRDRESSINGS YEARLY

In Abyssinia the dressing of a young woman's hair is effected in the following manner: The girl seats herself upon the ground; another woman, armed with a wooden comb, squats before her. With this weapon she attacks the knots, pulling and tugging at them until they are straightened out in some light degree. Then a portion of the hair is caught up at the nape of the neck; the remainder is permitted to remain loose upon the shoulders. This coiffure is supposed to remain in order for some time, as the process is repeated only once or twice a year.

PAY COMPENSATION CLAIM.

In Edinburgh, Scotland, a wagon driver was lighting his clay pipe when it fell. He lost his balance trying to recover it, fell under the wheels and was killed. The sheriff substitute refused the widow's claim for compensation, holding the driver lost his life in "pursuit of his own purposes." The widow appealed and the lord president has awarded her damages, saying: "The workman may reasonably smoke a pipe, and he may reasonably drop it, and, having dropped it, he may reasonably pick it up in the course of his employment."

HOLDING UP A FUNERAL.

An extraordinary incident occurred during the course of a funeral at Brooklyn, N. Y., the other day. The procession had proceeded some way and was about a quarter of a mile from the cemetery, when officers of the S. P. C. A. suddenly stopped the cavalcade, unhitched the horses from the hearse, and one of the coaches, and arrested three drivers, declaring that the horses were in no fit condition to work. The mourners and pall-bearers had to leave their carriage and draw the hearse to the cemetery.

HYBRID SWAN AND GOOSE

Unique among hybrids is the fowl that has been reared by a Mrs. Reynolds of Beeston Regis, Sheringham, England. It is a cross between a swan and a goose and is proving of great interest to ornithologists. The father of the bird was a swan. The name "swoose" has been suggested for the curious hybrid.

"Prehistoric Mud Pies"

The objects here pictured are some what imaginatively called "prehistoric mud pies" by Milo Leon Norton, who photographed them. They are generally known as clay stones but of technically, to brick-makers, as "clay-dogs" and are about as much appreciated by the brick-maker as are daisies by the farmer. Unless they are taken out of the clay they render it unfit for brick-making purposes. Science tells us they are concretions consisting of particles of clay and sand cemented together by carbonate of lime. Some of the stones are as accurately turned and grooved as could be done in a lathe. They vary in size from a half inch to three inches in diameter.

Temperance

EVILS OF SOCIAL DRINKING

English Statesman Says Greatest Difficulty Is to Entertain Publicly Without Liquor.

Sir James Haslett, member of parliament for Belfast, speaking at a meeting held in London presided over by the Archbishop Canterbury, gave the following important testimony which we commend to the statesmen and public men of the United States:

"My lord bishop, it is with very great pleasure that I rise to propose that the best thanks of this meeting be given to you for presiding on this occasion. I think you are the right man in the right place. The church must lead if we are to have a healthy influence in society. As a stranger amongst you, I have had very great pleasure in hearing all that has been said in regard to total abstinence. I may say that I drank it in from my mother's breast—I have never tasted drink, and, what possibly is not an easy matter, have never offered it to others. The greatest difficulty we have is in the social intercourse of life—to entertain publicly, as a public man, without drinking. So strong are social habits that you have raised against you all the weapons that satire and evil communication can possibly find. You are called 'mean,' and 'niggardly,' and a hundred other things. I think, my lord, that the change must come from the women. They must act as a lever in this matter, though I do not know very well how they are to do it. It was one of my duties, as the mayor of Belfast, to entertain the representatives of royalty, and it was a difficulty with me how I could do it without drink. Unfortunately, the lord lieutenant dropped upon me just the week after I was appointed. That difficulty was greater, I think, than I might have been able to withstand; but I had then my wife with me, and she said: 'Well, you had better resign your office.' We carried it through as best we could. I trust that the recollection of that may still brighten her life in the other world. But it is the difficulty of social life that you must seek to unravel. You cannot do it by legislation. I am bound to say that when I waited upon the lord lieutenant and told him about my difficulty, he said: 'My dear fellow, I would only spit upon you if you sacrificed your principles.' Lord Londonderry was too much of a gentleman to seek that I should in any way lower myself, and I felt, as an old Sabbath school teacher, working amongst the young, and addressing meetings all my life, that if I had then put drink on the table I would have sacrificed all that I had ever done. My lord bishop, it is not an easy thing to act thus. I have passed through a recent election and my bitterest enemies were those who sold drink. It has been said in Ireland that the readiest way to a man's intelligence is through his stomach. It is wonderful how kindly we are disposed after we get our dinner. It has unquestionably an immense influence; and there is a large class in our country of whom it may be said that the readiest way to their intelligence is through a glass of beer or spirits. You have that to fight against. During my recent contest, and during a contest ten years ago, I never had at the election committee meetings one drop of strong drink. If we cannot carry an election without it, then, in God's name let us surrender."—National Temperance Advocate.

Serious Form of Intoxication.

Evidence has come to light showing that a very serious form of intoxication is indulged in by many boys in Philadelphia, which is produced by inhaling gasoline fumes. The boys, who belong to the poorer classes, have possessed themselves in various ways of the gasoline, sometimes obtaining it from tank cars and at other times from lamp posts, and then have induced a condition physical and mental which makes them for the time being practically crazy. Physicians are looking into the matter, and the police are endeavoring to break up the gangs who practice this pernicious habit. The physical effects of such indulgence are very serious, in some cases proving fatal.

No Place for Young Man.

Champ Clark, speaker of the national house of representatives, in speaking of the evils of the saloon, said:

"The saloon is no place for a young man is ambitious to lead a clean, successful life. If he wishes to excel in crime, rob his mental and physical powers, consort with thugs, blacklegs, prostitutes and thieves, be a disgrace to his family and a stench to his own nostrils, why, I'd advise him to frequent saloons."

Lectures In Sweden.

The temperance organizations of Sweden made provision for a course of scientific temperance lectures in several cities last winter, and in no other country in the world could such lectures have drawn such large audiences.

Liquor Traffic Fortified.

The liquor traffic fortifies itself by means of revenues to the government. The United States collects $178,000,000 a year from the trade, Great Britain $163,000,000; France, $100,000,000, and Russia $358,000,000.

THE BEST WAY.

He doesn't care for money,
But his purse is far from slim;
It's big enough, they say, to make
His money care for him.

KIDNEY CHILLS AND BACKACHE.

If, when you get wet or take cold, it "settles on the kidneys" and there is a shivery, chilly sensation in the back, it shows kidney weakness which is often the beginning of serious disease. Doan's Kidney Pills should be used persistently until the backache and other symptoms disappear.

C. D. Kessler, 408 E. 5th St., Mendota, Ill., says: "Kidney trouble came on me about 20 years ago and became so bad I was unable to work for weeks. I was thin, worn out and nervous; the doctors admitted they could not help me and my friends expected me to die. As a last hope I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and shortly after passed a gravel stone. Later on several more stones passed and from then on I improved until cured."

Some Antique Mugs.

The college collector of antiques stopped off at Bacon Ridge.

"Good day, sir," he said, addressing the postmaster. "I am collecting old-fashioned articles and would like to know if I could find anything like that in this hamlet. Say antique mugs, for instance."

Uncle Jason stroked his chin whiskers.

"Antique mugs! By hek, I know the very place where thar be two of them now."

"You do? Here's a good cigar. Now where can I find these antique mugs?"

"Why, down on Main street in Hiram Sprucoby's shop. Granded Wheatley and Pap Simmons are in there getting shaved, and by hek, when it comes to antique mugs, I reckon thars' be the oldest in the country, stranger."

A Strange Situation.

"Humor is a funny thing," said Binks.

"It ought to be," said the Philosopher.

"Oh, I don't mean that way," said Binks. "I mean that it is a strange thing. Now, I can't speak French, but I can always understand a French joke, and I can speak English, but I'm blest if I can see an English joke."

"Most people are," said the Philosopher.

"Are what?" said Binks.

"Blest if they can see an English joke," said the Philoscpher. "It is a sign of an unusually keen vision."—Harper's Weekly.

FEED YOUNG GIRLS
Must Have Right Food While Growing.

Great care should be taken at the critical period when the young girl is just merging into womanhood that the diet shall contain that which is upbuilding and nothing harmful.

At that age the structure is being formed and if formed of a healthy, sturdy character, health and happiness will follow; on the other hand unhealthy cells may be built in and a sick condition slowly supervene which, if not checked, may ripen into a chronic condition and cause life-long suffering.

A young lady says:

"Coffee began to have such an effect on my stomach a few years ago that I finally quit using it. It brought on headaches, pains in my muscles, and nervousness.

"I tried to use tea in its stead, but found its effects even worse than those I suffered from coffee. Then for a long time I drank milk at my meals, but at last it palled on me. A friend came to the rescue with the suggestion that I try Postum.

"I did so, only to find at first, that I didn't fancy it. But I had heard of so many persons who had been benefited by its use that I persevered, and when I had it made right—according to directions on the package—I found it grateful in flavour and soothing and strengthening to my stomach. I can find no words to express my feeling of what I owe to Postum!

"In every respect it has worked a wonderful improvement—the headaches, nervousness, the pains in my side and back, all the distressing symptoms yielded to the magic power of Postum. My brain seems also to share in the betterment of my physical condition; it seems keener, more alert and brighter. I am, in short, in better health now than for a long while before, and I am sure I owe it to the use of your Postum." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

For Little Misses

BY JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

NO prettier millinery can be found for the little miss than is pictured here. Children's hats are more elaborate than for many seasons, but the choice of materials saves them from losing their childishness. Simple laces, light and transparent straws, small flowers and soft lightweight ribbons, with high luster, take away every suggestion of grown-up styles and leave us and the little ladies equally delighted with the season's offerings.

The first hat shown is the familiar corday model with puffed crown of lacy braid and brim facing of the same. The upper brim is covered with two rows of side plaited chiffon or mull edged with lace. A collar of ribbon is finished with a rosette at the side, made of two ruffles of the ribbon. Small rose buds and foliage finish the trimming. Children from six to sixteen years can wear a design of this kind.

The odd little hat in Fig. 2 is designed for a little youthful wearer. It is made on a wire frame of a lacy silk braid. The side crown is made of ribbon shirred at each edge on a wire. The brim is finished with the braid laid in boxplaits. A childish wreath of small daisies and forget-me-nots, with bows of ribbon at each side, trim the hat. A single tie (which may be omitted) falls from the left side and is fastened to the shoulder with a little collar pin under a pray of flowers.

DAINTY SCARFS FOR SUMMER

Of All Kinds and Descriptions, and Generally More Elaborate Than Ever.

Marabout and ostrich scarfs are more elaborate than ever.

There is no end to the possibilities that lie within the fluffiness of the feathers, combined with folds or shirrings of chiffon.

An edging of black and white marabout completes a bit of feminine daintiness that would add charm to any costume.

A fancy bow of cerise velvet combined with chiffon in the same shade has long ends that would be especially effective on a white frock.

The most popular scarfs have bodies of shirred chiffon with edgings of marabout that either match or are in striking contrast.

They are so simple in design that any woman can passably clever with the needle can fashion one in an afternoon.

A muff to match is a smart acquisition and the set looks well with an evening coat or for theater wear.

MADE UP IN DARK BLUE

LATEST IDEAS IN HOSIERY

Smartly Dressed Girls Have Returned to the "Clock"—Silk Stockings Always the Proper Thing.

"Clocked" hosiery, such as was worn years ago, has become the newest fad for smartly dressed girls. All the stockings for day wear show this embroidery up the side, sometimes in self-colors, but more often in one contrasting. Red or white on black is beyond doubt the best.

This form of decoration has already displaced openwork for the carefully dressed woman. It has finally been decided that lacy effects are not good for the street, but that they should be reserved for the house and evening wear. Therefore, elaborate as is the hosiery for dress use, it is very plain for street wear.

Severity in out of doors dress has led to adopting an entirely different quality of hosiery for that time. Girls who can afford to, wear silk stockings always, but they have now at least three different qualities. When walking, the thin transparent, though plain, kind is given up.

This is now reserved for the house in the morning, or when paying visits in a motor in the afternoon.

A New Silk.

Among the newest and elegant silken fabrics which the season has called into prominence is satin feutre, a very lustrous weave, heavy of weave, beautiful of finish, but soft and graceful despite its heaviness.

It is quite wide, as are the finer silks, and is to be had in plain colors in the new and fashionable tones, as well as striped effects—the ground one shade and tiny hair line of contrasting color crossing it. The stripes are single and not too far apart to be unduly conspicuous.

For elegant afternoon or more simple street dresses satin feutre is very effective and will make very striking toilettes.

Hint for Traveler.

One girl, who is something of a traveler, has for her trunk a large sheet of blue muslin. This is put in the bottom of the trunk before the packing is started. When everything is in it is folded over the top of the clothes and firmly pinned with safety pins. With this precaution the girl is sure to find her garments as smooth at the end of a trip as at the start.

Making Over Hemstitched Linen.

Having a luncheloth and several traycloths that were beginning to break at the hemstitching, I found that by sewing a piece of lace or fancy open finishing braid over the hemstitching I could make them last much longer, and also look as well as new.—Harper's Bazar.

Effective With Gold.

Gloves of the natural yellow doe skin will be found effective with a costume which has gilt buttons or other decorations of the most precious metals.

The KITCHEN CABINET

IN THE way of comfort to the weak, I will go and eat. I will eat exceedingly and prophesy; there may be a good use made of it, too, now I think on't.

HOW TO SERVE SWEETBREADS.

Sweetbreads spoil very quickly, so they should be removed at once from the paper as soon as they come from the market. Plunge into cold water and allow to stand one hour. Then they are put to cook in boiling water, to which has been added a teaspoonful of vinegar to blanch them. After twenty minutes of simmering drain and plunge into cold water, that they may be kept firm. Now remove all the tough membranes and break up into desirable pieces. They may now be served in a white sauce on toast or in patty shells or ramekins.

Sweetbreads and Bacon.—Parboil a sweetbread, cut in small pieces, dip in flour, egg and crumbs and arrange alternately with pieces of bacon on small skewers, having four pieces of sweetbread and three of bacon on each skewer. Fry in deep fat, and drain. Arrange in a circle around a mound of green peas.

Sweebread Cutlets With Asparagus Tips.—Parboil a sweetbread, split and cut in small cutlet shaped pieces; sprinkle with salt and pepper. Dip in crumbs, egg and crumbs and saute in butter. Arrange in a circle around creamed asparagus tips.

Fried Sweetbreads.—Prepare the sweetbreads, lard with narrow strips of fat salt pork and cook in a buttered frying pan until the pork is crisp and brown. Serve with tomato sauce.

To Broil Sweetbreads. — Parboil drain and dry, rub with butter, sprinkle with salt and pepper and boil over a clear fire. Serve with melted butter.

Epigrams of Sweetbreads.—Parboil, drain and place in a small mold a sweetbread, cover and put under a weight. Cut in half-inch slices and spread with the following mixture: Fry one-third of a teaspoonful of chopped shallot in one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter three minutes, add three tablespoonfuls of chopped mushrooms and cook three minutes. Add two and a half tablespoonfuls of flour, half a cup of stock, three tablespoonfuls of cream, one egg yolk and seasoning. Dip in egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat.

KNOWLEDGE is proud that he has learned so much; Wisdom is humble, that he knows no more. —Cowper.

SOME EVERY DAY LUNCHEONS.

For a main dish for luncheon or supper, a chowder or cream soup is always acceptable. One may make a chowder of potatoes and fish or corn. The soups may be bean, potato or vegetable, with which milk combines well. Sweet omelets are great favorites as a light dessert. Spread jelly over the omelet before putting it into the oven. Warm the jelly by letting it stand in hot water for a half hour.

For a salad, here is a simple one:

Italian Salad.—Take six boiled potatoes, cut in dice, six flaked sardines, three small cucumber pickles cut fine and a stalk of celery cut in small bits. Serve with Franch dressing.

Bordeaux Pudding.—This is a pudding that not only looks good, but it tastes good:

Cut a sponge cake into three layers and put together with jam, cover with whipped cream sweetened and flavored and sprinkle with chopped nuts. Serve on a chop plate.

Beef Olives.—Take slices of rare roast beef and roll each around a thin slice of bacon which has been fried long enough to be transparent, but not crisp. Bind with twine and boil for five minutes; drain and remove the strings. Add the bacon fat to some of the beef gravy, season with catsup or Worcestershire; boil up again and pour over the olives. Serve very hot.

Broiled lamb chops garnished with peas make a dish very nice to serve for a luncheon.

Devilled Mutton.—Cut two large slices from an underdone roast; have them about an inch thick. Score each side with a sharp knife. Rub in two tablespoonfuls of olive oil, one of vinegar and a teaspoonful of dry mustard; season with red pepper. Broil the slices, put on a hot platter and dot with butter. Serve at once.

Peacock's Eventful Career.

We wonder what will the be the ultimate fate of the peacock which was presented lately to Clatterbridge workhouse, Birkenhead, as an ornament to the ground. Its career if short, has already been an eventful one. The inmates at the workhouse complained that their rest was disturbed by its screams. It was therefore sent to a neighboring recreation ground, but had a fight with a dog and got to badly worsted that veterinary aid was summoned. The bird made rapid recovery, and two or three days ago destroyed several beds of tulips; then it fled, and when last seen was roosting on the chimney pot of a house at Hoylake.—London Mail

The Center of Things

By DR. FRANK CRANE

I have discovered the center of the universe. It is very wonderful and comforting. I am the center of the universe. In a minute this morning this flashed on me, and the puzzle of the ages was solved.

No more dispute as to whether the earth goes round the sun, or the sun round the earth, or both round the constellation of Hercules, for the whole business revolves about me. I am the axis.

When Proctor Knott extolled Duluth as the spot where the horizon comes down at equal distance in every direction, he spoke the sober, God's truth. I write these lines on a ship a thousand miles at sea; all around is water and sky; and right in the exact geographical center of everything am I and my ship. Come to think of it, this has always been the case all my life.

My father and mother existed for the purpose of bringing me into the world; my brothers being by-products. The old Third ward school house in Springfield, Ill., was built tthat I might attend there, and (it has since been torn down) learn to spell; indeed, the entire educational system came into being in order that I might go to that school.

Emperors die in China, and kings are upset in Portugal; earthquakes shake Sicily and panics Wall street, and all simply that the news thereof may be laid before me at the breakfast table.

The big and little dippers whirl about the pole star, Antares winks, and Venus glows, and Halley's comet comes and goes—for me.

And in all this there is no egotism. For in saying I am the center of the cosmos I do not at all imply that you also are not the center of the cosmos. In fact, you are; everybody is. There are as many centers as there are conscious beings. The mistake we have made all along is in supposing there can be but one center. If you look through a window pane covered with rain drops or frost crystals at a point of light, you will notice that any way you move your head the light always remains the center of innumerable concentric rings formed by the glistening reflections. It is even so in life, as you move the center moves.

There are as many worlds as there are creatures. As Zangwill says: "The scent world of dogs, the eye world of birds, the uncanny touch world of bats, the earth world of worms, the water world of fishes and gyroscopic world of dancing mice, the flesh world of parasites, the microscopic world of microbes, interest one another inextricably and with an infinite interlacing, yet each is a symmetric sphere of being, a rounded whole, and to its denizens the sole and self-sufficient cosmos.

The account of creation as given in the Pentateuch is therefore psychologically and essentially correct; God did make the sun and give man light by day, and the moon and stars to shine on him by night, as far as man is concerned.

If the Bible had been written for angels it might have stated the case differently. When the penitent at the mourner's bench is told that he will never find peace until he believes that the son of God came to save him personally, he is told the plain truth; the meaning of which is that he is to move in from the suburbs into the center of creation.

For it is only when a soul feels the stars rise and fall about him orderly, angels and devils tugging at him, and all creation recognizing his geocentric supremacy, that he gets poise and ceases to be eccentric. Eccentric means having the point about which a wheel revolves at one side of the center.

There are so many discontented, unhappy people in the world, simply because there are so many eccentric, lopsided, bumpy, flat-wheeled, irregular souls. Move in! Move in! Occupy your due place in the spotlight of destiny! Worms do it, why not you?

Philosophers have ridiculed this homocentric theory. Goethe turned from it in disgust. Pope wrote caustically:

"While man exclaims, 'See all things for my use!'
'See man for mine!' replies the pampered goose."

But the instinct of humanity is wiser than the wisdom of the learned. Homer breathed truth when he represented the gods fighting for and against Troy. The Old Testament is right when it shows Jehovah actively interested in the chosen people. Every people is a chosen people, and there is no God but our own peculiar Jah or Elohim.

And Jesus was most right and true of all when he had us appropriate, each one of us, the special care of the Father of All. There is no Providence that is of any mortal use to me but Special Providence; if it is only general it had as well not be at all. It is precisely because he clothes the lilies of the field that he will also clothe ye, O ye of little faith. Because he notes the sparrow he will note you.

You have an inalienable right to your centricity. Occupy it. You cannot believe in God unless you believe he is yours. The only real God is my God.

Temptation.

If you cannot remove temptation from the boys, then reverse the order and take the boy away from temptation.—Rev. Roby Day, Methodist, Kansas City.

Difficult to Answer.

Explaining the happenings of the sixth day of the creation, Miss Frances Hartz read to her Sabbath school class: "And the Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground."

"Well," spoke up one kid, "that's nothin' new. Did he put him in the sun to dry, the way we do our mud pies?"

Miss Hartz discreetly slurred the answer and proceeded with her lesson.—Cleveland Leader.

ECZEMA BROKE OUT ON BABY

"When my baby was two months old, she had eczema and rash very badly. I noticed that her face and body broke out very suddenly, thick, and red as a coal of fire. I did not know what to do. The doctor ordered castile soap and powders, but they did no good. She would scratch, as it itched, and she cried, and did not sleep for more than a week. One day I saw in the paper the advertisement of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, so I got them and tried them at once. My baby's face was as a cake of sores.

"When I first used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I could see a difference. In color it was redder. I continued with them. My baby was in a terrible condition. I used the Cuticura ,Remedies (Soap and Ointment) four times a day, and in two weeks she was quite well. The Cuticura Remedies healed her skin perfectly, and her skin is now pretty and fine through using them. I also use the Cuticura Soap today, and will continue to, for it makes a lovely skin. Every mother should use the Cuticura Remedies. They are good for all sores, and the Cuticura Soap is also good for shampooing the hair, for I have tried it. I tell all my friends how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured my baby of eczema and rash." (Signed) Mrs. Drew, 210 W. 18th St., New York city, Aug. 26, 1910.

Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, Mass., for free booklet on the skin.

To the Point.

Over in Hoboken in a shop frequented by Germans, hangs a sign framed in mournful black, reading thus:

"We regret to inform our honored customers that our good and generous friend, Mr. Credit, expired today. He was a noble soul, always willing and helpful, but has been failing for some time. May he rest in peace. PAY CASH!"

Woman's Yellow Peril.

Housewives wonder why the underwear, table linen, bedding and all other washable fabrics wear out—fall to pieces so quickly. It's the strong, yellow soap which eats through the fiber and weakens it to the tearing point. A pure, wholesome soap need be no more costly than these destructive compounds. Hewitt's Easy Task soap will prove this to be true.

It is a clean, white soap without the impurities of the crude, strong, yellow soaps, and will do the work with half the labor. Five cents a cake. Try it.

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JUNE 1, 1911.

IF THE various members of the editorial staff of the Democrat, the official mouth piece and only defender of the aggregation known as the Garrett County Board of School Commissioners, who sign themselves "Citizen" and other pseudonyms, are so insistent that Browning's trial resulted in such a tremendous vindication for Browning, why doesn't the school board defender print the decision of the State Board in full so that the small purcentage of the reading public of Garrett county who depend upon the columns of the Democrat to keep them informed on matters of public interest, may see how thoroughly Browoing is exonerated?

And if the Democrat (Citizen) wants some specific reason why Browning should be removed, here it is: We do not believe he is qualified, from an educational standpoint, to superintend the schools of this or of any other county in this day and age, if the schools are expected to do any good. See the decision of the State Board if you think his supervision has amounted to anything uring the past ten years.

If the editor of the Democrat and his friends desire to make the cut in the school appropriation by the Board of County Commissioners a political issue, we suggest that Mr. Deffinbaugh become a candidate for County Commissioner on the Democratic ticket, and then we shall see the strength of the School Board crowd—Republican.

If the editor of the Republican will be a candidate for County Commissioner on the Republican ticket, endorsing, as he does, cutting down the appropriation for schools, we wouldn't fear to run against him as a candidate on the Democratic ticket on the platform of larger appropriations for schools and a nine months school term.—Mt. Democrat.

The President of the School Board, who is also the editor of The Mountain Democrat and a participant in contracts made by the School Board for printing and publishing, dodges the issue. The paramount question is: "A NEW COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT."

The matter of appropriations, length of school term, etc., are incidental and consequently side issues.

The editor of this paper would certainly accept the challenge of Editor Deffinbaugh and run against him for County Commissioner if he had any criticism to make of the actions of the present board of County Commissioners, but we as well as the great majority of the people of Garrett county are eminently satisfied with the board as it is at present constituted.

It is up to those who are kicking to turn down the present Commissioners and elect themselves to that office and thereby test our demand for A NEW COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT.

OFFERS OF SUMMER CAPITALS

We told you so! The offers of "summer White Houses" are pouring in from all quarters of this glorious and perspiring republic. There is nothing stingy about the American people. They believe in competition, too. Is Lake Minnetonka to monopolize the attention of Congress in this matter? Not if Duluth and Lookout Mountain and Devils Lake know themselves.

Duluth asks the President to come to the margin of the unsalted seas, whose waters are described as being perpetually iced. All they need is a nip of Kentucky's best to constitute a perennial highball. The world is accessible to Duluth and it takes no longer to get from there to some other point than it does from Washington.

Lookout Mountain yearns for the chief magistrate. The patriotic citizens of Chattanooga offer a site on the summit of the mountain, "2000 feet above sea level, delightfully cool, with golf links." Imagine the drive that the President could make from these cerculean trees! Properly laid out, the links could be made to cover several States, thus keeping down interstate jealousies and promoting the interest of the entire middle South.

As for the far West, Tatoosh and Sitka offer well nigh irresistible inducements. Let the dweller in these parched regions absorb the fact that rain falls 280 days in the year at Tatoosh, with a total precipitation of 300 inches or so, and then he will appreciate the delights of that summer isle. As for Sitka, it is the pearl of the diademmed Alaska, the very soul of coolness and refreshment.

Then there are Snoqualmie, Capon Springs, Devils Lake, Knoxville, Yosemite, Deer Park, Skaggs Springs, St. Lawrence, Winnipisaukee, Grand Canyon, Lake George, Chimihuevi, Occoquan, Rainy River, Moosehead, Snickers Gap, Blowing Rock, Yellowstone, Rockville, Shasta—in fact, there are all kinds of resorts, all ideal, all superlative, all formed by nature to be the summer capital of the United States.

Minnetonka the only one? Not by a jugful. Minnetonka must be prepared to share her rights in the summer capital with a few thousand others. Meanwhile, Washington and Beverly, enjoying a tight little monopoly of their own, can afford to sit back and cry, "Let 'em fight!"

Our own Deer Park, within the very shadow of the National Capitol, can give them all odds, if health and rest is what President Taft needs.

THIS HIGH GRADE STEEL RANGE COSTS YOU NOTHING

as compared with any other range of any make whatsoever, that you might buy.

¶ Any other range; any range you ever saw takes its draft through the front end, next to the fire and right underneath the grate.

¶ This air is about 50 to 70 degrees in temperature. The range must burn enough coal to bring the temperature up to 700 degrees, or baking heat

¶ Notice that ordinary ranges have to burn enough coal to raise the air from 70 to 700 or 630 degrees.

CHAMPION RANGES

take the draft in at the opposite end, pass it under the bottom before it goes under the grate, and the air picks up enough from the waste heat under the bottom to reach about 250 degrees.

¶ The fire has to burn only enough coal to raise it from 250 to 700—450 degrees, as against 630 in ordinary ranges.

¶ CHAMPION RANGES save about 1-3 in fuel, every day they are used. This will pay the full cost of ther ange in 3 to 5 years, making it cheaper to you than any other.

¶ No experiment; been made and used for 18 years by thousands. Patented; can only be had from our agents. Guaranteed as represented or money back.

What our town needs is a Board of Trade. Cooperation is the life of business and if business men could only get together and work together our town would soon see more prosperous times, but independent action does no good. If a team of horses pulls together we all know what can be accomplished, but if one wanted to take his time and way, and the other his, why they don't get up the hill very far. A board of trade working in complete harmony, like machinery, must accomplish something and it would not be long before results would show for themselves. This can not be called a news item, but the editor will excuse that, for it is just mentioned to bring it before the public particularly of Friendsville, and THE REPUBLICAN is our mouth piece—the same as having a paper of our own here—so business men of our little city get together and help make it one of the best.

Two extremely handsome touring cars have been received in Oakland within the past week. Mr. Scott T. Jones received a Haynes, of beautiful design and dignified color and equipment, direct from the factory, on Friday. Yesterday State Senator Speicher came here from Accident and unloaded a new Columbia, which he purchased last week from a Philadelphia company.

The Civic Club, at its meeting yesterday directed that the work of cleaning the town of rubbish, etc., be started this morning and bright and early teams were at work hauling trash and accumulated rubbish to a spot near Oakland which has been donated by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company for the purpose. This ground will be at the disposal of the residents of Oakland for but one week, after which another spot will have to be secured.

GRANTSVILLE.

Last Friday a hail storm passed thro the vicinity of Grantsville. While very little hail fell in town, the residents a mile north of here report hailstones an inch and a half in diameter, by actual measurement.

The drouth was partly broken by a good shower on Monday which has greatly benefitted corn and oats, but which was not of long enough duration to penetrate the sod.

Work has now commenced on the bridges and culverts on the National Road east of Grantsville. The first arch to receive attention is the one spanning the mill race of W. E. Stanton at Little Crossing. It is to be hoped that not only will the bridges be repaired but the entire Pike from the Allegany County line to Mason and Dixon's line will be rebuilt and kept in the condition which it formerly was.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Miller, of Stone House Farm, were called to Cove last Friday to attend the funeral of Mr. Miller's father, Mr. Philip Miller, who died on Wednesday at the age of 62 years.

Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Yoder of Pinto, Md., were in this vicinity over Sunday, returning home Sunday evening in the automobile.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Miller were Meyersdale visitors on Wednesday of last week.

Mr. D. J. Stevanus was in Meyersdale on business last Thursday and again on Monday of this week. Rumor has it that Mr. Stevanus is about to close a deal for a buzz wagon.

Mr. M. J. Miller, formerly of Grantsville, now of Cumberland, was in town on Monday calling on friends. Mr. Miller is employed as a chauffeur by Mr. Lloyd Lowndes who is contemplating a European trip this summer and the auto driver naturally looks forward with pleasure to the time when he can leave the hot streets of Cumberland and sojourn in the land of the Teutons.

Mr. H. H. Baker, accompanied by Mrs. Durst and Mrs. Gastor of Hyndmann, drove to Grantsville on Sunday and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Miller on Sunday night. On Monday Mr. Baker was engaged in placing a monument in the Grantsville cemetery.

An Instructive Zoology Display.

The menagerie and wild beast exhibit offered by the Sun Brothers' World's Progressive Shows this season is a distinct departure. Here will be seen on exhibition the choicest selections of the zoologic creation. They are all exhibited in massive and commodious cages and so arranged that all visitors at the shows can get an unobstructed view of them.

Uniformed keepers will be in attendance to explain the different characteristics and habits of the animals. The wild beasts are looked after with tenderest care, both on account of their extraordinary value and the fact that few can be duplicated at any price.

This exhibition is not a collection of wild animals such as are commonly seen in zoological displays. Each is a splendid specimen of its kind and treated with the utmost tenderness and care.

The performing section of the Big Top performance as it is known in show parlance, is all new this season. An imperial program lasting two hours in duration is offered by artist of international reputation, including ring performers, clowns, aerial artists, sensational specialists, performing horses, trained elephants, acrobatic dogs, educated ponies, trained lions and leopards and various other features of human and animal nature, some familiar but most exclusive. The Royal Japanese Acrobatique Company; the renowned Cevene Troupe; the Electrique De Kamos, the Mexican Juan De Zemora Aerial Troupe, from the City of Mexico; the Great Barnetts; Miss Adele Dutton, the Equestric Queen, are among the star headliners in this big diversity of good things.

The show will spread its tents on the grounds at Highland Park June 15th, one day only, afternoon and night.

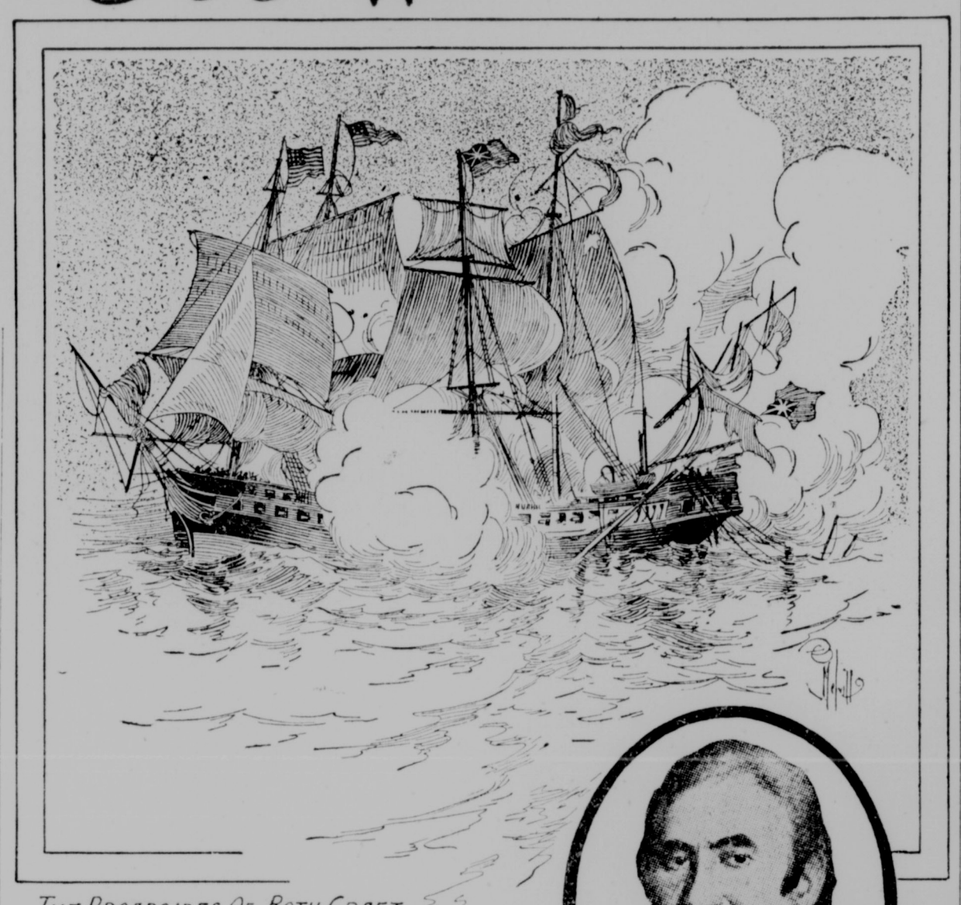
The Centenary of the War of 1812

The true story of the opening battle told for the first time

By Prof. B. J. Cigrand.

COPYRIGHT 1911 BY W. G. CHAPMAN.



THE BROADSIDES OF BOTH CRAFT CRASHED IN UNISON.

On May 16, 1811, one hundred years ago, the first shot was fired in the second war with England. Thus the one hundredth anniversary of the beginning of "the war of 1812" is not in 1912, but fell on May 16, 1911! It was the beginning of a naval engagement off the coast of Virginia, and the thunder of the opening gun has been referred to as "The second shot which was heard around the world." Indeed the battle might well be known as "the Lexington of the war of 1812." Yet, strange to say, both the American and British governments have persistently endeavored to eliminate from history's pages this unique naval combat, and apparently tried to keep the people in ignorance of what actually transpired on the high seas on that memorable occasion. Though nearly a score of sailors were slain, the affair was hushed up as far as possible through governmental influence on both sides of the water, notwithstanding that the incident helped to change the geography of the Western Hemisphere and marked a red-letter day in our naval annals. It was the awakening of the new American spirit, the inauguration of the real foreign policy of the United States, the beginning of our international influence.

The war of the Revolution ended in 1783. England withdrew her troops from New York city and reluctantly admitted the independence of the United States, but in spirit refused to accord the young republic a respected place in the household of governments. She constantly sought opportunities to humiliate her conqueror, and assumed an especially aggravating attitude in insisting upon the right to take from our vessels, merchant or naval, any sailors who were supposed to have been born under the British flag. Men made captive thus were forced to enter and serve upon British ships of war. This was a very practical illustration of the edict promulgated by the English cabinet: "Once an Englishman, always an Englishman." A most distressing situation for America grew out of the British kidnaping policy, and such of the impressed men as endeavored to escape, or manifested discontent with their seizure, were severely punished according to the naval standards of the day, which were not remarkable for gentleness.

For a score of years the young republic endured these high-handed outrages on the persons of its citizens. Our statesmen, among whom were Adams and Jefferson, seemed unable to handle the problem, and their endeavors to enlist European sympathy against Great Britain's drastic proceedings were in vain. But what a whole nation seemed powerless to accomplish was at length achieved by a single person equipped with the necessary amount of nerve and a fine disregard of consequences. It was a plain case of "the right man in the right place at the right time." On May 16, 1811, this unusual combination of qualities and circumstances was harmonized to cope successfully with a national emergency. Our histories lay little stress on this really important event, and a close investigation of the nation's unpublished archives reveals certain salient facts concerning it which are now set forth fully in print for the first time.

The British frigate Guerriere stopped an American vessel, the Spitfire, about fifteen miles from New York. English officers went aboard her and arrested for impress a young sailor, whom they declared was an Englishman by birth. The American captain protested in vain.

"I have known this lad personally from childhood," he asserted, "and know him to have been born in the state of Maine."

"All that may be so," responded the British captain, "but what can you do about it—he has no protection?"

Under the circumstances the argument was unanswerable, and the lad was carried off in the Guerriere. The Washington authorities were duly notified of the occurrence, but apparently they had become so accustomed to such happenings that little or nothing was done in the matter, and the documents relating to the inquiry rested in dusty pigeonholes of departmental desks. Finally a genuine sea captain chanced to assume the duty of the hour, and the war department, acting under some pressure the details of which are not made clear in the official records open to the public, gave orders for the frigate, The President, to cruise on the Atlantic off Chesapeake bay.

On the evening of May 16 Commodore Rodgers, in command of The President, sighted a sail on the eastern horizon, and concluded that the strange vessel was none other than the Guerriere, which had forced the boy from Maine into British service. Rodgers at once gave orders to sail in pursuit and to ascertain what flag the stranger flew. Several hours passed ere the vessels came within close range of each other. The sun had set and darkness was falling when Rodgers sprang into the rigging and tried to decipher with the aid of his glass the ensign borne by the object of the chase. But the shadows of night had rendered the colors undistinguishable, and Rodgers, seizing his speaking trumpet, shouted with the full strength of his powerful lungs, "What ship is that?"

There was no reply, and again Rodgers repeated his hail. Then a response came from the stranger in the shape of a sheet of flame and a round-shot which hurtled along the upper deck of The President and buried itself in the main mast. Before Rodgers could give the command to "return fire" one of his eager gunners anticipated his leader's instructions, and the first shot fired by an American vessel in the war of 1812 thundered forth defiance to the foe. The commodore then gave the order to engage, and the broadsides of both craft crashed in unison. A pall of blackness had now descended on the deep, and the battle raged fiercely on by the dim rays of the deck lanterns and red flashes from the cannons' mouths. Suddenly the enemy ceased firing, and Rodgers gave orders to follow suit, believing that she had surrendered. But the momentary lull was broken by another broadside from the stranger, and the powder-begrimed, cheering Americans replied in kind. Through the darkness of the night they fought on steadily, until again their adversary's fire was silenced. For the third time Rodger's stentorian voice roared across the waters:

"What ship is that?"

The response came back faintly:

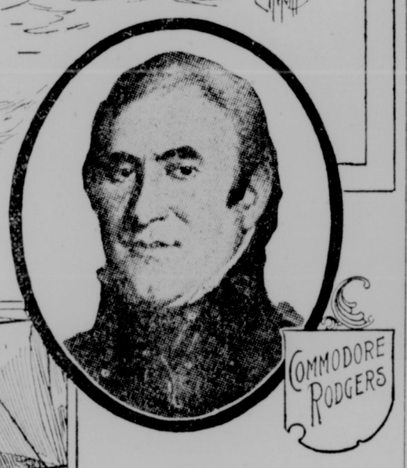
"We are his majesty's ship—"

The wind was blowing strongly and away from The President, and prevented the conqueror from hearing the name of the defeated craft. The rigging of the enemy was badly cut up and shattered and her decks were crimson shambles. At daylight Commodore Rodgers ascertained the name of the battered hulk his guns had hammered so mercilessly through the night to be the Little Bell, a consort of the dreaded Guerriere frigate.

When The President reached home and the news of her exploit and victory was made known, the heroes of the battle were everywhere received with tremendous enthusiasm. For a short while Commodore Rodgers was praised and lionized on all sides, but suddenly negotiations were opened between the Washington and British cabinets, and a change of scene took place. The American diplomats saw fit to keep the heroes of the combat from public view, and the people were naturally bewildered by their actions. To climax matters a court of inquiry was appointed by our government as a result of a claim put forward by A. B. Bingham, the British commodore, in which he stated that The President had fired the first shot and commenced a sudden and unwarranted attack upon his ship. The unwinding of a vast quantity of diplomatic red tape followed, and both governments were seemingly desirous of hushing up the whole business. But the American people at large believed in Rodgers and his gallant crew and made their protests heard in no gentle tones. A real and not visionary war cloud lowered on the international horizon, and Rodgers himself, disregarding what were practically orders of silence from the war department, made the following bold declaration:

"I may be censured, but I was determined not to be the aggressor, nor would I suffer the flag of my country to be insulted with impunity. And that is why I gave a general order to fire, and we have taught England a lesson."

To the foregoing spirited announcement the American public—contrary to the wishes of President Madison and his peace-loving policy—gave hearty and unstinted applause. It transpired that the British vessel was fearfully damaged during the engagement, besides sustaining a loss of 31 men killed and wounded, while The President escaped almost unscathed, and had but one injured, a boy slightly wounded in the hand. In his recent history Julian Hawthorne devotes less than a page to this initial battle of the war of 1812, and the following sentence is worthy of being quoted:



COMMODORE RODGERS

THE STRANGERS RESPONSE WAS A ROUND-SHOT

The story spread that Rodgers had sailed under express orders from our administration to pursue the Guerriere, and to demand our impressed citizen at the mouth of her guns. But the court of inquiry which ensued clearly demonstrated that the American government had no special responsibility in the lucky accident for our flag and the prowess of our navy."

These are the only lines which emphasize and indicate the importance of the battle, lines which give the credit by inference, where it should be placed by direct statement, to Commodore Rodgers. To the latter belongs the glory of having been bigger than his government, in that he would not allow the flag of his county and ensign of his command to be flouted. That Rodgers assumed the entire responsibility is further shown by a diary kept by one of his officers, which reads, in part, as follows:

"Yesterday, May 16, while beating down the bay, we spoke to a brig coming up who informed us that he saw the British frigate the day before off the very place where we now are, but she is not in sight. We have made the most complete preparations for battle. Everyone wishes it. She is of exactly our force. Should we see her I have not the least doubt of our engagement. The commodore (Rodgers) will demand the person impressed, the demand will doubtless be refused, and the battle will instantly commence. The commodore has called in the boatswain, gunner, and carpenter, and informed them of all the circumstances, and asked if they were ready for action. 'Ready' was the reply of each."

Just why historians treat this essential beginning of our second war with England so lightly, and accord it so little space, practically passing it over as unimportant, is hard to comprehend. Investigation proves it to have been in our country the cause of a political revolution, and the inauguration of an American protectorate on the oceans, seas, bays, lakes and rivers of the world. Yet the victory won by Rodgers is accorded less than a page in the elaborate twenty volume history of the United States by Guy Carleton Lee; in the twenty volumes by B. J. Lossing it receives half a page; and in Bryant's four huge volumes a single sentence of two lines is all that is alloted this most daring naval exploit.

So intense was the feeling aroused by Rodgers' feat-of-arms that in the fall of 1811 the campaign for congressional representatives both in the senate and house were chosen on the terms voiced in the pertinent question: "Are you for a war with England?" Those who answered in the affirmative were elected, and those who disapproved of martial measures were defeated. Old and tried politicians were sent home and their places taken by youthful enthusiasts who infused fresh blood and spirit into the staid circle at Washington. Among the latter were Henry Clay of Kentucky and John Calhoun of South Carolina. These two became leaders in house and senate, and it was chiefly owing to their fiery eloquence in defense of Rodgers' action, and in favor of adopting punitive measures with regard to England, that President Madison was finally forced to declare war.

More than one writer has fallen into the error of declaring Commodore John Rodgers to have been of foreign birth. As a matter of fact, he was American to the core, having been born in the state of Maryland, July 11, 1771. His favorite vessel was The President and with her he accomplished wonders of naval warfare. When the war with England opened he was sent out on a cruise, and in 148 days captured 11 British merchant ships and the English armed schooner, the Highflyer. The crew of the latter vessel had burned and plundered Havre de Grace, Maryland, the home of Rodgers, so that the commodore may be said to have had private as well as patriotic reasons for wishing to lay The President alongside of her.

Before he sailed from Boston Rodgers had obtained from some unknown source a partial knowledge of the secret signal code of the British navy, and caused certain flags to be constructed accordingly. When he came in sight of the Highflyer he flew the British ensign, which was immediately hailed. A signal was then displayed on the English vessel, and Rodgers succeeded in answering it correctly. He then signaled that he was the British ship Seahorse, and the two vessels ranged alongside each other. One of Rodgers' officers donned the uniform of a British lieutenant and went aboard the Highflyer, where he informed the commander that part of the Highflyer's signal code was lost, and asked that he be allowed to make good the deficiency. The permission was graciously granted and taken advantage of, after which the British officer accompanied his new acquaintance aboard the American vessel. Rodgers greeted him courteously, and then asked:

"Do you know what ship you are aboard of?"

"Why, yes," responded the British officer; "it is his majesty's ship, Seahorse."

"Did you ever hear of a vessel called The President?" inquired Rodgers.

"Indeed I have," replied the unsuspecting Englishman. "That is the craft we are supposed to take."

"Well, The President has taken you," smiled Rodgers.

The full truth of the ruse by which he had been betrayed flashed at once upon the chagrined Briton, but he saw that he was helpless. The crew of The President were at quarters ready for instant action, and the Highflyer lay at their mercy under the frowning muzzles of the American guns. There was nothing for it but to submit as gracefully as possible. Rodgers ordered the British colors struck, and soon the stars and stripes floated in the breeze over both vessels. The sword worn by Hutchinson, the English commander, was the personal property of Rodgers, taken amidst other plunder at the burning of Havre de Grace, but destined to be returned to the owner in token of the surrender of one of his majesty's crack sea-fighters. The Highflyer was taken captive to the American shore, and the country once again rang with the praises of the dashing and ingenious Rodgers.

To Rodgers and The President also belongs the peculiar distinction of having fought for 80 hours in absolute daylight. This is explained by the fact that the engagement in question took place in the Norway latitudes where perpetual daylight exists at a certain season of the year. It was Rodgers who broke up the blockade of the port of New York, and who became known to friends and foes alike by the fitting title of "the swamp fox of the seas." He was acting secretary of the American navy in 1823, and on August 1, 1828, he died at Philadelphia in his fifty-eighth year.

Then They Got It.

It was at the beefsteak dinner of the Rotary club the other night, in the Hermit club, that Tom Goss, the insurance man, commented upon the departure from the regular course eatfest. "As for me," he said, "I prefer the—"

"Table d'hote," broke in Ferdinand Bliss, the Mazda man, pronouncing the word as if it rhymed with "dotty."

"I thought that word was pronounced as if it ended like dot, or lot," said Will Hunkin, the building contractor.

"You're both wrong," continued Tom Goss. "But you can easily learn to pronounce the word if you make it rhyme with what we all most need. Now, all together!"

And together they pronounced it correctly. They all needed the dough. Cleveland Leader.

"Kicking the Bucket."

When we speak facetiously of some one for whom we have no reverence as having "kicked the bucket" we employ a phrase that would seem to be a piece of latter-day slang, but, as a matter of fact, it dates back to old England, when, about the year 1725, one Bolsover hung himself to a beam while standing on the bottom of a bucket and then kicked the bucket away. Although at first used only in cases of suicide, it has been applied in the course of years to any death, without distinction.

If you are in need of medical advice, do not fail to write Professor Munyon. Your communication will be treated in strict confidence, and your case will be diagnosed as carefully as though you had a personal interview.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour, they do not gripe, they do not weaken, but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. In my opinion constipation is responsible for most ailments. There are 26 feet of human bowels, which is really a sewer pipe. When this pipe becomes clogged the whole system becomes poisoned, causing biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produce rheumatism and kidney ailments. No woman who suffers with constipation or any liver ailment can expect to have a clear complexion or enjoy good health. If I had my way I would prohibit the sale of nine-tenths of the cathartics that are now being sold for the reason that they soon destroy the lining of the stomach, setting up serious forms of indigestion, and so paralyze the bowels that they refuse to act unless forced by strong purgatives.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverish it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope; they are soothing, healing and stimulating. They school the bowels to act without physic.

Regular size bottle, containing 45 pills, 25 cents. Munyon's Laboratory, 53d & Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia.

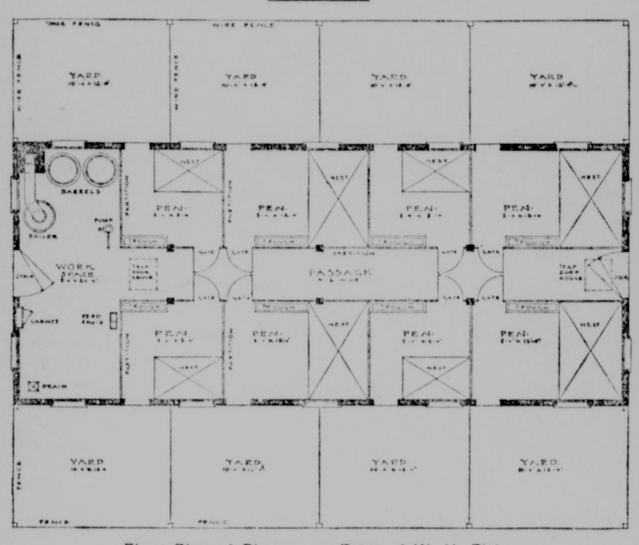
MAINTAIN HIGHEST SANITARY CONDITIONS IN OHIO PIGGERY

Ground Floor Plan and Elevation of Building Looking to Comfort of Animals Is Shown Herewith—Jack Frost Is Excluded.



Floor Plan of Piggery on Farm of W. H. Fisher.

The piggery, of which a ground floor plan is shown herewith, is the latest acquisition at The Cedars looking to the comfort of the animals and their attendant, writes W. H. Fisher of Franklin county, Ohio, in the Breeders' Gazette. The building runs north and south, so that the sun shines into each compartment at some hour of the day. The dimensions are 48 feet 10 inches by 21 feet four inches and the studding is 14 feet. A glance at the floor plan shows that there are four pens 8 by 8 feet and four 8 by 12 feet, with a tilting window and sliding door 2 by 4 feet in each. A hanging door above and in front of each trough makes it possible to feed from the passageway and also to keep animals out of the trough until the feed is placed therein. On the hardwood sills, which are 2 by 8 inches, bolted every 6 feet to the concrete foundation, rests a brick wall 40 inches high laid in cement mortar, inside of (not between) the studding, forming an air space of 4 inches (thickness of studding) between the wall and the siding. This wall is covered with cement mortar and joins the concrete floor, which is curved up to cover and protect the sills, making it possible by the use of hot water and steam to maintain the highest sanitary conditions. The drainage of each pen is toward the sliding door.

Partitions are 4 feet high and those between pens as well as all outside fences are of electric-welded fencing, stapled to hardwood railings, which in the yards are bolted to extra heavy cedar posts capped with galvanized iron and all given two coats of paint. This piggery, which was designed especially for winter comfort, is self-contained. A 200-barrel cistern underneath takes the water from three down spouts on the east side, not shown, a force pump puts the water either into the slop casks, each holding 100 gallons, into a tank upstairs, or into the boiler, as may be desired. Feed is drawn through chutes from bins upstairs and there is yet room for a winter's supply of straw, clover, alfalfa and oat-pea hay, which is put down through hatches at either end of the passageway. These hatches are provided with stairs which swing up and hook under the ceiling when not in use. The boiler, which holds but 17 gallons of water, makes steam rapidly and will thoroughly cook the 200 gallons of feed in 30 minutes, besides heating water in the tank upstairs for housecleaning and for washing pigs preparatory to shipment. Breakfast for the poultry is also cooked by steam and we utilize the boiler at butchering time and for cooking the dormant spray solution for our orchards.

With this small amount of artificial heat the piggery is sufficiently warm to enable the sows to farrow whenever the spirit moves them, and we know that no ears, tails or lives will be sacrificed to Jack Frost. Each pen contains a sleeping floor, so that no animal need lie on the cement floor except from choice. The sliding doors are operated by sash cord over pulleys from the passageway. The slop casks are elevated 15 inches so that feed is drawn into buckets through large molasses gates. The expense complete, including allowance for our own time at 20 cents per hour and the same for teams, was a trifle over $1,200.

RATIONS FOR MANY SEASONS

Generally Speaking Feeds Produced on Farm Contain Excess of Carbonaceous Matter and Is Wasted.

(By A. J. LEGG.)

In the summer season when the animals are allowed the range of the pasture they can, in a measure at least, balance their own rations.

Some feeders aim at a maintenance ration only during the winter season and depend for a profit during the summer. Others feed for growth or production during the winter.

In the maintenance ration there is no profit or no gain during the winter and the feed is consumed in keeping the animal alive.

If a feed is used that contains an excess of carbonaceous matter the excess practically is wasted. Upon the other hand if an excess of protein is contained in the feed this excess is wasted.

Generally speaking the feeds produced on the farm contain an excess of carbonaceous matter and it becomes necessary to use some of the concentrates to balance.

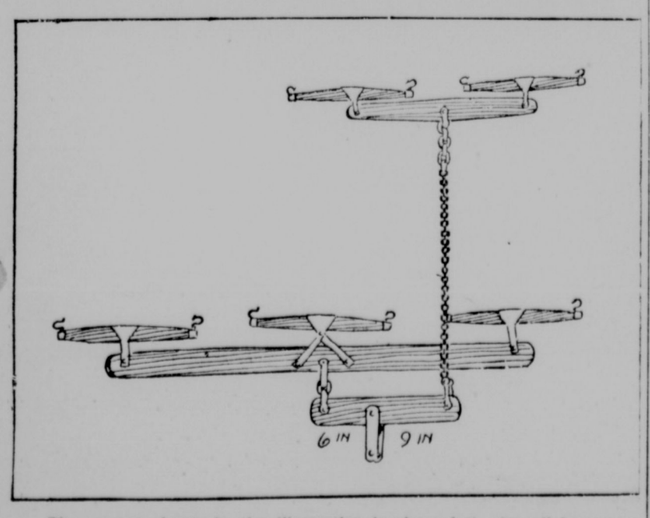
Corn has a nutritive ratio of 1 to 9, wheat and oats have a nutritive ratio of near 1 to 6, buckwheat has a nutritive ratio of 1 to 7.

A well balanced ration for a horse is near 1 to 8, for milch cows 1 to 5, for a hog 1 to 5. Then the ash or mineral contents of a feed should have some consideration. An animal must have some mineral matter in its ration in order to grow and maintain a strong frame-work.

Corn is very deficient in mineral matter. Digester tankage is very rich in both protein and mineral matter and it is one of our best materials for balancing a hog ration.

Wheat bran, cotton seed meal and oil meal, all are much richer in both protein and mineral matter than the whole grain. The protein and mineral matter contained in them make these feed stuffs valuable for both milch cows and young growing animals.

GIVE ALL HORSES EVEN SHARE



The evener shown in the illustration is planned to give all horses an even share of the load. If a tongue is used with gang plow it can be attached to draw bar with two clevises and ring. A neckyoke is used on rear horses to hold up rod or tongue.

WHAT I WENT THROUGH

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Natick, Mass. — "I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it had worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish my letter."—Mrs. NATHAN B. GREATON, 51 N. Main Street, Natick, Mass.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

LOST FAITH IN WHITE MAN

Eskimo Tested Efficacy of Telephone Scheme, and Realized He Had Been Deceived.

An interesting story is told regarding the efforts of an Eskimo to construct a telephone line. The Eskimo came into possession of a piece of wire of considerable length and never having seen wire before he asked Professor McMillan of the Peary north pole expedition what it was and what it was for. He was told that the white man strung it on poles stuck in the ground and a voice talking to an instrument at one end could be heard at the other end. After some search the next morning the Eskimo was found to be engaged in telephone construction work of his own. He stuck some sticks in the ground and hung his wire on them. He held one end of the wire to his mouth and talked to it at the top of his voice. Then he ran as fast as he could to the other end and held the wire to his ear with the expectation of hearing his own words repeated.

When he failed to hear any sounds the expression on his face revealed his opinion of his white friend.

Obliging Shopman (to lady who has purchased a pound of butter)—Shall I send it for you, madam?

Lady—No, thank you. It won't be too heavy for me.

IN THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME.

Many a time this summer you're going to be just about done out by the heat—hot, and so thirsty it just seems nothing could quench it. When such moments arrive or when you just want a delicious, palate tickling drink step into the first place you can find where they sell COCA-COLA. It's delicious, refreshing and completely thirst-quenching. At soda-fountains or carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Send to the COCA-COLA CO., Atlanta, Ga., for their free booklet "The Truth About COCA-COLA." Tells what COCA-COLA is and why it is so delicious, cooling and wholesome.

To the Childish Mind.

Dorothy Ullman of E. Eighty-fourth street, is a very literal young person. To her mother's definition of the All-Seeing Eye she returned a question as to the size of the eye.

"Can God see everything?" she continued.

"Yes, dear. He can see everything, at all times."

That afternoon Dorothy escorted her mother down town. Before an optician's display she stopped. Then, "Mother," she asked, pointing to the big winking eye in the window: "Is God's eye as big as this?"—Cleveland Leader.

Age of Oysters.

Oysters grow only during the summer and especially during the long, warm summers at that, and are scarcely big enough for the mouth before the third year. It is easy after looking over a bunch of shells to tell how old an oyster is. A summer hump and the winter sink come across the shell every year, but after the seventh or tenth year full growth comes; then, by looking at the sinks between the humps it is hard to tell anything more about Miss Oyster's age. Oysters live to be 20 years old.

She Learned Something.

"This is a fine coffee," said the visitor to her hostess; "how do you make it? I make mine so and so, but it never tastes like this." "Well," replied the hostess, "I make this the same way, but I've learned something. Maybe you don't keep your coffee pot clean—that is, I mean maybe you use common kitchen soap. I use Hewitt's Easy Task soap. It's pure and clean and white, and costs the same as the poor kinds. Then, too, it makes a nickel-plated coffee pot shine like silver."

A Poetic Prosecutor.

John Burns, city prosecutor of St. Paul, was trying to show Judge Finehout why some young men ought to be fined for tearing pickets off the fence of Mrs. Joe Goesik. Mr. Burns said:

"I know Mike Chicket tore off that picket, and the lady took offence."

"No lady is charged with taking a fence," replied Judge Finehout, "and, besides, this is no place for poetry."

His Wurst.

The German proprietor of a Brooklyn delicatessen store has got far enough along to pun in English. A writer in the New York Sun reports the fact.

Hanging in the window of the little shop is this advertisement:

"The Best You Can Do Is Buy Our Wurst."—Youth's Companion.

Fine Scheme.

Wife—Please match this piece of silk for me before you come home.

Husband—At the counter where the sweet little blonde works? The one with the soulful eyes and—

Wife—No. You're too tired to shop for me when your day's work is done, dear. On second thought, I won't bother you.

Husband Who Had "Married Money" Acknowledged the Truth to His Friend's Query.

Apropos of a beautiful young wife, worth $40,000,000, who had just divorced her penniless husband in order to marry again, Henry E. Dixey, the comedian, said at a dinner in New York:

"The young man who marries for money has none too easy a time of it. His rich wife is likely to tire of him and throw him out in a few years, or else she is likely to limit his allowance to 25 or 50 cents a day.

"'I married money,' a man once said to me.

"'Wasn't there a woman attached to it?' I asked.

"'Yes, you bet there was,' he exploded. 'So much attached to it that she never parted with a penny.'"

A Question of Change.

A story is going the rounds of a couple of young people who attended church recently. When the collection was being taken up the young man commenced fishing in his pocket for a dime. His face expressed his embarrassmen as he hoarsely whispered: "I guess I haven't a cent, I changed my pants." The young lady, who had been examining the unknown regions of woman's dress for her purse, turned a pink color and said, "I'm in the same fix."

Some parents are a long while in finding out that money in a boy's pocket will do him little good, unless he also has brains in his head.

A FRIENDLY DIG.

Edith—There is a rumor that Daisy cheats awfully at bridge.

Ethel—Is that why you were so anxious to get her for a partner last night?

Well Mated.

Thus the inquisitive boarder:

"What has become of the old-fashioned woman who used to call a wedding reception an infare?"

Response by the white-haired boarder:

"I think she married the old-fashioned man who used to crack his knuckles regularly twice a day."

Quite Often.

Figg—Two negatives make an affirmative, you know.

Fogg—With a woman it takes only one.

Can't Get Away From It

Is it possible to nourish, strengthen and Rebuild the Brain by Food?

Every man who thinks uses up part of the brain each day. Why don't it all disappear and leave an empty skull in say a month of brain work? Because the man rebuilds each day.

If he builds a little less than he destroys, brain fag and nervous prostration result sure. If he builds back a little more each day, the brain grows stronger and more capable. That also is sure. Where does man get the material to rebuild his brain? Is it from air, sky or the ice of the Arctic sea? When you come to think about it, the rebuilding material must be in the food and drink.

That also is sure.

Are the brain rebuilding materials found in all food? In a good variety but not in suitable proportion in all.

To illustrate: we know bones are made largely of lime and magnesia taken from food; therefore to make healthy bone structure we must have food containing these things. We would hardly feed only sugar and fat to make healthy bone structure in a growing child.

Likewise if we would feed in a skillful manner to insure getting what the brain requires for strength and rebuilding, we must first know what the brain is composed of and then select some article or articles (there are more than one) that contain these elements.

Analysis of brain by an unquestionable authority, Geoghegan, shows of Mineral Salts, Phosphoric Acid and Potash combined (Phosphate of Potash) 2.91 per cent of the total, 5.33 of all mineral Salts.

This is over one-half.

Beaunis, another authority, shows "Phosphoric Acid combined" and Potash 73.44 per cent from a total of 101.07.

Considerable more than one-half of Phosphate of Potash.

Analysis of Grape-Nuts shows: Potassium and Phosphorus (which join and make Phosphate of Potash) is considerable more than one-half of all the mineral salts in the food.

Dr. Geo. W. Carey, an authority on the constituent elements of the body, says: "The gray matter of the brain is controlled entirely by the inorganic cell-salt, Potassium Phosphate (Phosphate of Potash). This salt unites with albumen and by the addition of oxygen creates nerve fluid or the gray matter of the brain. Of course, there is a trace of other salts and other organic matter in nerve fluid, but Potassium Phosphate is the chief factor and has the power within itself to attract, by its own law of affinity, all things needed to manufacture the elixir of life."

Further on he says: "The beginning and end of the matter is to supply the lacking principle, and in molecular form, exactly as nature furnishes it in vegetables, fruits and grain. To supply deficiencies—this is the only law of cure."

The natural conclusion is that if Phosphate of Potash is the needed mineral element in brain and you use food which does not contain it, you have brain fag because its daily loss is not supplied.

On the contrary, if you eat food known to be rich in this element, you place before the life forces that which nature demands for brain-building.

Mind does not work well on a brain that is broken down by lack of nourishment.

A peaceful and evenly poised mind is necessary to good digestion.

Worry, anxiety, fear, hate, etc., etc., directly interfere with or stop the flow of Ptyalin, the digestive juice of the mouth, and also interfere with the flow of the digestive juices of stomach and pancreas.

Therefore, the mental state of the individual has much to do (more than suspected) with digestion.

Brain is made of Phosphate of Potash as the principal Mineral Salt, added to albumen and water.

Grape-Nuts contain that element as more than one-half of all its mineral salts.

A healthy brain is important, if one would "do things" in this world.

A man who sneers at "Mind" sneers at the best and least understood part of himself. That part which some folks believe links us to the Infinite.

Mind asks for a healthy brain upon which to act, and Nature has defined a way to make a healthy brain and renew it day by day as it is used up from work of the previous day.

Nature's way to rebuild is by the use of food which supplies the things required. Brain rebuilding material is certainly found in

MARTIN'S BRILLIANT BRED PERCHERON STALLION

ARTILLERY 54339

Sired by the Great Breeding and Show Stallion Champion Major 41208, [48866]

who won first in the three-year-old class Ohio State Fair, 1903; and first in the four-year-old class Ohio State Fair, 1904, and other prizes too numerous to mention. One of the greatest and best bred horses that ever came over the water and weighs 2250 pounds.

PEDIGREE: Sired by Major 41208, 48866; he by Victoria 2449, 42905; he by the great and only Besigue, 19692, the greatest breeding and show horse in all France; he by Brilliant 3rd, 11116, 2919, a stallion for which the late Mr. M. Dunham paid $4,000 in France. Brilliant 3rd, (2919), proved an excellent investment in the effect that he exercised on the breed, and was certainly worth the amount paid for him Brilliant 3rd was one of the greatest prize-winners of his day, as was also his sire Fenelon (38) who sold for $6,000, the most noted of the sons of Brilliant (755). Brilliant 1271, 755, commonly called Dunham's Brilliant, because he was imported by the late M. W. Dunham, of Wayne, Ill, and stood at the head of the celebrated Oak Lawn Stock Farm for 12 years, and was shown from the Atlantic Ocean to the Rocky Mountains and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico and never met defeat, and is entitled to the well earned name of the King of Percherons. He by Brilliant 1899 (656), by Coco II 714, by Vaux Chaslin (713), by Coco (712), by Mignon (715), by Jean Le Blanc 739.

DAM: Gentile 31498 (43242), by Mouille (35212), Brilliant III, 11116 (2919), by Fenelon 2882 (38), by Brilliant 1271 (755), by Brilliant 1899 (756), by Coco II (714), by Vieux Chaslin (713), by Coco (712), by Mignon, 715 by Jean Le Blanc (739).

SECOND DAM: Brillante (7014), by Brilliant 1899, (756), by Coco II (714), by Vieux Chaslin (713), by Coco (712), by Mignon (715), by Jean Le Blanc (739)

THIRD DAM: Brilliantee, belonging to M. Guillemin.

You will notice in Artillery's breeding that he runs to Brilliant on his sire side. Brilliant on his dam side, and his grandmother was a sister to Brilliant, a pedigree seldom equalled and never excelled, and he is a demonstrative sire of high class colts and without a doubt the best draft stallion in the county.

ARTILLERY is a black, 5 years old, weighs 1800 pounds, he is a low down, wide out horse, with the very best of feet and legs and stands on them the very best; he is absolutely sound; there is just as much in the breeding of a draft horse as a road horse, to produce the right kind of results; here is one bred right and the size is right, color is right, disposition right and from the right family and will make one of the best breeders in the State of Maryland and worth a dozen of the short bred ones as a sire.

That deeds were executed conveying the interest of his three sisters and all his nieces and nephews, in the said 212 acres, to three of his brothers, Chas. E. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder, except the wife of John Wagner of Hedgesville, W. Va., who did not sign the said deed and has an inchoate right of dowery in her husband's share. That a second deed was executed by his sisters and all of his nieces and nephews conveying their interest in the said property above mentioned to George W. Magruder, John J. Magruder and Alfred H. Magruder; that his two sisters, Mrs. Mandana Custer and the wife of the said John Wagner, refused to execute said deed on their part. The said Mandana Custer being entitled to the one-ninth of one-fifth interest in said first three pieces mentioned in this order of publication. Said Carrie Wagner being entitled to the same interest as aforementioned in these pieces also.

That the said Carrie Wagner, the wife of John Wagner, of Hedgesville, W. Va., is a non-resident of this State. The bill among other things prays that the property be sold and divided among the parties entitled to share therein, according to their respective interest therein and have further relief.

It is thereupon this 1st day of May, in the year 1911, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett County in Equity, that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in the said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks, before the 3rd day of June, 1911, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, commanding her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 19th day June next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

PRESIDENT W. H. TAFT AT MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

A Large Crowd of Citizens Expected to Be Present.

President William Howard Taft will address the citizens of Mountain Lake Park and vicinity in the Amphitheatre, Sunday morning, June 25th, at 10.30. The subject will be "The Experiences of the President in the Phillipines," particularly his observations of the christian churches there. President Taft is not only our president, and pays us a great compliment by coming to spend a Sunday with us, but many individuals and many of the leading newspapers and periodicals of the day are calling him one of the greatest men of the age. No one man in public life at the present time has such a vast and accurate fund of information on world topics as he, and to hear him speak upon this Phillipine question will be to listen to an authority. All are invited to be present on this occasion.

There will be no admission, but a silver offering will be expected of every one at the gate. Best of music will be provided. A strong chorus made up the best singers of Mountain Lake Park and Oakland, and special numbers by the talent of the Summer School of Music on the grounds at that time.

Let every one plan to come, and every one pass the word to every one else.

Chicago is now trying to solve the hired help problem by letting the housework by contract. The maid has professional hours. Also her prices are professional.

"Seventy-five per cent of the nation's coal is sold without profit" avers a commercial journal. It will be hard to make the ultimate consumer believe anything like that.

The simplified spellers are still working to reform the nation's spelling. As an example of cheerful persistence in the face of insuperable obstacles, they are, at least, doing the nation some good.

Brides are falling on hard times and stern advisers. One matrimonial expert denounces their tendency to keep their husbands' love by making themselves beautiful, and another declares that to make their homes happy they must learn to cook. But it is doubtful if the up-to-date brides will heed such advice. They are beginning to believe that women ought to have some of the fun which is going on or the earth.

A Roman Soldier

By REV. STEPHEN PAULSON

TEXT—Now, when the centurion saw what was done he glorified God saying, Certainly this was a righteous man.—Luke 23, 47.

Jesus has been brought to Calvary. The chosen place has been reached and the soldiers settle to their work. The cross is gotten ready. The upright beam is laid upon the ground handy to the hole into which the end will slip. Jesus is laid upon the beams and sharp pointed spikes are driven through the palm of each hand, and through the feet. Then strong hands seize the upper end and shift the cross into place; and as he is lifted up on high the first words from the sufferer are: "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Standing by through the whole of the crucifixion was the centurion, whose duty it was to see that everything was properly done. It is not to be assumed that he was any better than his fellow-officers, but it may be assumed that he did not relish his day's work. When a soldier is called to war and wounds he is proud, for that is his calling; but when he is detailed to guard an execution he is filled with disgust, for this is a humiliation.

With his company this centurion had gone on duty in the morning at Pilate's palace, and it was late afternoon before they were released. He had heard the trial of Jesus, and helped to keep the howling rabble back. He had handed Jesus over to his men for scourging and looked on with a callousness born of a rough life. He had escorted Jesus and the malefactors through the streets and taken care that they were kept safe for legal punishment. He had selected the site for the crosses and seen that they were firmly set. And as the rabble passed by mocking Jesus, and as his men gambled for his garments, the centurion had sat on his horse silent, watchful, immovable.

When the criminals were proved to be dead, and the bodies had been disposed of he gathered his company together and marched them back to the barracks. He went to his room and removed his heavy armor which had been like a fiery prison in the hot sun. It had been a long day for the centurion and a sorry day's work, and he was glad in his soul that it was over.

Yet the centurion knew that this day would never pass from his memory. Perhaps he had assisted at many crucifixions, but he had never had a prisoner like Jesus. As he stood before Pilate there was about him a certain dignity of manhood and bravery of soul, which neither bonds nor insults could obscure. Ordinary men had been degraded by the mockings and scourging; this man left the degradation with his enemies. Common men had cried out in their pain as they were fastened to the wood; this man had lifted up his voice in prayer for those who were torturing him. From the cross this man had cared for his mother and his last words had been words of triumph as if a great task had been accomplished. This spectacle of moral heroism had its effect upon the blunt and honest soldier, and it needed not the darkness and the earthquake to call forth his confession. "Certainly this was a righteous man; truly this was a son of God."

The excellency of our Master comes out after the same fashion to every soul, but has various avenues of access. To some he comes by the avenue of intellect. To some he comes by the avenue of the heart and the emotions. There are others to whom the Lord has come as the revelation and incarnation of duty. They are practical people and they receive the Master with their conscience. For years they have been doing their duty by the best light they had. They have also certain unrealized ideals. One day they find them fulfilled in the Master, and henceforth he becomes their model and their Lord.

What a multitude of men there are in every land whose one idea is not to save their souls or to earn a reward, but to do faithfully the work which God has laid to their hand. They make provision for those whom they love, or who are left to their charge; they help where they can any worthy cause and unfortunates in trouble. They are honorable merchants, workmen, sailors or soldiers, and upon conscientious unremitting labor depends the welfare of society. Often they have hateful and heavy work, in the mines and mills and furnaces, or under the blazing sun like the centurion. Yet who commends them for doing their duty? No one but Christ, who says "Well done good and faithful servant." This is the class of men among whom Christ worked and to whom his gospel should come with the greatest power, and one day they will see that Jesus is the ideal and example of all men who labor.

Endless Life in God.

Happy are those who can see the eternal stars in the sunlight as well as in the darkness; to whom all that is fairest in this visible world is the revelation of the glory of divine and eternal things; to whom the common gifts of God's providence are the symbols and sacraments of the better gifts of his grace; to whom a life unvexed by care and illuminated with gladness is the discipline for an endless life in God.—R. W. Dale, D. D.

Temperance Notes

DRINK QUESTION IN ENGLAND

President of Board of Education Tells of Good Work Done by Temperance Syllabus.

The president of the board of education (England), Mr. Runciman, speaking recently on the temperance syllabus issued by the board, said:

Already nearly 250 local authorities out of 350 had adopted the syllabus. There ought to be no part of the country where the work based on that syllabus was not being conducted, either voluntarily or by the teachers.

No class of the community in the United Kingdom were more alive to the evils of insobriety than the teachers in the schools. They saw it face to face every day, and they had the worst possible examples of the harm done by insobriety brought into the schools. They knew perfectly well nothing was to be made of the coming generations unless they were brought up to hate all forms of strong drink. He was of opinion that no teaching in their elementary schools could be done by outsiders as well as by the teachers themselves. But they had to fill up the gaps and provide the driving power, and that was where the Band of Hope Union came in as regarded the elementary schools.

Dealing with the progress which temperance had made during the last 20 years, Mr. Runciman pointed out that public houses had very largely ceased to be the meeting places of people who hired employes. Friendly societies and trade unions were also, to a large extent, forsaking the public house for meeting purposes.

As to the decline per head in the consumption of alcoholic liquors, the figures published year by year showed that it was not an accidental decline, but the tendency downward was to some extent the result of the work that had been done amongst the young 30 or 40 years ago.

Touching upon the old controversy that men could not be made sober by act of parliament, Mr. Runciman said everybody knew that if the government legislated too far ahead of public opinion they ran two great risks, first of evasion, and secondly of rebound. He quite agreed that they could not make people sober by act of parliament, but they could help them to be sober. That was one of the things the government had been trying to do in recent years.

The fall in the consumption of intoxicating liquors had also been contributed to during the last twelve months by the heavy taxation on whisky. He did not regret that. He quite agreed somebody must have suffered, but he did not think it had been the nation as a whole. They could not have taxation without throwing burdens on someone, and he knew no trade which could better bear the burden of taxation than that which made profits out of strong drink.

In conclusion, Mr. Runciman said that they might well ask the reason why in a great country like ours, which professes to be really democratic, things which were good for the nation should be impeded by the enormous influence of the public house. Parliaments assembled and did what they could in the way of social reform, but if at the back of it all elections might be turned and public opinion distorted by public house influences, it was impossible for the democracy to reach either its highest efficiency or its best ideals.

A Swedish Expert on Drink.

Seved Ribbing, the famous professor of medicine at the Swedish university, of Lund, makes these remarkable statements in concluding an address on one phase of the drink curse:

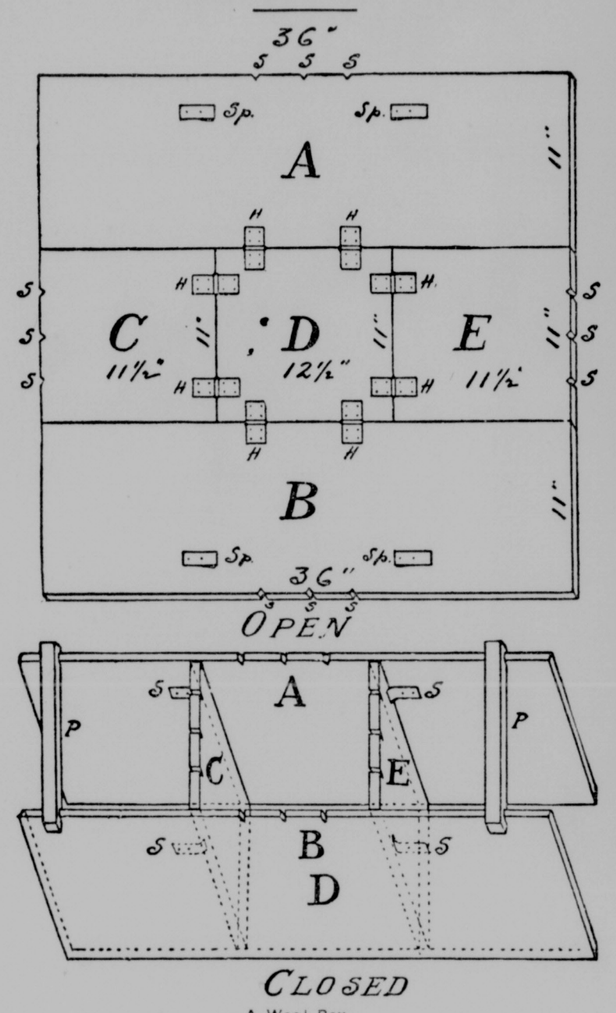
"How large a per cent of moral downfalls are caused through drink I am unable to say, but certainly it is not infrequent that you hear from many a questioned youth for an answer, 'I was somewhat under the influence of liquor.' Through drunkenness and in drunkenness one accustoms himself to conditions which, under ordinary circumstances, would be religiously shunned. In course of time the sense of shame is overcome, and silenced, and the evil habits are looked upon as an every-day necessity. The cases when a young man will in cold-bloodedness and with a clear head, and with decided intention, throw himself into the arms of prostitution are very seldom in comparison with those that happen under the influence of liquor. A British army physician has shown figuratively that sickness in a troop is much less among the total abstainers than with the balance of the men."

Alcohol Is Poison Principle.

Alcohol is the poison principle in all liquors produced by distillation or fermentation. To say that a drink is "intoxicating" is to say that its essential note or qua is poison—"toxicum"—and its consumption ultimates in death, though use in small quantities may comport with apparent health and long continued life. This does not militate against the fact that alcohol if not lethal in immediate result, is a narcotic, affecting the organ of the mind.

PRACTICAL WOOL RECEPTACLE ATTRACTIVE IN APPEARANCE

Details Given Herewith for Construction of Inexpensive Box for Packing Fleece So That None of Black Ends Will Show and Keep It Regular and Compact —Any Farmer Can Make One.



A Wool Box.

There are several kinds of wool boxes used by growers in tying up fleece wools, but the following shows a cheap, practical box that can be easily made by any farmer who can use a saw, square and screwdriver, writes Roscoe Wood in the Breeders' Gazette.

Take three 1-inch boards two feet long and one foot wide, clear pine, or, what is better, oak or walnut; they should be planed and smoothed so that they are about seven-eighths inch thick and 11 inches wide. Saw one of these boards into three pieces, one, D, 12½ inches long, the other two, C and E, 11 inches long. Fasten each of the shorter pieces to each end of the piece D with strong iron hinges, which should be set into the board so that when opened the boards lie close together. Then on the sides of the piece D fasten the 3-foot pieces, A and B, one on each side, in like manner, placing these hinges so that these four boards will raise and form a box open on the top. Here one can tie the fleece, with the piece D forming the bottom and the others the sides. Notches can be cut in the outside edges of these boards to hold the strings.

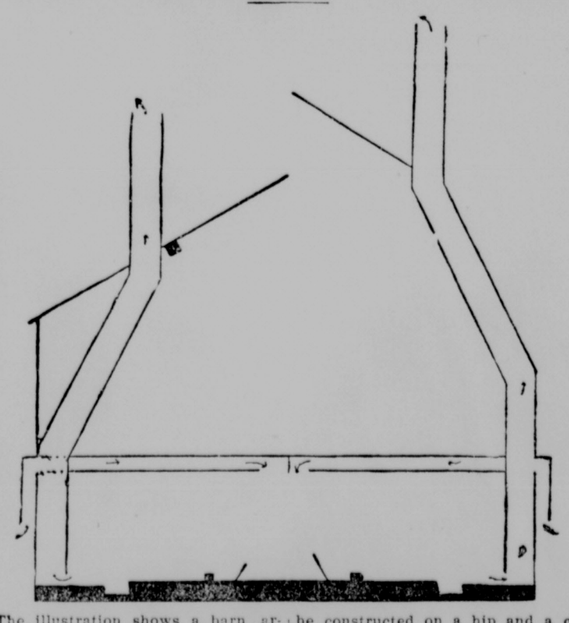
Put on the fleece the shorn side on the open box, raise the sides A and B and hold together with pieces P, P, 1 by 2 inches, about 17 inches long, notched on each end so as to hold these sides, at a width equal to that of the end pieces C and E. Then raise the end pieces C and E to an upright position, and let them be held in place by a heavy steel spring set in on each side on A and B, at a place so that C and E will be held at a right angle to the bottom, D. These springs should be about 1½ inches wide, and set into the board about 2 inches from the top edge, and set far enough into the board so that in shutting the ends these springs will press down level with the face of the board and after the ends have passed the springs they will spring out about three-fourths inch and thus hold the end. These springs can be secured at any blacksmith's and can be fastened into the board with screws.

With such a box fleeces can be done up so that practically no black ends of the fleece show, and at the same time the fleece is regular and compact. A little extra care used in thus tying fleece wools is time well spent, for such fleeces present an attractive appearance that appeals to the buyer.

Grapes for Table.

Most home grounds could supply all the grapes needed for the family table. Concord is best adapted to a wide range of conditions. Moore's early should be relied upon at high altitudes and where the season is too short for later varieties. Niagara is the standard white grape. There are a great many varieties of grapes. It is interesting to plant quite a list of grapes when the object is to produce fruit for home use.

WELL VENTILATED COW BARN



The illustration shows a barn arranged for two rows of cows facing each other. The fresh air flues are extended from both sides and made to discharge over the feed alley, says Hoard's Dairyman. The illustration also shows how the ventilator should be constructed on a hip and a common pitch roof.

How He Did It.

At the dinner Saturday of the Military Order of Foreign Wars, Captain Carlyle L. Burridge told of a man who, returning to his domicile at cockcrow, underwent an inspection by his wife, who desired to know how he came to have a large bump on his forehead.

"That? Oh, that's where I bit myself," explained he of the night key.

"Bit yourself?" the lady repeated after him. "How could you bite yourself away up there?"

"Why, I stood of a chair," he said.—Cleveland Leader.

Just Hopes.

A gentleman never snatches his trousers away from his wife when he discovers her going through his pockets. He only hopes she will leave him enough with which to go downtown in the morning. He is perfectly welcome to go through her purse any time and help himself to anything he can find. That is what married life means. A man should not allow his feelings to be hurt when his wife runs across loose change or a roll in his pockets; he ought to play the game and take such little conjugal pastimes for granted.

RIVALS GRANDEUR OF SWISS LAKES

Edine Francis Tisdel

TEMPLE of VINEGAR
LAKE AMATITLAN

LAKE ATITLAN

LAKE YSABAL

BORED by the loveliness of Norway's fiords and grown weary of the soft beauty of the Italian and the rugged grandeur of the Swiss lakes, the blase globe trotter turns in search of some new enchanted spot where the realization that it is seen for the first time lends again some zest to life.

The world is fast grasping the fact that in the comparatively small space between Mexico and the isthmus of Panama lies, as it were, the Land of Promise—a promise of wealth incalculable to the realm of commerce, through the cultivation and development of marvelously rich and fertile countries which are being opened up with wonderful rapidity by the network of railroads that are spreading throughout the five beautiful republics of Central America. More than a land of promise to the archaeologist, who has here a vast field for research wherein to unravel the mystery which surrounds the history of the ancient American civilization and throw some light upon the origin of the people whose wonderful works are evidenced in the ruins of prehistoric cities found hidden in dense tropical forests. A land of beautiful realities to even the ordinary tourist, who finds easily accessible a wealth of scenic beauty unsurpassed and a perfection of climate rarely equaled.

This is particularly true of Guatemala, the most northern of the Central American republics and our nearest neighbor after Mexico. It is reached by a three days' delightful sail on the Gulf of Mexico and along the coast of British Honduras. The fine new ships of the United Fruit company give every luxury and comfort of ocean travel, and Guatemala, in the very near future, will become the Mecca of those desiring to escape the cold and gloom of a northern winter. Nowhere in the world can be found more magnificent and varied scenery than that which greets the traveler, especially in the lake regions of this lovely republic. Of the four larger lakes—Peten, lying far to the north; Yzabal, near the Atlantic coast; Amatitlan, on the Guatemala Central railroad not far from Guatemala City, and Atitlan, tucked away in the mountains near the Pacific coast—there is small choice. Differing so widely, each in its way is perfect, characteristic of its location and climate.

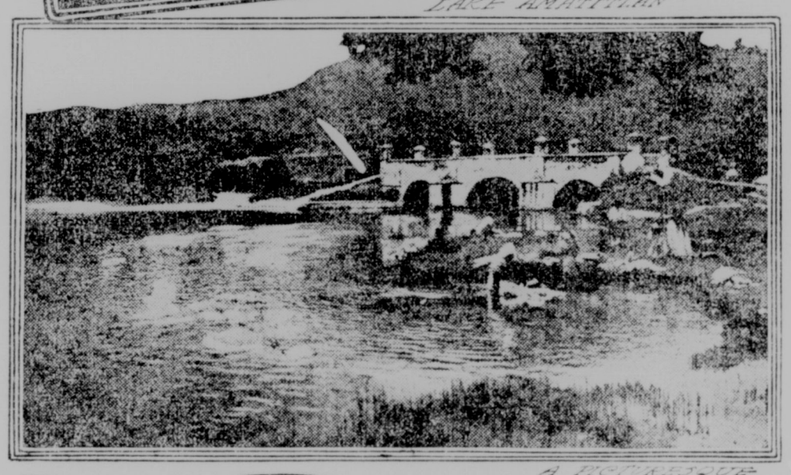
Upon our arrival at Puerto Barrios we concluded to visit Lake Yzabal before going up to the City of Guatemala. After one night of rest, therefore, we boarded the little mail boat which carried us out from the landlocked bay, a short distance across the Gulf of Amatique and along the shore line, where graceful palms stirred lazily in the perfumed breeze, to Livingston. This town is picturesquely situated on a bluff at the mouth of the Rio Dulce, or Sweet river. A new hotel, with comfortable rooms and excellent cuisine, has lately been opened here, and a day or two may be well spent enjoying the many unusual scenes in this quaint little town.

From the porch of the Hotel Rio Dulce we look down through a maze of palm trees, across the thatched roofs of the town, to the sparkling waters of the bay, where the Caribs dart back and forth in graceful canoes. In a kneeling posture and with only the use of a paddle, they skim across the water with incredible speed. The air is heavy with the scent of jasmine and gardenias; the gleam of oranges and the tiny golden balls of the cumquat meet the eye at every turn, and towering above all the great spreading branches of the wonderful breadfruit tree.

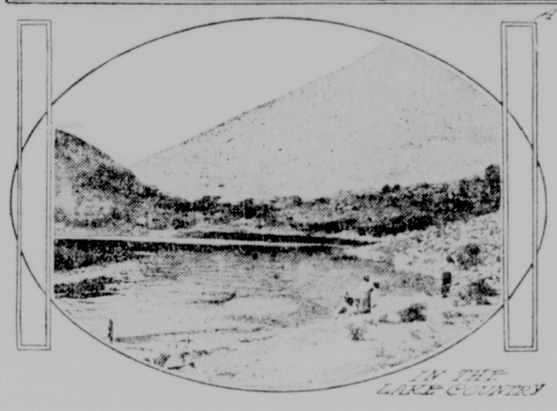
Lake Yzabal lies about 50 miles inland and a regular line of steamers ply between Livingston and Pansoz, in the interior on the Polochic river. We did not, however, avail ourselves of this usual means of transportation, having had a launch placed at our disposal.

For the first ten miles we followed the winding course of the Rio Dulce, the beauty of which is only comparable to that of the far-famed Saguenay. By some terrible convulsion of nature, the mountains have been rent asunder and through picturesque canyons and gorges this lovely river wends its majestic course to the sea. The shores gradually draw nearer together and we soon find ourselves shut in between towering walls of green, rising to a height of 400 to 500 feet, with dense tropical vegetation and graceful overhanging vines lazily swaying in the breeze. Here the water seems to be motionless, its glassy surface reflecting in absolute perfection of detail each leaf and flower, and not a sound breaks the silence. The only signs of life are the hundreds of beautiful white Garza, the birds which furnish Dame Fashion with the much-desired and ever-expensive aigrette. We passed occasionally a native drifting downstream in his dugout, or pitpan, as these canoes are called—his cargo a bunch of bananas or a string of fish.

The shores again receded and we entered the Gulf of Golfete, a pretty body of water some ten miles in length and dotted with numerous islands. Another narrow channel and we finally entered the lake proper. A beautiful picture is before us—the lovely expanse of water with its wooded shores rising gradually to the rugged Sierras de las Minas, to the south, and the Santacruz mountains, to the north. Here stand the picturesque ruins of the old Spanish fort of San Felipe, built in 1525 by Hernando Cortez during his march from Mexico to Honduras and erected to protect the approach to the town of Yzabal, which at that time was the principal port of entry. It is now of small importance, a sandbar having formed across the mouth of the Rio Dulce, which prevents vessels drawing over 16 feet of water from reaching this inland sea. Large brass cannon, bearing the date 1496, have been found scattered among the ruins of this old fortification.



A BOTANICAL SCENE IN GUATEMALA



IN THE LAKE COUNTRY

Neither pen nor brush can do justice to the wild beauty of the Polochic river, and those in search of new sensations can enjoy the unique experience of traveling in perfect safety through a tropical wilderness, where gayly colored parrots and inquisitive monkeys chatter at the intruder from overhanging branches, and crocodiles, with wide open mouths, lie basking in the sun.

This is the main route to the coast for the natives of the Coban and Peten districts, who bring their produce in canoes down the river to Lake Yzabal and thus to the markets of Livingston.

On the Polochic, near Panzos, is situated the great rubber plantation of "Tinajas," which covers 155,000 acres of land. It is owned by the Guatemala Central railroad and is one of the most important and richest estates of its kind in Central America.

In the northern part of the country lies the great lake of Peten, or San Andres, of which comparatively little is known, except to antiquarians. Situated in a wild, almost uninhabited part of the country, perhaps the richest in all Guatemala, it is difficult of access. This immense body of fresh water, 27 miles long and having a shore line of 70 miles, is dotted with numerous islands. On the largest of these is the town of Flores, with about 15,000 inhabitants. Near Flores are the ruins of a buried city, with stone images and monoliths covered with hieroglyphics, showing the unread history of a people which dwelt in the midst of this primeval forest ages ago.

At Lake Amatitlan we find ourselves on a much visited lake. The borders of this lovely body of water, lying only 18 miles to the south of Guatemala City, are the playgrounds of the capital. For 15 miles along its curved shore line run the tracks of the Guatemala central railroad, which, particularly on Sundays and holidays, carries many excursionists to the town of Amatitlan, the favorite resort of picnickers.

Situated at an altitude of nearly 2,000 feet above the level of the sea, 12 miles long and 3 miles wide, it is very deep and gives rise to a river, the Guastoya, which has its outlet in the Pacific ocean, 12 miles south of the port of San Jose, where it is 12 miles wide.

At the station of Laguna we find a nice little hotel, with wide porches which overlook the rippling blue waters and from where we can look across to the rich green slope of the giant volcano, Agua, which rises in one magnificent, unbroken sweep to the height of 13,000 feet. Behind it one catches a glimpse of the jagged crest of Fuego.

Amatitlan presents much to interest the scientist. The waters are strongly impregnated with sulphur and iron, and many people come here for the baths. In cases of rheumatism some remarkable cures have been made.

A curious phenomenon, which is a yearly occurrence, generally during the month of March, is an eruption which takes place at the bottom of the lake, and great quantities of sulphur rise to the surface of the water. This, for a time, is the death knell of the fish. At all other times, however, the sportsman can indulge in his favorite pastime to his heart's content. The markets of Guatemala City are daily supplied from this lake, the Mojara, a small pan fish of fine flavor, being very plentiful. Fried to a crisp brown and piping hot, these are sold by Indian women at all the stations along the lake.

Several attempts have been made to cultivate the spawn of imported white fish, but when grown to a good size the native fishermen practically exhausted the stock.

Large pieces of pumice stone are found floating on the surface of the water and along the shore. In the boiling springs which abound is done the laundry work of the city, the women taking advantage of this water heated by nature and ever ready for use. Groups of dark-skinned Indian women, in their gayly colored native costumes, kneeling by the deep blue waters amidst piles of snowy linen, present a most attractive and fascinating picture. There is also a novelty about a picnic, when eggs can be cooked without trouble by merely dropping them into one of Mother Nature's ever-boiling pots.

It has been my good fortune to see many lakes in different parts of the world, but never have I seen one more exquisitely beautiful than the curious crater lake of Atitlan, incomparable for grandeur of scenery and perfection of climate.

In the southwestern part of Guatemala, some 35 miles from the railroad and at an altitude of 5,000 feet, nature seems, on the borders of this silent body of water, to have reached the culmination of her handiwork.

Discovered first by the Spaniards in 1524, Alvarado was here victorious in a desperate battle with the natives, and, exploring the surrounding country, took possession in the name of Spain.

In the very heart of the mountains we find this lake, 30 miles in length and 10 miles in breadth. Although many streams empty their waters into it, there is no visible outlet and its depth is unknown, no soundings having been made with a line of more than 300 fathoms.

It is impossible to describe the charm and witchery of this country, bathed in moonlight, the scenery at each step becoming more impressive. We forded rushing, tumbling mountain streams, looking like cascades of silver, and we rode through silent Indian villages, where the inhabitants were sleeping in front of their strange little bamboo huts. The only sound to break the silence was the plaintive call of the whippoorwill.

We reached the village of San Lucas, on the borders of the lake, and there we found in readiness the little steamer which was to take us across to the hotel on the opposite shore, a trip of an hour and a half.

Words are inadequate to portray the scene which was before us. The great expanse of water lay like molten silver in the moonlight, the mountains, solemn and awe-inspiring, standing in serried ranks like giant sentinels to guard this treasure. A soft, pearly mist hung over all, but not so dense as to hide the perfect outline of the three great volcanoes—the two Atitlans and San Pedro. These stupendous giants rise to the height of nearly 12,000 feet and fall in one unbroken sweep to the water's edge.

In this peaceful spot the days slip by unheeded. The world and its busy life beyond the towering mountains is forgotten and we drift out upon a sea of romance and poetry.

There are many delightful excursions to be made in the vicinity, eleven quaint Indian villages, named after the apostles, dotting the shores; considerable commerce is carried on between these towns by means of canoes, and the steam launch makes the round of the lake regularly twice a week. The town of Atitlan is very picturesquely situated on a bay running inland between the two volcanoes—San Pedro and Atitlan. Not far away, snuggled close to the water's edge at the foot of Atitlan, is the "Cerro del Oro"—Mountain of Gold—where a great treasure is believed by the natives to lie buried, and the ruins of an old fort can be vaguely discerned.

Two thousand feet above the lake is the large town of Solola, capital of the province of the same name and a center of commerce. Here is obtained a fine view of the surrounding country, but by far the most beautiful is that from the height of Godines. We find ourselves at an altitude of 8,000 feet and the whole world appears to lie before us. It is true we have not the snow peaks of Switzerland, but instead is the unusual spectacle of range after range of mountains on all sides, dominated by the majestic heads of great volcanoes, seven in all, magnificent in their imposing grandeur and jealously guarding the beautiful lake, which, like a great sapphire, lies 3,000 feet below.

The filmy veil of mist which is characteristic of this region during the greater part of the year occasionally melts away, and as we stood on this spot, speechless before the wonder of this panorama, it seemed for our benefit alone to have crept silently away in the night, and earth and sky and water were perfectly revealed, outvying each other in deepest tones of blue.

But even as we gazed soft clouds formed in the valleys below and crept stealthily up, writhing and twisting like great white snakes, until once more they had encircled the mountains like giant serpents whose power even the great hills could not withstand.

Nature seemed to say that we had looked already too long upon her secret treasures, and softly but swiftly she again drew around them the gauzy mantle in which, except at rare intervals, she keeps them wrapped.

The Starling and the Organ

New York's big new Cathedral of St. John the Divine, on Morningside Heights, already has a permanent tenant. This is a starling, which apparently has settled in a shadowy niche high up above the organ, built a nest there and designs to rear a family.

The starling lends a decidedly English touch to the massive structure. From its lofty perch it looks down curiously on the assembled worshippers, as though they, not it, were the interlopers, as no doubt it feels they are. But when the organ is being played the starling forgets intrusion to join in the music. It swells its throat and starts out bravely to drown the thunder of the mighty instrument. Presently a look of perplexity steals across its countenance. It has found something against which its own shrill tones beat themselves into silence. And then it ceases its attempt at rivalry and surrenders itself to the pleasure of listening. It is a good listener. As long as the organ continues it remains attentive, confessing by its attitude that here is something superior even to bird song.

THE BEST DRESSED MAN

What Made Him So?

He was a mass of bandages, the result of a severe scalding, and when he claimed to be "the best dressed man in town," people wondered. The explanation was easy. A prompt application of a Resinol ointment dressing to the raw flesh had given instant comfort and relief from the pain and suffering. It is the best dressing for burns, scalds, cuts, wounds, felons, carbuncles, and all skin abrasions. It promptly allays irritation and inflammation and stops itching instantly. Resinol ointment cures eczema, psoriasis, barber's itch, rash of poison ivy, herpes, scald head and all skin eruptions. Resinol ointment is free from any injurious ingredient. It's as good for baby as for the older members of the family. Resinol ointment is put up in opal jars; price fifty cents and a dollar. At all druggists. Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JUNE 8, 1911.

IF THE editor of the Mountain Democrat, president of and apologist for the Board of County School Commissioners of Garrett County, is determined to pursue a mud slinging campaign anent the action of the County Commissioners in the school appropriation, making Commissioner Dixon his especial target, we suggest that Mr. Dixon's social relations have not been disturbed by the cant and vituperation piled upon him by the Democrat, nor have his domestic affairs been so impaired as to call for the interposition of the divorce court.

CONVICTS ON ROADS.

The putting of convicts on out-of-door work has proven satisfactory in some states, where it has been tried as an experiment, but not in all. Nevertheless, it might be worth while to try the plan in Maryland. The newspapers throughout the State have taken up the subject and Engineer Crosby, of the Good Roads Commission, in a recent article suggested again the advisability of putting them to work on the roads the State is building. Mr. Crosby points out that it would be comparatively a simple matter to use convict labor in stone quarries and that the cheapening of this material would result in a decided advantage to the State.

It would seem possible for Maryland to experiment in this direction with prison labor; though it can hardly be called an experiment, since a number of other States have found an outlet in road work for employment of convicts. In Colorado, opportunity to work on the roads is held out as a reward for well-behaved prisoners and serves as a strong incentive to them.

Aside from the saving to the State in the matter of money, the departure seems to have much to commend it from from the sociological and humanitarian side. If punishment is meant to reform it would certainly have a much better chance to produce results if those upon whom it is visited were kept in the out-of-doors and had the benefit of the good health and the uplifting influences which work in such conditions would bring as compared with that done within the close confinement of and the necessarily vitiating surroundings of a prison.

THE PEOPLES' FORUM

Memorial Day in Oakland as Seen There for the First Time by a Visitor.

To the Editor of The Republican:

An unanticipated happening secured this correspondent the pleasure of witnessing the observations, May 30th, 1911, in comformity with the National custom each year of respecting the memory and beautifying the graves of soldiers, and long will he retain some of the deep impressions created. The design is a worthy one and right thinking citizens should guard the high object from abuse by the thoughtless and cause it to be transmitted unimpaired to posterity. It was a cause of no surprise and the observance in Oakland not only creditable to the best of that community but such a public tribute as the occasion deserved. In fact the town, with almost its entire population on the street, wore the revered hush of a Sabbath day, a respect that was not only manifest in the assembling, the procession, the programme in the cemetery but in the public conduct during the balance of the day. Surely this is as it should be. Flowers and good will, warm fellowship and tender unison lent a tinge of mellowed coloring to the many features of the day in Oakland and her people should view with pride a bearing so commendable. In the formation of the procession for the march to the cemetery were melancholy lessons taught by time. Probably less than twenty participants in the Civil War were there to walk in that column, and that few now too aged to bear a musket or to step erect as in the days of war. It recalled this incident: Not long after the verdict pronounced in arms at Appomattox, Dr. Hunter McGuir, no less distinguished for brilliant attainments as a student than in the field of his profession, on a quiet Sunday afternoon strolled through the wards of an army hospital in Richmond where a few of the most hopeless cases from both armies had been left. On one cot lay a patient from which humanity would shrink. While emaciated to skeleton, his rolling eyes were fixed toward the ceiling, and a deep fracture over the forehead seemed to be growing in such a way as to press back the brain. No one knew either of the injury or of the soldier; he was found there and left by successive crews in hospital management. The skilled practioner aware that death alone could offer relief in the existing condition, decided to call the next day competent aid and remove the bone from the direction in which it was growing. After the knife and saw had served their function, the surgeon, anxious to catch the first expression from a mind so long in darkness, was intently watching the wear-away of what had been administered before the use of the knife, when suddenly the eyes dropped upon him while the face relaxed under a return of intelligence. Holding a ear close to the quivering lips, he clearly heard the fellow ask: "Where is the army today? yesterday it was at Manassas." The whole period from Manassas down to that hour in 1865 had passed as but a twinkling, as but the flight of a bird over a path or the drop of a leaf from a bough.

Remembering, in its vast ramification from 1861-1865, there was in the Federal army an enlistment of 2,700,000 soldiers, and considering that with the thinned ranks of old men unsteadily marching in the Oakland column, it seemed indeed that we might ask, Where is the army today? but yesterday it was at Appomattox.

In a sweet, sober hour that afternoon, when the cemetery had been vacated by the many who had so recently thronged it, a quiet walk through that Cty of the Silent disclosed how transcendently beautiful loving hands had made it. The whole scene was a picture of fresh memorials in flowers while the air was ladened with their delightful perfume.

Among the many graphic recitals from the pen of Sir Walter Scott, can there be one appealing more directly to his reader that that of Old Morality, far down in the winter of life, on his jaded white pony, riding from one graveyard to another, cleaning the tombs and reproducing with chisel and mallet the names and deeds of an honorable ancestry that fought and fell in the defense of the exiled House of Stuarts?

With similar loyalty and devotion it well becomes our people all over this broad land, and from both sides of the great issue of 1861-1865, to pause a day in the year and pay tribute to heroes whose fidelity in hardships and valor in battle brought splendor to the glory of American arms. RELLIM.

THIS HIGH GRADE STEEL RANGE COSTS YOU NOTHING

as compared with any other range of any make whatsoever, that you might buy.

¶ Any other range; any range you ever saw takes its draft through the front end, next to the fire and right underneath the grate.

¶ This air is about 50 to 70 degrees in temperature. The range must burn enough coal to bring the temperature up to 700 degrees, or baking heat

¶ Notice that-ordinary ranges have to burn enough coal to raise the air from 70 to 700 or 630 degrees.

CHAMPION RANGES

take the draft in at the opposite end, pass it under the bottom before it goes under the grate, and the air picks up enough from the waste heat under the bottom to reach about 250 degrees.

¶ The fire has to burn only enough coal to raise it from 250 to 700—450 degrees, as against 630 in ordinary ranges.

¶ CHAMPION RANGES save about 1-3 in fuel, every day they are used. This will pay the full cost of ther ange in 3 to 5 years, making it cheaper to you than any other.

¶ No experiment; been made and used for 18 years by thousands. Patented; can only be had from our agents. Guaranteed as represented or money back.

DECORATION DAY ADDRESS

Delivered by Capt. J. M. Jarboe in Oakland Memorial Day

Friends and Comrades:

As an old soldier I feel that I should say something here today and I will ask you to excuse me if I should break down, for I cannot think of the war and hold tears from streaking down my face, and as the Rev. Mr. Williamson, the son of a veteran, is to deliver the memorial address, I think it best to have my say first, as I fear that after I have listened to him I would not have sufficient assurance to follow. I had three brothers and four cousins soldiers in the army—seven in the Federal army and one in the Confederate army. One was killed at the battle of Chicamauga, one in Texas, one died from wounds received in West Virginia. The one who lived in Missouri had his home and all he possessed burned and destroyed by Quantrel and his men. He enlisted in the Federal army and contracted some disease from which he never recovered and died some years after the close of the war. One was taken to a hospital in Baltimore, he had an operation performed and died under the knife. The other two died from old age. I am still here alone of all my race who were engaged in that unnatural war. I was badly wounded once. I have as the saying goes had some bad, some good luck, but above all I have been blessed with good health. So viewing it from both sides I have squared the balance sheet and I am satisfied. Many of my ancestors have lived to a great old age, but I realize the fact that time is fast flying and at best it cannot be a great many years until I too shall hear the signal, taps, lights out, and cross the great divide to join my comrades in the silent camping ground.

It has been said by some wise-acre that the young and the middle aged live in the future, the aged in the past, as I do not know how he would proceed to prove his assertion, as no one man knows another man, only in part, I must conclude that he is basing his opinion on his own experience. But there is one thing I can say, and I believe that all old soldiers that had experience will agree with me, and that is this: an old soldier can never forget the war. It has left a nervous shock that will precede every other thing while the records of memory remain. An old soldier that has forgotten the war, I can only say, that the records of memory have fled, or his heart has become petrified. I do not mean the shock of battle. Of course it is not pleasant to stand up and be shot down, nor is it pleasant to shoot down men, especially men of your own country. But it is the awful carnage which meets your eye after the battle is over. Still later when the telegram is brought friends, hunting a dead or wounded father, brother or son, the shrieks of the friends, the moans and and cry of the wounded. I know of no other words that will express it, it is simply hell incarnate.

I know you are anxious to hear Mr. Williamson and I dare not take time to relate instances of war. If I had I would tell of the fall of two men that were killed in the Valley of Virginia, James A. Mulligan, Colonel of the 23rd Illinois, and Colonel Turner Ashby, of the Confederate Black Horse Cavalry. I will only say this for them: they had nerves of steel and souls that could dare, and hearts as brave as ever beat responsive to their country's call.

I will here leave the field of battle by making the assertion that this country is sometimes run by sentiment, without reason or justice.

I saw during the war at the field hospital a little nurse. She was about twenty-five or twenty-six years age. She weighed less than 100 pounds. She was active and quick as a squirrel. She was untiring and a great favorite with the soldiers. Dr. Graham, a noted surgeon in the army, who was if memory serves me aright, six feet two inches in height, said to me "that little girl is all heart and brain, and the noblest woman I ever saw, except my mother." As I expected he married the little nurse. This was in the fall of 1864. Suppose she had not married and remained in the army until the war was over, and had some time since made application for a pension, what would she have gotten? $12, or may be by an Act of Congress, $25 or $30. Yet Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Cleveland, whom I think were left in good circumstances received $6,000 each per year. Mrs. Logan I think received $2,000. Is this not sentiment without reason?

I mention these things because I see by some of the magazines and newspapers, articles charging the old soldiers with fraud and false statements. I would advise them to go to the War Department and examine the company rolls that were made every sixty days and they will there see who were absent without leave and who were dropped from the rolls, or deserted.

I have this to say about pensions: I think the government has been liberal. The soldiers cannot agree themselves about pensions. The prisoners of war want extra pension, those of them that are totally disabled are receiving extra pensions, those that were partially disabled are pensioned like other soldiers. Many confined in prison were there but a short time. The members of Congress are playing politics. They are looking forward to 1912. They want your vote. There will nothing be done with pensions during the extra session.

I do not wish to be humbugged about it, they do the best for themselves. Some speakers that are fond of being on the rostrum frequently state that they do not wish to be called pessimists. I am no speaker.

So far as what I have to say you can hitch any little old name to it that suits you, I only want to say what I think, or what I think I am thinking, and I will ask you what you think of Carnegie's ten millions for peace.

The bounds of the greatest nation or the most expensive empire cannot circumscribe the generosity of the liberal mind. Men in whatever situation are still in a great measure the same. They are exposed to similar dangers and misfortunes. They have not wisdom to foresee or power to prevent the evils incident to human nature. They hang as were in perpetual suspense, hope and fear, sickness and death, hope and want.

A chain of dependence subsists throughout the animal creation. It is said by some that you can do anything you wish if you have the money. I do not think so. How many million would it have taken to have bought peace in our Civil War? I cannot say it had to be fought to a finish. It is not for me to say what Mr. Carnegie must do with his millions. I believe he wouldhave secured more lasting fame if he had made a monthly or yearly dividends for the benefit of the men who aided him in stacking up his milions by the sweat of their brow.

Another thought: The Civil War is over, and I believe that the men who fought us so hard now think it was for the best that it ended as it did at Appomattox. I know not, but I think, that most, if not all of the Southern states are paying pensions to the ex-Confederate soldiers. Would not the $10,000,000 applied in this way have been a help to the Southern states and for a good cause?

While our ranks are growing thinner,
Comrades falling one by one,
Let us closer stand together
'Till life's battles shall be done.

Let us keep the fires fraternal
Burning brightly in each breast,
'Till for us the taps are sounded
And we take our final rest.

CHAPTER I.

Destiny and the Babu.

Breaking suddenly upon the steady drumming of the trucks, the prolonged and husky roar of a locomotive whistle saluted an immediate grade-crossing.

Roused by this sound from his solitary musings in the parlor car of which he happened temporarily to be the sole occupant, Mr. David Amber put aside the magazine over which he had been dreaming, and looked out of the window, catching a glimpse of woodland road shining white between somber walls of stunted pine. Lazily he consulted his watch.

"It's not for nothing," he observed pensively, "that this railroad wears its reputation; we are consistently late."

His gaze, again diverted to the flying countryside, noted that it had changed character, pine yielding to scrub-oak and second-growth — the ragged vestments of an area some years since denuded by fire. This, too, presently swung away, giving place to cleared land—arable acres golden with the stubble of garnered harvests or sentinelled with unkempt shocks of corn.

In the south a shimmer of laughing gold and blue edged the faded horizon.

Eagerly the young man leaned forward, dark eyes lightening, lips parting as if already he could taste the savour of the sea.

Then, quite without warning, a deep elbow of the bay swept up almost to the railway, its surface mirror-like, profoundly blue, profoundly beautiful.

"I think," said the traveler softly—"I think it's mighty fine to be alive and—here!"

He lounged back comfortably again, smiling as he watched the wheeling landscape, his eyes glowing with expectancy. For his cares were negligible, his content boundless; he was experiencing, for the first time in many years, a sense of freedom akin to that felt by a schoolboy at the beginning of the summer vacation. The work of his heart and hand for a little time belonged equally to a forgotten Yesterday and an uncontemplated Tomorrow; he existed only for the confident Today. He had put behind him the haunts of men, and his yearning for the open places that lay before him was almost childlike in its fervency; he would, indeed, have been quite satisfied if assured that he was to find nothing to do save to play aimlessly in the sun. But, in point of fact, he looked forward to an employment much more pleasurable; he was off to shoot duck with his very dear friend, Mr. Authony Quain of Tanglewood lodge, Nokomis, Long Island.

Again the whistle bawled uncannily, and the train began to moderate its speed. Objects in the foreground that otherwise had been mere streaked blurs assumed recognizable contours. North of the line a string of squat, square, unlovely "frame" edifices, aligned upon a country road, drifted back. A brakeman popped head and shoulders into the car and out again, leaving the echo of an abrupt bark to be interpreted at the passenger's leisure.

Slowly jolting across a rutted, dusty road, the cars stopped. Amber, alighting, found himself upon a length of board-walk platform and confronted by a distressingly matter-of-fact wooden structure, combining the functions of waiting room and ticket and telegraph offices. From its eaves depended a weather-worn board bearing the legend: "Nokomis."

The train, pausing only long enough to disgorge from the baggage car a trunk or two and from the day coaches a thin trickle of passengers, flung on into the wilderness, cracked bell clanking somewhat disdainfully.

By degrees the platform cleared, the erstwhile patrons of the road and the station loafers—for the most part hall-marked natives of the region—straggling off upon their several ways, some afoot, a majority in dilapidated surreys and buckboards. Amber watched them go with unassumed indifference; their type interested him little. But in their company he presently discovered one, a figure so thoroughly foreign and aloof in attitude, that it caught his eye, and, having caught, held it clouded with perplexity.

Abruptly he abandoned his belongings and gave chase, overtaking the object of his attention at the far end of the station.

"Doggott!" he cried. "I say, Doggott!"

His hand, falling lightly upon the man's shoulder, brought him squarely about, his expression transiently startled, if not a shade truculent.

"Doggott, what the deuce brings you here? And Mr. Rutton?"

Amber's cordiality educed no response. The gray eyes, meeting eyes dark, kindly, and penetrating, flickered and fell; so much emotion they betrayed, no more, and that as disingenuous as you could wish.

"Doggott!" insisted Amber, disconcerted. "Surely you haven't forgotten me—Mr. Amber?"

The man shook his head. "Beg pardon, sir," he said; "you've got my nyme 'andy enough, but I don't know you, and—"

"But Mr. Rutton?"

"Is a party I've never 'eard of, if you'll excuse my sayin' so, no more'n I 'ave of yourself, sir."

"Well," began Amber; but paused, his face hardening as he looked the man up and down, nodding slowly.

"Per'aps," continued Mr. Doggott, unabashed, "you mistyke me for my brother, 'Enery Doggott. 'E was 'ome, in England, larst I 'eard of 'im. We look a deal alike, I've been told."

"You would be," admitted Amber drily; and, shutting his teeth upon his inherent contempt for a liar, he swung away, acknowledging with a curt nod the civil "Good arfternoon, sir," that followed him.

The man had disappeared by the time Amber regained his kit-bag and gun-case; standing over which he surveyed his surroundings with some annoyance, discovering that he now shared the station with none but the ticket agent. A shambling and disconsolate youth, clad in a three-days' growth of beard, a checked jumper and khaki trousers, this person lounged negligently in the doorway of the waiting room and, caressing his rusty chin with nicotine-dyed fingers, regarded the stranger in Nokomis with an air of subtle yet vaguely melancholy superiority.

"If ye're lookin' for th' hotel," he volunteered unexpectedly, "there ain't none," and effected a masterly retreat into the ticket booth.

Amused, the despised outlander picked up his luggage and followed amiably. "I'm not looking for the hotel that ain't," he said, planting himself in front of the grating; "but I expected to be met by some one from Tanglewood—"

"Thet's the Quain place, daown by th' ba-ay," interpolated the youth from unplumbed depths of mournful abstraction.

"It is. I wired yesterday—"

"Yeour name's Amber, ain't it?"

"Yes, I—"

"Well, Quain didn't get yeour message till this mornin'. I sent a kid daown with it 'baout ten o'clock."

"But why the—but I wired yesterday afternoon!"

"I knaow ye did," assented the youth wearily. "It come through raound closin' time and they wa'n't nobody baound that way, so I held it over."

"This craze for being characteristic," observed Mr. Amber obscurely, "is the only thing that really stands in the way of Nokomis becoming a thriving metropolis. Do you agree with me? No matter." He smiled engagingly; a seasoned traveler this, who could recognize the futility of bickering over the irreparable. Moreover, he had to remind himself in all fairness, the blame was, in part at least, his own; for he had thoughtlessly worded his telegram, "Will be with you tomorrow afternoon," and it was wholly like Quain that he should have accepted the statement at its face value, regardless of the date line.

"I can leave my things here for a little while, I presume?" Amber suggested after a pause.

The ticket agent stared stubbornly into the infinite, making no sign till a coin rang on the window-ledge; when he started, eyed the offering with fugitive mistrust, and gloomily possessed himself of it. "I'll look after them," he said. "Be ye thinkin' of walkin'?"

"Yes," said Amber over his shoulder. He was already moving toward the door.

"Knaow yeour wa-ay?"

"I've been here before, thank you."

Crossing the tracks, he addressed himself to the southward stretching highway. Walking briskly at first, he soon left behind the railway station with its few parasitic cottages, a dip in the land hid them, and he had hereafter for all company his thoughts, the desultory road, a vast and looming sky, and bare fields hedged with impoverished forest.

Amber had professed acquaintance with his way; it seemed rather to be intimacy, for when he chose to forsake the main traveled road he did so boldly, striking off upon a wagon track which, leading across the fields, delved presently into the heart of the forest.

The hush of the forest world bore heavily upon his senses; the slight and stealthy rustlings in the brush, the clear dense ringing of some remote ax, an attenuated clamor of cawing from some far crows' congress, but served to accentuate its influence.

Then into the silence crept a sound to rouse him from his formless reverie. At first a mere pulsing in the stillness barely to be distinguished from the song of the surf; but presently a pounding, ever louder and more insistent. He paused, attentive; and while he waited the drumming, minute by minute gaining in volume, swept swiftly toward him—the rhythmic hoofbeats of a single horse madly ridden. When it was close upon him he stepped back into the tangled undergrowth, making room; for the track was anything but wide.

Simultaneously there burst into view, at the end of a brief aisle of trees, the horse—a vigorous black brute with white socks and muzzle—running freely, apparently under constraint neither of whip nor of spur. In the saddle a girl leaned low over the horn—a girl with eyes rapturous, face brilliant, lips parted in the least of smiles. A fold of her byack habit-skirt, whipping out, almost snapped in Amber's face, so close to him she rode; yet she seemed not to see him, and very likely did not. A splendid sketch in black and white, of youthful spirit and joy of motion; so she passed on and was gone. . . .

Hardly, however, had the forest closed upon the picture, ere a cry, a heavy crashing as of a horse threshing about in the underbrush, and a woman's scream of terror, sent Amber, in one movement, out into the road again and running at a pace which, had he been conscious of it, would have surprised him.

A short 50 yards separated him from the bend in the way round which the horse and its rider had vanished. He had no more than gained this point than he was obliged to pull up sharply to avoid running into the girl herself.

Although dismounted, she was on her feet, and apparently uninjured. She stood with one hand against the trunk of a tree, on the edge of a small clearing wherein the axes of the local lumbermen had but lately been busy. Her horse had disappeared; the rumble of his hoofs, diminuendo, told the way he had gone.

So much Amber comprehended in a single glance; with a second he sought the cause of the accident, and identified it with a figure so outre and bizarre that he momentarily and excusably questioned the testimony of his senses.

At a little distance from the girl, in the act of addressing her, stood a man, obese, gross, abnormally distended with luxurious and sluggish living, as little common to the scene

So She Passed and Was Gone.

as a statue of Phoebus Apollo had been. A babu of Bengal, every inch of him, from his dirty red-and-white turban to his well-worn and cracked patent-leather shoes. His body was enveloped in a complete suit of emerald silk, much soiled and faded, and girt with a sash of many colors, crimson predominating. His hands, fat, brown, and not overclean, alternately fluttered apologetically and rubbed one another with a suggestion of extreme urbanity; his lips, thick, sensual, and cruel, mouthed a broken stream of babu-English; while his eyes, nearly as small and quite as black as shoe buttons—eyes furtive, crafty, and cold—suddenly distended and became fixed, as with amazement, at the instant of Amber's appearance.

Instinctively, as soon as he had mastered his initial stupefaction, Amber stepped forward and past the girl, placing himself between her and this preposterous apparition, as if to shield her. He held himself wary and alert, and was instant to halt the babu when he, with the air of a dog cringing to his master's feet for punishment, would have drawn nearer

"Stop right there!" Amber told him crisply; and got for response obedience, a low salaam, and the Hindu salutation accorded only to persons of high rank: "Hazoor!" But before the babu could say more the American addressed the girl. "What did he do?" he inquired, without looking at her. "Frighten your horse?"

"Just that." The girl's tone was edged with temper. "He jumped out from behind that woodpile; the horse shied and threw me."

"You're not hurt, I trust?"

"No—thank you; but"—with a nervous laugh—"I'm furiously angry."

"That's reasonable enough." Amber returned undivided attention to the Bengali. "Now then," he demanded sternly, "what've you got to say for yourself? What do you mean by frightening this lady's horse? What are you doing here, anyway?"

Almost groveling, the babu answered him in Urdu: "Hazoor, I am your slave—"

Without thinking Amber couched his retort in the same tongue: "Count yourself lucky you are not, dog!"

"Nay, hazoor, but I meant no harm. I was resting, being fatigued, in the shelter of the wood, when the noise of hoofs disturbed me and I stepped out to see. When the woman was thrown I sought to assist her, but she threatened me with her whip."

"That is quite true," the girl cut in over Amber's shoulder. "I don't think he intended to harm me, but it's purely an accident that he didn't."

Inasmuch as the babu's explanation had been made in fluent, vernacular Urdu, Amber's surprise at the girl's evident familiarity with that tongue was hardly to be concealed. "You understand Urdu?" he stammered.

"Aye," she told him in that tongue, "and speak it, too."

"You know this man, then?"

"No. Do you?"

"Not in the least. How should I?"

"You yourself speak Urdu."

"Well, but—" The situation hardly lent itself to such a discussion; he had the babu first to dispose of. Amber resumed his cross-examination. "Who are you?" he demanded. "And what is your business in this place?"

The fat yellowish-brown face was distorted by a fugitive grimace of deprecation. "Hazoor, I am Behari Lal Chatterji, solicitor, of the Inner Temple."

"Well? And your business here?"

"Hazoor, that is for your secret ear." The babu drew himself up, assuming a certain dignity. "It is not meet that the message of the Bell should be uttered in the hearing of an Englishwoman, hazoor."

"What are you drivelling about?" In his blank wonder, Amber returned to English as to a tongue more suited to his urgent need of forcible expression. "And, look here, you stop calling me 'Hazoor.' I'm no more a hazoor than you are—idiot!"

"Nay," contended the babu reproachfully; "is it right that you should seek to hoodwink me? Have I not eyes with which to see, ears that can hear you speak our tongue, hazoor? I am no child, to be played with—I, the appointed Mouthpiece of the Voice!"

"I know naught of your 'Voice' or its mouthpiece; but certainly you are no child. You are either mad, or insolent—or a fool to be kicked." And in exasperation Amber took a step toward the man as if to carry into effect his implied threat.

Alarmed, the babu cringed and retreated a pace; then, suddenly, raising an arm, indicated the girl. "Hazoor!" he cried. "Be quick—the woman faints!" And as Amber hastily turned, with astonishing agility the babu sprang toward him.

Warned by his moving shadow as much as by the girl's cry, Amber leapt aside and lifted a hand to strike; but before he could deliver a blow it was caught and a small metallic object thrust into it. Upon this his fingers closed instinctively, and the babu sprang back, panting and quaking.

"The Token, hazoor, the Token!" he quavered. "It is naught but that—the Token!"

"Token, you fool!" cried Amber, staring stupidly at the man. "What in thunder—!"

"Nay, hazoor; how should I tell you now, when another sees and hears? At another time, hazoor, in a week, or a day, or an hour, mayhap, I come again—for your answer. Till then and forever I am your slave, hazoor: the dust beneath your feet. Now I go.

And with a haste that robbed the courtesy of its grace, the Bengali salaamed, then wheeled square about and, hitching his clothing round him, made off with a celerity surprising in one of his tremendous bulk, striking directly into the heart of the woods.

Amber was left to knit his brows over the object which had been forced upon him so unexpectedly.

It proved to be a small, cubical box, something more than an inch square, fashioned of bronze and elaborately decorated with minute relief work in the best manner of ancient Indian craftsmanship.

"May I see, please?" The voice of the girl at his side recalled to Amber her existence. "May I see, too, please, Mr. Amber?" she repeated.

CHAPTER II.

The Girl and the Token.

In his astonishment he looked round quickly to meet the gaze of mischievous eyes that strove vainly to seem simple and sincere.

Aware that he faced an uncommonly pretty woman, who chose to study him with a straighforward interest he was nothing loath to imitate, he took time to see that she was very fair of skin, with that creamy, silken whiteness that goes with hair of the shade commonly and unjustly termed red. Her nose he thought a trace too severely perfect in its modeling, but redeemed by a broad and thoughtful brow, a strong yet absolutely feminine chin, and a mouth . . . Well, as to her mouth, the young man selected a rosebud to liken it to.

Having catalogued these several features, he had a mental portrait of her he was not likely soon to forget. For it's not every day that one encounters so pretty a girl in the woods of Long Island's southern shore—or anywhere else, for that matter. He felt sure of this.

But he was equally certain that he was as much a stranger to her as she to him.

She, on her part, had been busy satisfying herself that he was a very presentable young man, in spite of the somewhat formidable reputation he wore as a person of learned attainments. If his looks attracted, it was not because he was handsome, for that he wasn't, but because of certain signs of strength to be discerned in his face, as well as an engaging manner which he owned by right of ancestry, his ascendants for several generations having been notable representatives of one of the First Families of Virginia.

The pause which fell upon the girl's use of his name, and during which they looked one another over, was sufficiently prolonged to excuse the reference to it which Amber chose to make.

"I'm sure," he said with his slow smile, "that we're satisfied we've never met before. Aren't we?"

"Quite," assented the girl.

"That only makes it the more mysterious, of course."

"Yes," said she provokingly; "doesn't it?"

"You know, you're hardly fair to me," he asserted. "I'm rapidly beginning to entertain doubts of my senses. When I left the train at Nokomis station I met a man I know as well as I know myself—pretty nearly; and he denied me to my face. Then, a little later, I encounter a strange, mad Bengali, who apparently takes me for somebody he has business with. And finally, you call me by name.

"It isn't so very remarkable, when you come to consider it," she returned soberly. "Mr. David Amber is rather well known, even in his own country. I might very well have seen your photograph published in connection with some review of—let me see. . . . Your latest book was entitled 'The Peoples of the Hindu Kush,' wasn't it? You see, I haven't read it."

"That's sensible of you, I'm sure. Why should you? . . . But your theory doesn't hold water, because I won't permit my publishers to print my picture, and, besides, reviews of such stupid books generally appear in profound monthlies which abhor illustrations."

"Oh!" She received this with a note of disappointment. "Then my explanation won't do?"

"I'm sorry," he laughed, "but you'll have to be more ingenious—and practical."

"And you won't show me the present the babu made you?"

He closed his fingers jealously over the bronze box. "Not until . . ."

"You insist on reciprocity?"

"Absolutely."

"That's very unkind of you."

"How?" he demanded blankly.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

His Self-Defense.

"When a man's married," said Rose Stahl, "his excuses begin. "Did you ever hear how Sambo got out of it when he was caught in the turkey coop?"

"'Deed, mistah,' he said, "'deed, sah, I isn't a-stealin' dis yah bird. I'se takin' it in self-defense. Hones' I is!'

"'Self-defense?' roared the indignant owner, shaking him by the collar. 'What kind of a lie are you trying to tell me?'

"'Please, sah,' wailed the much-abused Sambo, 'mah wife she say ef I doan' fotch home a turkey she gwine to break ebery bone in mah body. An' so I jes' 'bleeged ter pertect mah-se'f!'"—Young's Magazine.

Blank Filled Corectly.

"When Lizzie Timms filled out her application blank to teach school," laughs the neighbor, "she wrote on the line asking what her age was, 'My age is twenty years old.' Wasn't that a ludicrous mistake?"

"Oh, I don't know. You misunderstand it. She was honest. She was giving the age of her age, not of herself. She has claimed to be twenty for about that long.—Judge.

ELEVEN YEARS OF HEALTH.

Kidney Trouble Never Returned.

Mrs. Everett Griffith, 2845 E. Indiana Ave., Evansville, Ind., says: "I was certainly in bad shape from kidney disease and it is really a wonder that I am alive today. The kidney secretions passed irregularly and were abnormally thick; I had bad spells with my head and at times could hardly stand. My left limb below the knee became so badly swollen that I began to treat myself for dropsy and my back was so sore and lame I could not raise my arms above my head. I was finally induced to take Doan's Kidney Pills and in six weeks I was well. My cure was made in 1899 and I have enjoyed excellent health ever since."

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Erie, Pa. — "I suffered for five years from female troubles and at last was almost helpless. I went to three doctors and they did me no good, so my sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken only two bottles I could see a big change, so I took six bottles and I am now strong and well again. I don't know how to express my thanks for the good it has done me and I hope all suffering women will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It was worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. ENDLICH, R. F. D. No. 7, Erie, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

For Vacation Time

NOW that vacation time approaches the heart begins to long for a little journey and the mind busies itself with preparing the way. Traveling in America ought to be a pleasure, and is, to those who know how to make the most of all our modern traveling conveniences, writes Julia Bottomley in the Illustrated Milliner. What with parlor cars, dining cars and sleeping cars, good ventilation, dust-shielded windows, comfortable chairs and competent service, a journey is a recreation and rest. People no longer burden themselves with a lot of luggage, but think out how they may get along with as little as possible. This is especially true if the trip is to be a long one and sight-seeing its object.

The first thing that engages the mind of the feminine traveler is, of course, the matter of her traveling costume and this article will concern itself with something of that.

Although we can't garb curselves like Miss Phoebe Snow, "all clad in white, etc." we can count upon as little dust on our journey as on the average shopping excursion. Our millinery is thoroughly protected, because paper bags are provided by the porter and hats consigned to the rack from start to finish of the average trip. No dust can reach them.

For traveling, a plain, well-tailored cloth gown of serge, mohair, covert cloth, fancy suiting or other hard-finished fabric, is the proper garb. It cannot be too plainly made and must be well tailored—that is it must have good lining and interlining and be correctly fitted and finished. Such a gown cannot be outclassed. The fabric should be shrunk before it is made up and it is obviously better to select a waterproofed material than any other when buying. If circumstances compel you to economize on your outfit, remember that it is economy to buy good material for your tailored dress and to have it made right.

It goes without saying that the hat should be pretty because all millinery should be that. It should be large enough to shade the eyes and small enough to keep out of other people's way. It need not be severely plain, and may even indulge in the charm of flowers for a moderate amount of traveling. It must have style. Three fine examples are given here of street hats suited to this purpose.

Street shoes and gloves made for service and well fitted are in keeping with gown and hat. Tan is the best color and one may wear a veil to match and carry a bag of the same useful and bright color.

The shirtwaist or blouse may be either of silk or a wash material. A light-weight silk is most economical for long journeys. Fresh jabots and stock collars make it possible to look immaculate at the end of the journey.

SIMPLE LITTLE WAIST.

This simple waist is of light blue armure silk, trimmed with bands of white silk set on with fagoting and ornamented with little gold buttons and loops of cord.

The collar and cuffs are of embroidered linon finished with little ruffles of the same.

Millinery Help.

To rejuvenate last year's violets, shake all the dust out of the discarded bunches which adorned last year's hats, and even the most forlorn and faded will respond to the magic touch of the paint brush. Separate them and apply a touch of water color to each petal. The result is highly satisfactory. When dry mass them together with several green leaves, which also have been "touched up," tie with a strand of tulle or a cord of purple silk and the violets are as good as new.

Old Night Gowns for Dress Covers.

I have for a long time used old muslin night gowns as covers for my best dresses when they hang in the closet. They are easier to get off and on than bags, and cover the gown quite as well. Hang the dress first on a coat or skirt hanger, then cover it with the night gown, buttoning the latter to keep it from falling. —Chicago Inter Ocean.

TO WEAR ON TAILORED HAT

Quill Trimming, Arranged Artistically, Is Sure to Find Favor With Smart Dressers.

Coming back into prominence and feminine again after an absence of several seasons, is the quill or feather trimming. It is very stunning when properly used on tailored chapeaux and gives its wearer a very trim and jaunty appearance.

One stunning model noted recently was of rough black straw, with the fashionable high crown and the equally fashionable rolling brim. It was quite plain and bare of any adornment, save two great quills which slanted upright, starting from the back. These were of the new coral shade, changing from a vivid coral in the center to deeper, almost black hue on the edge. And they gave just the note of color and air of jauntiness which the hat needed to make it distinctly chic.

Use Men's Shirt Sets.

Girls are turning to account the smart shirt buttons in colored enamels that come for men's shirts. They are usually six sold to a set.

These buttons have a link to thrust through the eyelet and are held by a patent fastener. When a girl uses them she works eyelets instead of button-holes in front of her waist and in the cuffs. Sometimes the buttons are all used at the back.

Some have colored enamel centers with a rim of striped two-toned gold; others of solid enamel in delicate tones with a design of gold; again there are centers of barred enamel with a plain rim in a deeper tone or of a deep ecru enamel with a colored rim.

The Mannish Blouse.

The mannish blouse is not to be dispensed with in the wardrobe of the well-dressed girl. It is well to have some of silk, and remember that it is economy in the end to get a good quality. Get a china silk that is really good and it will outlast three shirts in an inferior quality. There is an excellent variety that comes at $1.25 in a thirty-six-inch width. It is light and cool and yet of enough substance not to be transparent.

REPATRIATED.

HE HAD $400.00 IN CASH IN 1903; NOW WORTH $8,000.00.

My parents were originally Canadians from Essex County, Ontario. I was born in Monroe County, Michigan, from which place I moved to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, where I farmed for 22 years. I sold my farm there in the summer of 1903 and in September of that year came to Canada with my wife and eight children. I had about $400 in cash, team of horses, a cow, a few sheep and some chickens. I took up a quarter section of land near Jack Fish Lake, Meota P. O., and later on purchased for $2,000.00 an adjoining quarter section. I have now 48 head of cattle, a number of horses, good buildings and consider my holding is worth at least $8,000.00. My children have raised from $300 to $500 worth of garden truck each year since we have been here. I have never had a poor crop and have never had one frosted. My wheat has averaged from 25 to 30 bushels per acre with one or two years considerably more. My oats have always yielded well up to 50 bushels per acre and once or twice as high as 85. My cattle have never been stabled in winter, and do not need it. I consider that this country offers better opportunities for settlers than anywhere I have ever been. I am sure that almost any person can come here and buy land at say $15.00 per acre and pay for it in one crop. My experience is that if a man farms his land in the right way he is not likely to have his crop frosted.

Most of the settlers in my district are Americans and Canadians and I know lots of them who came here with little or no capital who are now doing well, but I do not know of any who have left through disappointment, or becoming discouraged, have returned to their former homes.

Politician and Preacher.

A politician in a western state, long suspected of crookedness and noted for his shifty ways, was finally indicted and tried. The jury was out a long time, but eventually acquitted him. After the verdict was in and the politician was leaving the court room, a minister who had been in part responsible for the indictment and trial approached the politician and said: "Well, my friend, you have escaped; but you had a close shave. I trust this will be a warning to you to lead a better life and deal more fairly with your fellow men."

"That may be," the politician replied. "That may be; but I ain't pledged to any one."—Saturday Evening Post.

To Pray for the Rich.

Two women prominent in St. Louis have started a movement to induce 300,000 of their sex in the south to pray every day for the rich. They explain they hope by organizing systematically groups of women who will pray often and well for the more affluent, wealthy persons will be led to contribute to a fund for the evangelization of the world. Belle H. Bennett, president of the woman's missionary council of the Methodist Episcopal church south and Mrs. R. W. McDonnell are the originators of the plan.

Shouldn't He?

A very good natured broker, who is very much larger than his wife, and who likes his little joke at someone else's expense, was sitting in the theater. A man behind him, not knowing who he was, leaned forward and whispered, "Will you please ask your wife to remove her hat?"

"You'd better do it yourself. I'm afraid."

Whereupon the man behind became angry, arose, protested and left the theater.

FEED YOU MONEY
Feed Your Brain, and It Will Feed You Money and Fame.

"Ever since boyhood I have been especially fond of meats, and I am convinced I ate too rapidly, and failed to masticate my food properly.

"The result was that I found myself, a few years ago, afflicted with ailments of the stomach, and kidneys, which interfered seriously with my business.

"At last I took the advice of friends and began to eat Grape-Nuts instead of the heavy meats, etc., that had constituted my former diet.

"I found that I was at once benefited by the change, that I was soon relieved from the heartburn and indigestion that used to follow my meals, that the pains in my back from my kidney affection had ceased.

"My nerves, which used to be unsteady, and my brain, which was slow and lethargic from a heavy diet of meats and greasy foods, had, not in a moment, but gradually, and none the less surely, been restored to normal efficiency.

"Now every nerve is steady and my brain and thinking faculties are quicker and more acute than for years past.

"After my old style breakfasts I used to suffer during the forenoon from a feeling of weakness which hindered me seriously in my work, but since I began to use Grape-Nuts food I can work till dinner time with all ease and comfort." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

KNEW THEIR PLACE OF ABODE

Colored Witness Certain That Principals in Lawsuit Had Not Moved From Hawkensville.

The object of the suit was to determine the ownership of a cow. One of the witnesses was Abram Reese, a colored man who had worked for the plaintiff. "I will ask you, Mr. Reese," said the attorney for the defendant, "if you were present when the exchange in question was consummated?" "I didn't see nuffin' o' dat kind, mistuh." "Perhaps you don't understand me. Were you there when the trade was made?" "Yes, suh; I wuz dah w'en Mist' Hibbs done trade de buggy for Mist' Simmons' cow." "Wasn't there a different understanding between them at some later period?" "De unde'standin' 'tween 'em wuz all right, suh." "I mean, Mr. Reese, did they ever trade back?" "Not as I know, suh." "So far as you know, then, everything remains in statu quo?" "No, suh," said Abram, with much positiveness, "dey's bofe of 'em still in Hawkensville."—Youth's Companion.

CURED ITCHING AND BURNING

"I was taken with the itch in April, 1904, and used most everything. I had a friend pay me a visit from Cumberland, and she advised me to use Cuticura Remedies which I did. The cure was certainly quick, and I use them to this day. I had it terribly under my knees. I only used one box of pills, but two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and I use the Cuticura Soap all the time. I hope this will benefit others, as it has me, after Dr. ——— and others could do nothing for me." (Signed) Miss Lu Johnson, 1522 Ninth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., April 3, 1910.

In a later letter Miss Johnson adds: "The trouble began with an eruption under my knees, and extended upwards toward my waist, until I was not able to sit down. It kept a constant itching and burning all the time, night and day. I went to my doctor, but he could do me no good after I do not know how many medicines he gave me, and then told me I would be compelled to go to a skin specialist, which I positively refused to do. I cried all the time. Finally I made up my mind to try Cuticura Remedies, and tried Cuticura Pills, Ointment and Soap, and was entirely cured of the itching three days after I started using them. The healing took about eight days. I consider Cuticura Remedies marvelous, and would recommend them everywhere."

Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, for free book on skin afflictions.

Dirty Dishes.

These form one of the most severe tasks in household work. When they are stacked up with grease and unused food it is quite a task to the one who has to wash them.

Hewitt's Easy Task Soap solves the problem. It is a pure, white soap which quickly releases grease and dirt and saves at least one-half the labor.

Pure food without pure dishes is of little avail, and Hewitt's Easy Task should be a welcome occupant of every home. Five cents a cake.

Employer—I want a boy who is absolutely trustworthy. Do you ever give business secrets away?

Applicant—Not much, boss! I sells 'em.—Judge.

Perils of Marriage.

Young married people have many obstacles to overcome before they reach the smooth pathway which experience will provide. The young housewife finds her most difficult problem in keeping things "ship-shape" for "hubby" returning from his day's endeavors.

Hewitt's Easy Task Soap, pure and white, lessens her labors one-half and gives the sparkle and glow to the china, glassware and silver which gives an impetus to the appetite of a man who has forgotten this most important matter in his every-day toil. Try it at five cents a cake. Just as cheap as "cheap" soap.

IF YOU HAVE A SICKLY YOUNGSTER TRY THIS FREE

The family with young children that is without sickness in the house now and then is rare, and so it is important that the head of the house should know what to do in the little emergencies that arise. A child with a serious ailment needs a doctor, it is true, but in the majority of instances, as any doctor knows, the child suffers from some intestinal trouble, usually constipation.

There is no sense in giving it a pill or a remedy containing an opiate, nor is flushing of the bowels to be always recommended. Rather give it a small dose of a mild, gentle laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which, by cleaning out the bowels and strengthening the little stomach muscles, will immediately correct the trouble.

This is not alone our opinion but that of Mrs. N. H. Mead of Freeport, Kans., whose granddaughter has been taking it successfully and of Mrs. J. R. Whiting of Lena, Wis., who gives it to her children and takes it herself. It is sold in fifty cent and one dollar bottles at every drug store, but if you want to test it in your family before you buy it send your address to Dr. Caldwell and he will forward a supply free of charge.

For the free sample address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

Backache

Is only one of many symptoms which some women endure through weakness or displacement of the womanly organs. Mrs. Lizzie White of Memphis, Tenn., wrote Dr. R. V. Pierce, as follows:

"At times I was hardly able to be on my feet. I believe I had every pain and ache a woman could have. Had a very bad case. Internal organs were very much diseased and my back was very weak. I suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, in fact, I suffered all over. This was my condition when I wrote to you for advice. BUILDING STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

New Bank Structure at Kitzmiller Damaged $300.

The new building recently erected and and occupied by the First National Bank at Kitzmiller was struck by lightning during the storm which was general throughout Garrett county Sunday night and damaged to the extent of about $300, fully covered by insurance.

First reports sent out from Kitzmiller were to the effect that the damage to the structure amounted to $1500 or more which is quite erroneous

The lightning was conducted into the building over a telephone wire leading into it, destroying the instrument, which was resting upon the counter and setting the latter on fire. A portion of the woodwork was burned and one window was broken as a result of the heat, besides the damage to the walls by the intense smoke as a result of the fire.

THE PRESIDENT'S VISIT TO MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

He Will Arrive Early Sunday Morning, the 25th, and Leave on a Special.

The visit of President W. H. Taft to Mountain Lake Park, on the 25th inst., is looked forward to with pleasure by the entire section of the country adjacent to the Park, and it is expected that the crowd in attendance that day will be tremendous. People are coming from as far west as Cleveland, Ohio, from the Western Maryland railroad points and all along the line of the Baltimore and Ohio. Locally, Garrett county will be represented by hundreds of her substantail citizens who will attend not only for the purpose of seeing the first man of the land but to hear him speak upon a subject which is uppermost in the minds of the church people—Missions.

The President will arrive in a special car attached to train No. 3 which will be sidetracked at the Park station. After breakfast, which will be served in the car, an automobile trip has been planned for him. At 10:30 he will appear at the Amphitheatre where he will address the assempled multitude, following which luncheon will be served at the Mountain Lake Hotel, preparations for a large number of guests having been completed by the hotel management.

It is the plan of the President to leave the Park by special train shortly after two o'clock in the afternoon, arriving in Washington about eight o'clock that evening.

While Mountain Lake Park has been graced by the presence of a lot of notables, including a near-President in the person of William Jennings Bryan, this is the first time that the place has been honored by a visit from the Chief Executive of the nation, and will probably be the only opportunity for a large number of Garrett people to hear an address from the President, therefore all who possibly can should be present and hear him.

THE DEESTRICT SKULE

Presentation by Local People Thursday and Friday Nights a Success.

The presentation on last Thursday night and again on Friday night of the Deestrict Skule, by local people and under the direction of Miss Anna Manges, was a success in every sense of the word, especially those numbers of the program wherein the little boys and girls claimed the attention of the large audiences filling the theatre both evenings.

The choruses, drills and other musical numbers of the program were beautifully rendered, while the play itself was vastly entertaining. Miss Manges showed great ability in managing and staging the various drills, etc., where so great a number of people had to be handled.

Ivy Inn Opened.

The Woman's Civic Club formally opened the tea room, known as Ivy Inn, in a room of the Dr. J. Lee McComas residence adjoining the Presbyterian church on Liberty street, yesterday morning. The tea room is in charge of competent hands and will be open to the public daily from 9 a. m. until 6 p. m., except on Saturdays, when the hours will include those of the evening. The World's Wonders

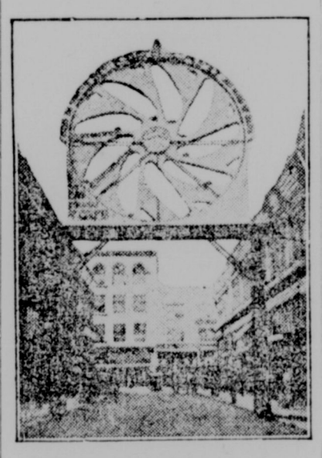
STRANGE THINGS FOUND IN VARIOUS PORTIONS OF THE EARTH

Easter Weddings Bunched

St. John's church, Hoxton, London, known throughout the metropolis as Hoxton church, is famous for the many weddings solemized within its walls. Especially on Easter Sunday do the people flock there to be married, dozens of weddings being celebrated there on that day every year. A large proportion of the couples are of the coster class.

SIGN IN "PERPETUAL MOTION"



"Perpetual motion" is claimed for a sign in London which has twenty-foot wheels that revolve night and day. The theory is that of leverage. The wooden wheel seen in the illustration is pulled down on the left rim by heavy metal balls at the circumference, while, by the curving grooves that radiate from the axle, the balls at the right gradually slide to the center, whence, as the wheels revolve, they slide once more to the left rim. The motion is continuous, but slow.

GROHAN'S INTELLIGENT HEN

John Grohan of Glenville believes that he owns the most intelligent hen in New York state. The hen, a white Leghorn, is a pet and Grohan has taught it many tricks. He is employed in Tarrytown and goes there by trolley car every morning. The hen follows him to the car and when she sees him safely aboard she goes home. The other morning Grohan overslept and he was in such a hurry to catch the trolley that he forgot about the hen until he boarded the car. He says he heard a flapping of wings behind him and saw his hen flying up from the ground. She lighted on his shoulder and just then he dropped his nickel with which he was going to pay his fare. The hen flew from his shoulder, picked up the coin with her beak and flew back to him. After she had seen him give the coin to the conductor and had heard the fare rung up, she flew away in the direction of her coop. And Grohan heretofore has borne the reputation of a truthful man.

CAT FINDS HIDDEN TREASURE

A cat chased a mouse under a footstool in the home of Henry Karg of New York. The cat squeezed part way under the stool, then thrust its paw up into a hole in the bottom of the stool.

Presently down came the paw without the mouse, but with a $50 bill sticking to one of the claws. The members of the Karg family at once suspended housekeeping to explore the hole in the footstool.

In all $875 was found stowed away in the stool, which had been knocked around the house ever since the death of Grannie Karg. She was known to have been of a saving disposition, but she died so suddenly that she got no chance to reveal where she had stored her hoard. Part of the treasure trove is to be spent on a monument to Grannie, with a carved footstool on it.

SINGS AS HE IS HANGED

Singing a hymn he learned as a child, as he walked to the gallows at Pittsburg, Pa., Steve Rusic, a Russian, was hanged for the murder of Mrs. Beta Domboy, a boarding-house keeper, as the result of a love affair. The strong, full notes of the song continued during the march to the gallows and while the noose was being adjusted, and were only stopped when the trap was sprung.

NESTS MADE OF BANK NOTES

A pair of swallows of Fierberbrunn in the Tryol have stolen a number of 10 kronen bank notes to line their nest.

The parent birds discovered that the new notes are just the shade of blue to match their eggs, the tissue being tough but flexible and exactly the material that they needed. The nest and the missing notes were only discovered when the swallows had abandoned it and it fell to the ground.

This feat has been equalled by that of an enterprising mouse in Dornbirn, which abstracted a number of 20 kronen (16s. 8d.) notes to the value of £8, of a delicate reddish brown shade from the cash drawer of a butcher and tearing them to pieces adapted them to the purpose of making a nest for her family of seven. The butcher in his search for the notes suspected and traced the mouse and found the nest under the boarding. He carefully picked up the remains of the notes and returned them to the bank, where they were pieced together. The butcher recovered £7 10s., the bank claiming 10s. for "material loss" caused by the mouse's teeth.

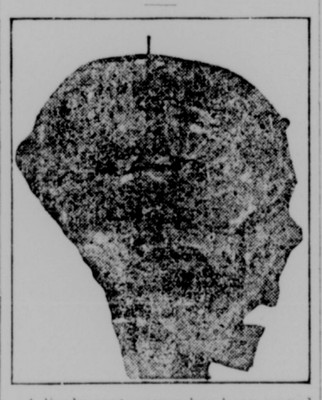
HEN THAT NEVER WALKS

A man residing near Thomaston, Conn., has a hen he claims is the only one of its kind in existence. In appearance she is very much like any hen, but the owner claims he has never seen her walk; instead she flies about the farm very much like a bird, but only rises about five feet from the ground. Many times she is seen on one of the larger limbs at the top of a tree. On several different occasions she has laid an egg in a small box, which was put in the tree some years ago by children who hoped that birds might pre-empt it for their home.

RECEIVER AS DARNING BALL

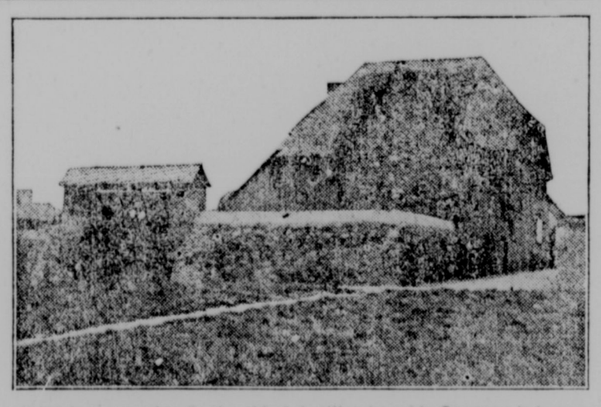
The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company has purchased for an aged woman a brand new darning ball. For months complaints came in thick and fast about the farmers' lines being dead on Fridays. Manager Garliner sent to San Francisco for a gumshoe man. He was out a day and then sent back to San Francisco for the darning ball. He had discovered that a woman on the Ceres road had been in the habit of taking the receiver off her telephone every Friday morning and all that day and the next using it for a darning ball in mending socks.

GENUINE HEAD OF CROMWELL



A lively controversy has been waged of late in England as to the respective claims of two grisley relics to be the genuine head of Oliver Cromwell, the protector. Sir Henry Howarth, Professor Boyd Dawkins and other eminent archaeologists have decided that the skull herewith pictured, which is in the possession of Rev. H. R. Wilkinson, is actually that of Cromwell, and the one preserved in the University Museum at Oxford is spurious.

Oldest House in Germany



What is supposed to be the oldest dwelling house in Germany is known as the Graue Haus and is in the city of Winkel in the Rheingau. It was originally the residence of Robanus, archbishop of Mainz, who died in the year 850.

Jesus, the Kingly Friend

By REV. F. E. HOPKINS, D. D.
Pastor of First Congregational Church, Gary, Ind.

TEXT—Behold thy king cometh.—John 12, 15.

Consider the friendship of Jesus as one of the kingly characteristics of his royal nature. The imperfection of our love is in its disquietude. With a few rare exceptions we are never quite satisfied that we have not given our love too easily, too quickly or too freely. But it was not so with Jesus.

Having loved, he loved unto the end. And we believe that means not only unto the end of life and throughout eternity, but also unto the full capacity of his infinite heart to love. Some one has said, "Jesus was a sower and not a reaper;" that "He had very few followers as compared with other great leaders or teachers."

The soundness of that statement is not at all clear. It seems to us that Jesus made friends quickly and that he had far more of them than most men who live only thirty-three years, and whose work was revolutionary. It is certain no man's friends ever clung or cling more closely than the friends of Jesus. What man of thirty-three can name twelve friends to whom he has given a whole heart's devotion and received the same in return? This Jesus did and had. Even poor, misguided Judas was his friend. And down to the moment when he left the upper room the master looked across the table, and in loving warning said: "The hand of him that betrayed Me is with Me on the table." And after his great sin such remorse came in Judas' heart on account of the way he had abused the friendship of the Lord that he went out and hung himself.

Now men do not kill themselves for abusing those they hate. And, of course, all that the New Testament tells us about the kingly friend is a mere outline. Only a few names are given. What is the name of the friend who had the colt ready and waiting for Jesus at Bethpage when Jesus wanted to ride? Nobody knows. Who was the friend, "bearing the pitcher of water" through the streets of Jerusalem, who opened his house for the last supper? Nobody knows. But they were among the friends of Jesus.

In the New Testament we see the beginning of the great principle and that is about all. And the essential principle of Christianity is friendship, based on perfect love. Let us not forget the eleventh commandment. That is Christianity. We know that the Jewish religion made but a slight impression even upon those who professed it. The Greeks undertook to meet the longing of the human heart by culture, and marvelous were the achievements of that gifted empire; all the same, "the world by wisdom knew not God."

Then Rome incarnated a dream of power and colonized as far as the Ganges. But with power came selfishness and it crushed liberty to death. But Jesus came and said, "Ye are my friends." He said it to Greek and Roman. To Judah and to Israel. To Samaritan and Publican, Scribe and Pharisee, and "To as many as believed on Him to them gave He power to become the sons of God."

And what did that mean? It meant if even an usurious tax collector like Zaccheus truly repents and restores his ill-gotten gains where they belong he shall be treated as a friend of the Lord. If a woman has been a sinner and she is sorry and she will promise to sin no more, she is to be forgiven. She is not to be stoned. Her sisters shall not say "Poor thing. We are awfully sorry for her, you know," while all the time in their hearts they are not feeling kind at all. They are to help her go in peace. And men are to be kind and help her. That is the idea. She is not to be tortured by regrets, and alarmed by fears, and torn by conscience, but the evil spirits are to driven out of her, and into the door of her heart is to enter the angel of peace.

When Samaritans are full of prejudice, and bigotry, and hatred, "Shall we not call down fire from heaven and destroy them?" ask the apostles. But Jesus answered "No! No! The son of man came not to kill but to save. To make alive."

"The good shepherd layeth down his life for the sheep. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. But God commendeth His love to us in that while we were yet sinners, enemies, His son died for us."

Oh, what is love? Who can fathom it? Who can define it? There is only one who can do it, and that one is Jesus. For Jesus is the love of God spelt friend. And today wherever we see the rich helping the poor, and the wise instructing the ignorant, and the strong bearing the burdens of the weak, and the saved seeking the lost, wherever doors of opportunity are being opened by helping hands with smiles of encouragement, wherever hope carries its lantern to guide our steps along the unfamiliar and slippery paths of life, wherever we can get on the track of men and women that have crossed the road to lift up a wounded traveler and take care of him until he can take care of himself, there, and everywhere, behind these ministries, and rising above all as the inspirer of all, we catch sight of the world's only king, the ruler of the human heart. The world's everlasting and omnipotent friend, and he is Jesus

Clean Sanitary Floors.

Varnish, which is commonly regarded only as a beautifier, is an efficient sanitary agent. Varnished surfaces can be cleaned by wiping, and the microbe-laden dust is thus kept out of the air. A varnished floor is therefore not only up to date, beautiful and easily cleaned, but is wholesome. The National Association of Varnish Manufacturers, 636 The Bourse, Philadelphia, Penn., are distributing free a booklet entitled "Modern Floors," which tells how floors may be made and kept wholesome and attractive. Send for one. Varnish is cheaper than carpet and far more satisfactory.

Her Offering.

A young lady boarder in a country household lamented the absence of letter. Catching little Melba, the pet of the household, up in her arms, she said:

"Precious, nobody loves me; I guez-I'll go out in the garden and eat worms."

The next day Miss Alice was interrupted by a low knocking at the door. In answer to her summons, Melba entered grasping a large chip carefully in both hands, the child said:

"Miss Alice, bad old postman not bring you any letter; here's free big worms. Now you won't have to go out in the garden."

Street Sayings Are Short Lived.

In some London slang has a short life, the street sayings current for a time pass away even more quickly. Most of these, such as "Has your mother sold her mangle?" "Who shot the dog?" and "How are you off for soap?" survive only in the pages of contemporary novelists.

Some, however, have a long life. "Does your mother know you're out?" has been traced back to 1840 and may possibly have been current before then. Others are revived, with slight alterations. Ten years ago rude little boys would shout, "Where did you get that hat?" when their grandfathers would exclaim, "What! the same old hat!" And the expression of dissent emphasized nowadays by "Not in these trousers!" used to be conveyed thirty years ago by the tag, "Not in these boots!"—London Chronicle.

MENTAL ACCURACY
Greatly Improved by Leaving Off Coffee

The manager of an extensive creamery in Wis. states that while a regular coffee drinker, he found it injurious to his health and a hindrance to the performance of his business duties.

"It impaired my digestion, gave me a distressing sense of fullness in the region of the stomach, causing a most painful and disquieting palpitation of the heart, and what is worse, it muddled my mental faculties so as to seriously injure my business efficiency.

"I finally concluded that something would have to be done. I quit the use of coffee, short off, and began to drink Postum. The cook didn't make it right at first. She didn't boil it long enough, and I did not find it palatable and quit using it and went back to coffee and to the stomach trouble again.

"Then my wife took the matter in hand, and by following the directions on the box, faithfully, she had me drinking Postum for several days before I knew it.

"When I happened to remark that I was feeling much better than I had for a long time, she told me that I had been drinking Postum, and that accounted for it. Now we have no coffee on our table.

"My digestion has been restored, and with this improvement has come relief from the oppressive sense of fullness and palpitation of the heart that used to bother me so. I note such a gain in mental strength and acuteness that I can attend to my office work with ease and pleasure and without making the mistakes that were so annoying to me while I was using coffee.

"Postum is the greatest table drink of the times, in my humble estimation." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

AN EFFORT is to be made to have the new congress take up the proposal that means be devised whereby the United States government may acquire title to and assume the management of Mount Vernon, on the Potomac, the home and tomb of George Washington. It was only because the last congress at the session which closed a few months ago took definite action in the matter that there was halted a project to profane the historic precincts of Mount Vernon by the location of a reformatory in the vicinity and it is being argued that if congress has to bestow such fostering care upon the famous mansion and estate why not have the whole management of the institution (which really belongs to the whole people) vested in the elective body closest to the people.

Several unsuccessful attempts have been made in the past to have our national legislature take some action in this matter. There is, however, constant agitation on the subject and a continual increase in the number of people who look upon it as a public shame that our greatest patriotic shrine should be in other hands than Uncle Sam's. This resentment is due in great measure to what the critics are pleased to dub the "dime museum" methods which obtain in the conduct of this tourist mecca. The procedure complained of is the charging of an admission fee for entrance to the grounds and the sale of postal cards, guide books and other commodities. Unfavorable sentiment is attributable especially to the circumstance that most of the money making enterprises conducted at Mount Vernon are on the monopolistic order. Only an approved brand of guide book can be purchased on the grounds and so on through the whole list of articles for sale, even to the circumstance that a single line of steamers on the Potomac river has the exclusive privilege of landing tourists at Mount Vernon.

However, whatever may have been the mistakes of the association of women who have control of Mount Vernon, or of the superintendent who for twenty-five years has had the authority of general manager of Mount Vernon, there is no denying that they have accomplished much in the restoration and maintenance of the manor house and the most interesting part of the famous Virginia plantation. Only recently has there been completed an important undertaking in landscape architecture which is especially notable because it supplies the final feature needed to restore the actual conditions of George Washington's day at the country seat which the Father of His Country loved so well and where he lived and died. This final restoration has been the replacing of the lawn and garden walls which in colonial times played an important part in the surroundings of Mount Vernon, as they did in the case of almost every mansion of its type.

The original walls on the Mount Vernon estate, most of which were constructed under the supervision of Washington himself, were in an excellent state of preservation when he died, but successive heirs to the estate allowed them to fall into decay until there was naught left but the foundations. These walls which add so much to the appearance of the Mount Vernon estate, would have been restored years ago had it been merely a matter of expense, for the whole work cost only about $1,500. However, a more serious stumbling block delayed operations—namely, a desire to secure brick that would be duplicates of those originally employed and which would consequently enable adherence to the policy of having everything historically correct to the most minute detail.

After a quest that had continued for more than a score of years the long-sought bricks were recently obtained when there was demolished an old colonial mansion known as Society Hill, located in King George county, Virginia. This structure, which was built by Colonel Thornton, a close friend of George Washington—and which by coincidence later passed into the possession of a member of the Washington family—was constructed of bricks brought from England. The bricks in the Society Hill mansion, when cleaned, proved to be identical in size and color with the bricks found in the ruined foundations of the original garden walls at Mount Vernon. Accordingly the walls were restored in accordance with the original drawings and enough of the original Washington bricks were rescued from the old foundations to provide a coping for the walls, the bricks obtained from the King George county site furnishing the remainder of the material needed.

The most extensive of the restored walls are the "screen walls," the function of which was to hide from the sight of Washington's guests seated on the lawn the inevitable domestic activities that were carried on around such outbuildings as the kitchen, the smokehouse, the spinning house, etc.—adjuncts of the mansion which it was not desired to have obtrude themselves upon the notice of visitors. Almost as interesting as the screen walls, however, are the "Ha Ha" walls, which are depressed below the level of the sloping lawn and are consequently unobservable from the portico of the mansion, but which in Washington's day performed an important function by preventing the stock from wandering on the lawn in front of the house. The name "Ha Ha" as applied to such walls originated in England and is attributed to cross-country riders who were surprised into making the ejaculation when they suddenly and unexpectedly came upon such a hidden wall in their chase of a fox.

The restored walls, although the most important of recent improvements at Mount Vernon, are by no means the only ones that may be noted by the sightseers and tourists who now visit this historic spot in throngs that aggregate 100,000 a year. A new roof has been placed on the mansion house and the public probably has little conception of how much time and labor was required to obtain the desired material for this roof, just as it was no end of trouble to find the bricks for the walls above referred to. About 50,000 cypress shingles were needed for the new roof, but they must needs be "rived" shingles because Washington had that kind and it seemed impossible to find any rived shingles, because nowadays shingles are not made that way, sawing being much easier than splitting. Finally a lumber firm in South Carolina undertook to supply shingles that would duplicate those of Washington's day, but they charged almost a cent apiece for the singles, which made the roof a pretty expensive one.

Mount Vernon mansion now has one of the most perfect heating systems to be found in any American residence. It was designed especially to prevent danger from fire—and in this connection it may be mentioned that Washington's old home is not built of brick or stone, as many people suppose, but has a frame of oak, sheathed with pine, cut, painted and sanded to resemble stone. The new system enables the heating of all the rooms in the mansion by a hot water system and yet the boiler room, with the inevitable menace that comes from fire and stored fuel is located 400 feet from the mansion and wholly underground.

Another modern improvement at this rejuvenated estate in old Virginia is found in the provision of a fine water supply obtained from a splendid artesian well. Powerful pumps, operated by electricity, supply water from this well for household purposes and keep filled at all times the emergency reservoirs which would be depended upon in case of fire. Incidentally it may be explained that the score of men including guards, gardeners, laborers, etc., who work and live on the Mount Vernon estate or close at hand, are organized into a well-drilled fire-fighting force and they have chemical and steam engines for fighting the flames, should this destructive agent ever menace the mansion—a remote chance, it would seem, for all the rooms in the house and all the exterior walls have been treated with a fire-resisting paint.

For all that electricity is employed to pump water and perform certain other chores on the Mount Vernon estate, the magic current is not allowed in the precious mansion and the manor house is lighted as it was in the days of yore, solely by candles.

There has been another notable undertaking at Mount Vernon in the form of the construction of drainage works which control forces of nature that threatened to play havoc on the famous estate. This new system of sanitary drainage has, first of all, served to reclaim the bogs and swamps which at one time gave the place a reputation for unhealthfulness. Equally serious in possible results were the threatened landslides near the mansion and in the vicinity of the old tomb of Washington, from which, however, the body of Washington was removed some years ago to the new tomb. These slides have been averted for all time by the construction at considerable cost of a tunnel which pierces the hill on which the mansion stands.

NO PLACE FOR FATHER

Bathroom Nook Only Place in Which Family Head May Find Privacy

The English home with its lack of "proper" heating and also its sad lack of ventilation of bathtubs is no more a marvel to the American woman than the American home is to the English woman. The latter freely admits that the conveniences of the American home are beyond compare, but there is one serious defect that is always commented on. This is set forth by Mary Mortimer Maxwell in the National Review (London). There is no place for father. Surely there must be some truth in this, for so many British women have called attention to the fact that we have no privacy in our homes, and have pointed to the shortcomings of pretty strands of beads serving as doors, and to the fact that the bathroom is the only sanctuary, the Indianapolis News remarks. This is borne out by observations in many cities. A former official in Indiana is well read in history. He also has a family. He freely admits that he absorbed his history lying with pillow in the bathtub, safe beyond the reach of the growing children. This is just what Mary Mortimer Maxwell is speaking about when she says:

"But the member of the American family to whom my thoughts turn in greatest sympathy in regard to the lack of privacy and the denial of the opportunity for the cultivation of individuality is the father—he who pays for everything, buys the house with his own earnings or hires it, and yet generally has not so much as a corner that is his very own. It is called 'his house.' It has many rooms. There are the drawing room, the living room, the library. There are numerous bedrooms and dressing rooms, but if he really desires solitude, there would seem to be nothing for him but to lock himself up in the bathroom. Sometimes you hear the members of an American family speak of 'father's den,' to be sure. Why, just before I left America a New York friend, when she was showing me through her new house, said to me, 'This is my husband's den,' showing me into the sunniest and brightest room in the house. My eyes rested upon antimacassars and tea cosies, a copy of 'Poems of Passion,' an embroidery frame, a train of 'choo-choo cars,' and a box of such American confections as my soul delights in and which no manly man could possibly be seen eating. I looked about for rows of curious pipes, for a horribly dusty and disordered writing table, a lounging jacket—out at elbows, but, oh, so comfortable after the work-aday coat—a copy or two of a sporting paper; but not a sign of such mute witnesses to masculine ownership of that room did I see. 'It's the sunniest room in the house,' went on that wickedly selfish little American woman, 'so the children and I spend a great deal of time here.'

"I have been shown through other American homes where the husbands had their 'own' dressing rooms, their 'own' hanging cupboards, and have noted with surprise the complexion balms, bodkins with pink bebe ribbon ready for running through lace, bonnet whisks and cut glass powder boxes lying upon the chiffonier along with military brushes and safety razors. 'I do believe in separating dressing rooms and separate dressing tables,' the fond wife would gush, and then she would show me her husband's 'own hanging cupboard,' which, being fitted up with a new kind of patent trouser stretcher which she found exactly the thing for keeping her skirts in nicest order, she had taken possession of up to the farthest and darkest corner, where a pathetic and lonely greatcoat might hang on a solitary peg."

Does this thing, after all, make the path to the divorce courts popular? Our British critics sometimes think so. Men are brutish folk at the best, and sometimes do like to be alone.

WHY SHE DID NOT SEND HER PICTURE

What They Did About It.

The reason was because her face was so disfigured by a skin eruption that she couldn't have it taken. Just make a note of this fact if you know anyone who suffers from disfiguring skin eruptions. Resinol ointment cures eruptive skin diseases. It restores the skin to normal health and clears the complexion. "I take pleasure in testifying to the most excellent results from the use of Resinol, both ointment and soap," writes Miss Opal Lilley, Camp Creek, W. Va. "I had been troubled for four or five years with a very disfiguring eruption on my face, and Resinol has helped it so much." Resinol ointment should be used for all skin eruptions, eczema, erythema, herpes, barber's itch, psoriasis, etc. It stops itching instantly. Resinol promptly allays irritation and is the best dressing for burns, scalds, boils, felons, carbuncles, etc. It is a comforting, healing preparation, which can be used freely on the tenderest skin. Resinol ointment is put up in opal jars in two sizes, price fifty cents and one dollar. At all druggists. Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

DRAWING HIM ON.

CRIMINAL NEGLECT OF SKIN AND HAIR

Cuticura Soap and Ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little that it is almost criminal not to use them. Think of the suffering entailed by neglected skin troubles—mental because of disfiguration—physical because of pain. Think of the pleasure of a clear skin, soft white hands and good hair. These blessings are often only a matter of a little thoughtful, timely care, viz.:—warm baths with Cuticura Soap, assisted when necessary by gentle anointings with Cuticura Ointment. The latest Cuticura book, an invaluable guide to skin and hair health, will be mailed free, on application to the Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, Mass.

The Passing of the Wife.

We have known for some time that the wife would have to go. We have held off as long as possible the inevitable moment, but it might just as well be over at once.

The wife was a very desirable article while she lasted. She mended the hose and did the housework when necessary and sat up patiently and waited for hubby's return. A useful person certainly—one to love, to honor and obey.

Now the suffragette age is upon us and the wife is rapidly becoming extinct, says Life.

In a few more years she will be exhibited in museums.

Adieu, madam! We respect your memory!

WELCOMED BY MEN WHO SMOKE

Particular men who smoke realize how offensive to people of refinement is a strong tobacco breath, and how objectionable to themselves is that "dark brown taste" in the mouth after smoking.

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic is worth its weight in gold for this purpose alone. Just a little in a glass of water—rinse the mouth and brush the teeth. The mouth is thoroughly deodorized, the breath becomes pure and sweet and a delightful sense of mouth cleanliness replaces that dark brown tobacco taste.

Paxtine is far superior to liquid antiseptics and Peroxide for all toilet and hygienic uses and may be obtained at any drug store 25 and 50c a box or sent postpaid upon receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass. Send for a free sample.

South Dakota's Wonderful Dam.

Unless unfavorable weather interferes the contractors will complete the Belle Fourch dam early in June. This structure is one of the most spectacular engineering works of the Reclamation Service, and its construction has attracted widespread interest on the part of engineers from all parts of the world.

In order to provide a storage reservoir which will control the flood and normal flow of a whole river, the Government has built an enormous embankment to close the depression between two hills. This wall of earth is 6,200 feet long, with a maximum height of 115 feet. It is 20 feet wide on top, and 5000 feet thick at the base. It contains 1,600,000 cubic yards of material.

After the dam was in place the water slope was covered with a layer of carefully screened gravel, on which was laid a paving of concrete blocks, each weighing from 2,000 to 3,000 pounds. The nearest gravel pit was 12 miles away, so the contractors set up a plant at the pit, and built a railroad to the dam on which were conveyed the heavy concrete blocks.

A concrete dam across the river turns the entire stream into a canal with a capacity of 1,600 cubic feet per second, which conveys the water to the reservoir. The reservoir when filled is the largest lake in South Dakota. From it the principal canals carry the water to the irrigable lands in the beautiful Belle Fourche Valley, and 100,000 acres ultimately will be supplied.

Settlement has been rapid here since construction began. Once the land of the cow boy the valley has now become a thrifty agricultural community. The opportunities it offers for the settler, the merchant and professional man, are numerous and varied. A large acreage will be ready for the homemaker in the near future. Three new towns have risen as if by magic within the past few years, affording openings for town people. A branch railroad has been extended to the limits of the project, furnishing excellent transportation facilities.

Blair Lee May Seek Governorship.

It is generally believed in Montgomery county that State Senator Blair Lee will be a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination to succeed Gov. Crothers. The Senator, himself, is not inclined to discuss the matter, but is apparently awaiting developments before making a formal announcement of his candidacy.

Keyser Wants Trolley.

Citizens of Keyser, W. Va., are again agitating the question of an extension of the Cumberland and Westernport Electric Railway from Westernport across the river to Piedmont, W. Va., and on down to Keyser, W. Va., a distance of about five miles. The railway will be petitioned to extend the line as soon as possible.

GRANTSVILLE.

A Narrow Escape.

Chas. Reichenbaker, son of Mr. Peter Reichenbaker, of Keyser Ridge, narrowly escaped death in a runaway accident on Monday morning when the large draft horse which the father and son were driving in a buggy, took fright at a large heap of brick which were piled alongside the National pike at a point a few feet from the borough limit west of Grantsville.

Both the young man and Mr. Reichenbaker had gotten out of the vehicle, the former to lead the horse, the latter to fasten some part of the harness, when the horse plunged forward, stunning the son and severely bruising the father. The wheels passed over the head of the young man inflicting several severe scalp wounds. Fortunately the accident occurred at a point where there were several witnesses and after the victim was removed to the home of J. D. Miller, Dr. Bowen was summoned. After having his wounds dressed and having to a certain extent recovered from the shock, Mr. Reichenbaker was removed to his home in the evening.

Another accident which might have resulted disastrously, occurred last Friday when Miss Ida Johnson drove to Elk Lick with her father's horse, which had always borne a good reputation for steadiness and reliability, but which suddenly became unmanageable and ran away, with no injury, however, to the occupants of the buggy. With considerable pluck Miss Ida remained in the vehicle, whereupon the horse began to kick and threw Miss Johnson and her companion into the road. Mr. S. S Miller happened along in his automobile at this time and brought the unfortunates to Grantsville.

Mr. D. J. Stevanus is now the proud possessor of a five passenger Cleveland automobile, having made the purchase from Gurley Bros., in Meyersdale last Friday.

Mr. C. D. Hershberger had an unfortunate accident at Sand Patch last Saturday morning when crossing the railroad track at that place in his auto, the gears of the machine broke. Mr. Hershberger had his car taken to Meyersdale where he was compelled to await repairs for several days.

On Friday of last week Mr. M. W. Race of Frostburg passed through town in a little Ford runabout of ancient design, enroute to Somerfield. On Saturday evening Mr. Race arrived in town on foot and about half an hour later the auto was towed in by a horse. Mr. Race is thinking of buying a new one.

Mr. Bert Livengood, the expert well driller, who had started for Somerfield to sink a well for the Pure Oil Co., has returned to Grantsville. Bert has been employed by Mr. D. J. McKenzie to drill a well.

King Bros. have finished sawing for J. S. Miller, and expect to move their mill to Mr. S. C. Loechel in the near future.

The drought which had been threatening to destroy vegetation has been broken during the last week by several refreshing rains. The rains have come too late to help the hay crop very much, but all other crops are promising abundant yields.

The Republican for Job Printing.

FRIENDSVILLE.

A severe electrical storm, accompanied by rain and hail visited our town and vicinity on Sunday night.

Mrs. A. A. Allen, of Ohio Pyle, is a visitor at Mrs. A. J. Mason's for this week.

Several of our townsmen had to return to Oakland to fill their places as jurors.

C. C. Frederick took several passengers to the county seat on Sunday afternoon, returning long before dusk, in his automobile.

Leslie Friend, while working at Kendall, had two fingers of his right hand badly mashed while loading lumber on Monday morning.

Hats off to Henry Wolf, one of our enterprising merchants. He is the proud parent of twin boys, presented to him on Saturday morning.

Mrs. Ralph Ringer is visiting her mother, Mrs. Charles Rodgers at present.

F. G. Fox was a visitor to Accident on Sunday taking in the children's day services given in the evening at that place. He reports enjoying the services.

Rev. Laurentz, of Cove, accompanied by Henry Kolb, were visitors to our city Monday.

The children's day services at the Methodist Episcopol church will be held next Sunday evening, the 18th inst.

Mr. Elijah Friend has been suffering extremely with rheumatism and has been confined to his bed.

John W. McCollough is home visiting his family at present.

The Crawford Hotel is being painted, greatly beautifying its appearance.

C. V. Guard has had carpenters at work for a week, improving his property and building new sidewalks.

Tom Fike is having his furniture packed up and will remove his family to Grantsville where he he holds a prominent position.

We are waiting patiently for the report of the estimate on the new road. The surveyors left this place several weeks ago and it is about time to hear from headquarters. The road is needed so badly and it would give us such an outlet, whereas now we have to climb the mountain to get out to the people of the surrounding country. It would give them such a splendid opportunity to get to Friendsville, Oakland or Accident. To the people of Oakland it would be a great convenience, as then in an automobile they could visit our town, transact their business and return in a few hours. Now they have almost to take their lives in their hands to climb the hills over wretched roads, or go by rail and spend several days. The State ought to look at this in the right light for there is nowhere in the State, we venture to say, a piece of road more needed.

Mrs. Anna Ross is being visited by one of her daughters, Mrs. F. T. Legeere, of Frostburg, and also by a little grandson.

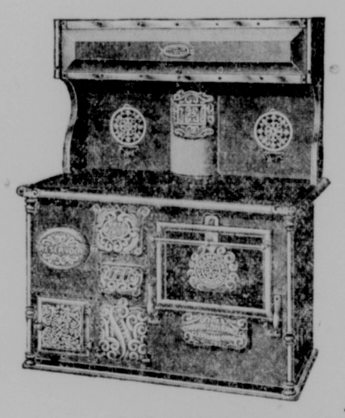
THIS HIGH GRADE STEEL RANGE COSTS YOU NOTHING



as compared with any other range of any make whatsoever, that you might buy.

¶ Any other range; any range you ever saw takes its draft through the front end, next to the fire and right underneath the grate.

¶ This air is about 50 to 70 degrees in temperature. The range must burn enough coal to bring the temperature up to 700 degrees, or baking heat

¶ Notice that ordinary ranges have to burn enough coal to raise the air from 70 to 700 or 630 degrees.

CHAMPION RANGES

take the draft in at the opposite end, pass it under the bottom before it goes under the grate, and the air picks up enough from the waste heat under the bottom to reach about 250 degrees.

¶ The fire has to burn only enough coal to raise it from 250 to 700—450 degrees, as against 630 in ordinary ranges.

¶ CHAMPION RANGES save about 1-3 in fuel, every day they are used. This will pay the full cost of ther ange in 3 to 5 years, making it cheaper to you than any other.

¶ No experiment; been made and used for 18 years by thousands. Patented; can only be had from our agents. Guaranteed as represented or money back.

Grand Minstrel Entertainment.

The Mountain City Band will put on a grand minstrel at Beckwith's Opera House, Thursday and Friday nights, June 29th and 30th. The band boys have secured the services of Prof. and Mrs. F. A. McCluskey, who will have complete charge of the drilling and rehearsing of the various parts. These people have had eminent success with similar entertainments all over the country and this show will be no exception to their rule of putting on an entertainment well worth more than the admission charged. Everybody arrange to turn out and enjoy an evening of screaming fun, good catchy music and songs and dancing.

If you want to see the finest line of vehicles of all kinds in Western Maryland inspect A. D. Naylor & Co.'s stock. They have just received a new supply and sell them for less. 3t

Attention is directed to the financial statement of the First State Bank of Grantsville. The statement shows a volume of business covering but seven months, or from the time the bank was instituted. The showing made by Garrett county's youngest bank is a matter of congratulation not only to the officers and stockholders but to the depositors as well.

The stone for the new addition to the Garrett National Bank building here arrived last Friday after a delay of more than a month, the shipment going to Oakland Mills, near Baltimore, where the car was detained for upwards of two weeks before it could be located. The work of setting the stones was begun yesterday by a number of workmen. If no further delay occurs in the work it will probably be completed by August 15th.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Everything seems in readiness for the coming of President Taft for the service of Sunday morning, June 25th, at 10:30. Local musicians under the lead of Mr. John Hillis and Dean McCutchan, are preparing the music. Prominent people from all over the country are writing that they will be present, and word is received from the railway company that weekend rates, on sale Friday and Saturday and good returning Monday, will be offered from all the surrounding territory. The boarding houses are planning to receive guests on this date, and every arrangement is being made for the accommodation of the people. It is hoped that the friends of the Park will remember that the proceeds of the silver offering, that is expected of everyone, will be used for missions, home and foreign. The original attempt was to get President Taft here during the week, between the two missionary conventions, in order that his talk might be in connection with this subject, as well in time as in topic, but it was impossible for the President to give the Park so late a date, and he comes to talk on this particular subject, and it is hoped that all friends will be as liberal on this occasion as possible.

The Woman's Civic Club, that organization that always has done and is doing so much for the welfare of those who spend the summer in the Park, has been especially fortunate in arranging for an illustrated lecture (moving pictures) on the subjecs of "The Domestic Fly," and Professor Wattress will also give an address during his stay in the Park on "Tuberculosis and Its Prevention." The public will be interested, not only in the subjects of these lectures which mean so much to the health and comfort of everyone, but in the remarkably interesting pictures, which will amuse as well as instruct.

A seven ton steam roller has been performing gymnastics on the golf links this week. The term gymnastics seems not to be ill used when the tribulations of the engineer are taken into consideration. But in spite of all difficulties, his work has leveled the ground almost beyond belief, and when he has finished and the new horse lawn mower has been artistically applied a few times, our ladies are hoping that they will have the beginning of a first class series of links.

The Summer School opens July 5th, with every promise of a most successful season. The latest addition to the corps is Dr. R. H. Dolliver, of South Dakota, for the Department of English Language and Literature. Dr. Dolliver is of that talented family that produced the late Senator from Iowa, but whose home was in this near neighborhood in West Virginia, so that it is to him a homecoming rather than a visit to a strange country. It is expected that he and his family will reach the Park next week. Mr. James McIlroy, Jr., supervisor of public school music for greater Pittsburg, has been secured for this special department of work, and the teachers may consider themselves especially fortunate in being able to have instruction under so competent an expert.

Bathing in the lake has already begun, and our young men are seen giving each other the mystic sign of the two fingers, and the old invitation, "come on in, the water is fine," is heard daily. Then, too, the row boats are in shape, and every fair afternoon parties have been out on the lake. In fact, things are going at the Park and people are coming.

The thermometnr on last Sunday registered 85 at noon, but a cool breeze was enjoyed all day.

The Deaconess Home has been opened and will be in charge of Miss Hicks.

Capt. Hayden is in the eastern part of the State on business for the U. S. Agricultural Department.

Mrs. John Johns who spent the winter in Ohio, returned to the Park last Saturday.

On Friday of last week, Mrs. Weems, mother of Miss R. Weems and Mrs. Dr. Niheiser, died at the home of Miss Weems. The remains were taken to the family burial grounds on the Chesapeake Bay, Monday morning.

The foundation for the addition to U. G. Ford's house is completed.

Mr. J. Homer Davis and wife of Clarksburg, W. Va., and Mrs. Judge Atkinson, of Washington, D. C., spent the latter part of the past week as guests of Mrs. E. R. Davis at Altamont cottage.

The Allegany House has been painted and otherwise improved.

Guests are arriving and many strange faces are seen on our streets daily.

Mrs. Cummeford, Mrs. Ollie Haymond, Miss Ida Ingram and Miss Margaret Bishop, of Fairmont, W. Va., are here for the summer.

Wm. Friend and wife, and Mrs. E. E. Friend went to Friendsville on Sunday to visit their brother. They made the trip in Wm. Friend's automobile. They made the run from the Park to Friendsville in one hour and twenty minutes.

Last Saturday evening the Junior Epworth League held a festival in the tabernacle. A good time was had and the church treasury enriched several dollars.

SYNOPSIS.

David Amber, starting for a duck-shooting visit with his friend, Quain, comes upon a young lady equestrian who has been dismounted by her horse becoming frightened at the sudden appearance in the road of a burly Hindu. He declares he is Behari Lal Chatterji, "the appointed mouthpiece of The Bell," addresses Amber as a man of high rank and pressing a mysterious little bronze box, "The Token," into his hand, disappears in the wood. The girl calls Amber by name.

CHAPTER II. (Continued).

"You will have it that I must surrender my only advantage—my incognito. If I tell you how I happen to know who you are, I must tell you who I am. Immediately you will lose interest in me, because I'm really not at all advanced; I doubt if I should understand your book if I had to read it."

"Which heaven forfend! But why," he insisted mercilessly, "do you wish me to be interested in you?"

She flushed becomingly at this and acknowledged the touch with a rueful, smiling glance. But, "Because I'm interested in you," she admitted openly.

"And . . . why?"

"Are you hardened to such adventures?" She nodded in the direction the babu had taken. "Are you accustomed to being treated with extraordinary respect by stray Bengalis and accepting tokens from them? Is romance commonplace to you?"

"Oh," he said, disappointed, "if it's only the adventure—! Of course, that's easily enough explained. This half-witted mammoth—don't ask me how he came to be here—thought he recognized in me some one he had known in India. Let's have a look at this token-thing."

He disclosed the bronze box and let her take it in her pretty fingers.

"It must have a secret spring," she concluded, after a careful inspection.

"I think so, but . . ."

She shook it, holding it by her ear. "There's something inside—it rattles ever so slightly. I wonder!"

"No more than I."

"And what are you going to do with it?" She returned it reluctantly.

"Why, there's nothing to do but keep it till the owner turns up, that I can see."

"You won't break it open?"

"Not until curiosity overpowers me and I've exhausted every artifice, trying to find the catch."

"Are you a patient person, Mr. Amber?"

"Not extraordinarily so, Miss Farrell."

"Oh, how did you guess?"

"By remembering not to be stupid. You are Miss Sophia Farrell, daughter of Colonel Farrell of the British diplomatic service in India." He chuckled cheerfully over his triumph of deductive reasoning. "You are visiting the Quains for a few days, while en route for India with some friends whose name I've forgotten—"

"The Rolands," she prompted involuntarily.

"Thank you. . . . The Rolands, who are stopping in New York. You've lived several years with your father in India, went back to London to 'come out' and are returning, having been presented at the court of St. James. Your mother was an American girl, a schoolmate of Mrs. Quain's. I'm afraid that's the whole sum of my knowledge of you."

"You've turned the tables fairly, Mr. Amber," she admitted. "And Mr. Quain wrote you all that?"

"I'm afraid he told me almost as much about you as he told you about me; we're old friends, you know. And now I come to think of it, Quain has one of the few photographs of me extant. So my chain of reasoning's complete. And I think we'd better hurry on to Tanglewood."

"Indeed, yes. Mrs. Quain will be wild with worry if that animal finds his way back to the stable without me; I've been very thoughtless."

"How much longer shall you stay at Tanglewood, Miss Farrell?"

"Unhappily," she sighed, "I must leave on the early train tomorrow, to join the Rolands in New York."

"You don't want to go?"

"I'm half an American, Mr. Amber. I've learned to love the country already. Besides, we start immediately for San Francisco, and it'll be such a little while before I'll be in India."

"You don't care for India?"

"I've known it for less than six years, but already I've come to hate it as thoroughly as any exiled Englishwoman there. It sits there like a great, insatiable monster, devouring English lives. Indirectly it was responsible for my mother's death; she never recovered from the illness she contracted when my father was stationed in the Deccan. In the course of time it will kill my father, just as it did his father and his elder brother. It's a cruel, hateful, ungrateful land—not without the price we pay for it."

"I know how you feel," he said with sympathy. "It's been a good many years since I visited India, and of course I then saw and heard little of the darker side. Your people are brave enough, out there."

"They are. I don't know about government; but its servants are loyal and devoted and unselfish and cheerful. And I don't at all understand," she added in confusion, "why I should have decided to inflict upon you my emotional hatred of the country. Your question gave me the opening, and I forgot myself."

"I assure you I was thoroughly shocked, Miss Farrell."

"Will you tell me something?"

"If I can."

"About the man who wouldn't acknowledge knowing you? You remember saying three people had been mistaken about your identity this afternoon."

"No, only one—the babu. You're not mistaken—"

"I knew you must be David Amber the moment I heard you speaking Urdu."

"And the man at the station wasn't mistaken—unless I am. He knew me perfectly, I believe, but for reasons of his own refused to recognize me."

"Yes—?"

"He was an English servant named Doggott, who is—or once was—a valet in the service of an old friend, a man named Rutton."

She repeated the name: "Rutton? It seems to me I've heard of him."

"You have?"

"I don't remember," she confessed, knitting her level brows. "The name has a familiar ring, somehow. But about the valet?"

"Well, I was very intimate with his employer for a long time, though we haven't met for several years. Rutton was a strange creature, a man of extraordinary genius, who lived a friendless, solitary life—at least, so far as I knew; I once lived with him in a little place he had in Paris for three months and in all that time he never received a letter or a caller. He was reticent about himself, and I never asked any questions, of course, but in spite of the fact that he spoke English like an Englishman and was a public school man, apparently, I always believed he had a strain of Hungarian blood in him—or else Italian or Spanish. I know that sounds pretty broad, but he was enigmatic—a riddle I never managed to make much of. Aside from that he was wonderful: a linguist, speaking a dozen European languages and more eastern tongues and dialects, I believe, than any other living man. We met by accident in Berlin and were drawn together by our common interest in orientalism. Later, hearing I was in Paris, he hunted me up and insisted that I stay with him there while finishing my big book—the one whose title you know. His assistance to me then was invaluable. After that I lost track of him."

"And the valet?"

"Oh, I'd forgotten Doggott. He was a cockney, as silent and self-contained as Rutton. . . . To get back to Nokomis: I met Doggott at the station, called him by name, and he refused to admit knowing me—said I must have mistaken him for his twin brother. I could tell by his eyes that he lied, and it made me wonder. It's quite impossible that Rutton should be in this neck of the woods; he was a man who preferred to live a hermit in centers of civilization. . . . Curious!"

"I don't wonder you think so. Perhaps the man had been up to some mischief. . . . But," said the girl with a note of regret, "we're almost home!"

They had come to the seaward verge of the woodland, where the trees and scrub rose like a wild hedgerow on one side of a broad, well-metalled highway.

To the right, on the other side of the road, a rustic fence enclosed the trim, well-groomed plantations of Tanglewood Lodge; through the dead limbs a window of the house winked in the sunset glow like an eye of garnet. And as the two appeared a man came running up the road, shouting.

"That's Quain!" cried Amber; and sent a long cry of greeting toward him.

"Wait!" said the girl impulsively, putting out a detaining hand. "Let's keep our secret," she begged, her eyes dancing—"just for the fun of it!"

"Our secret!"

"About the babu and the Token; it's a bit of mystery and romance to me—and we don't often find that in our lives, do we? Let us keep it personal for a while—between ourselves; and you will promise to let me know if anything unusual ever comes of it, after I've gone. We can say that I was riding carelessly, which is quite true, and that the horse shied and threw me, which again is true; but the rest for ourselves only. . . . Please. . . . What do you say?"

He was infected by her spirit of irresponsible mischief. "Why, yes—I say yes," he replied; and then, more gravely: "I think it'll be very pleasant to share a secret with you, Miss Farrell. I shan't say a word to any one, until I have to."

As events turned he had no need to mention the incident until the morning of the seventh day following the girl's departure. In the interim nothing happened and he was able to enjoy some excellent shooting with Quain, his thoughts undisturbed by any further appearance of the babu.

But on the seventh morning it became evident that a burglary had been visited upon the home of his hosts. A window had been forced in the rear of the house and a trail of burnt matches and candle-grease between that entrance and the door of Amber's room, together with the somewhat curious circumstance that nothing whatever was missing from the personal effects of the Quains, forced him to make an explanation. For his own belongings had been rifled and the bronze box alone abstracted—still preserving its secret.

In its place Amber found a soiled slip of note paper inscribed with the round, unformed handwriting of the babu: "Pardon, sahib. A mistake has been made. I seek but to regain that which is not yours to possess. There will be naught else taken. A thousand excuses from your hmbl. obt. svt., Behari Lal Chatterji."

CHAPTER III.

Marooned.

A cry in the windy dusk; a sudden, hollow booming overhead; a vision of countless wings in panic, sketched in black upon a background of dulled silver; two heavy detonations and, with the least of intervals, a third; three vivid flashes of crimson and gold stabbing the purple twilight; and then the acrid reek of smokeless drifting into Amber's face, while from the sky, where the V-shaped flock had been, two stricken bundles of blood-stained feathers fell slowly, fluttering.

Shotgun poised abreast, his keen eyes marking down the fall of his prey, Amber stood without moving, exultation battling with a vague remorse in his bosom—as always when he killed. Quain, who had dropped back a pace after firing but one shot and scoring an unqualified miss at close range, now stood plucking clumsily, with half frozen fingers, at an obstinate breechlock.

"Just my beastly luck!" he growled. "It wouldn't 've been me if—! How many 'd you pot, Davy?"

"Only two," said Amber, lowering his weapon, extracting the spent shells, and reloading.

"Only two!" The information roused in Quain a demon of sarcasm. "Only two! How many 'd you expect to drop, on a snap-shot like that?"

"Two," returned Amber so patiently that Quain requested him, explosively, to go to the devil. "If you don't mind," he said, "I'll go after my ducks instead. You'll follow? They're over there, on our way."

Fifty yards or so away he found the ducks, side by side in a little hollow. "Fine fat birds," he adjudged them sagely.

Satisfaction glimmering in his grave dark eyes, he lingered in the hollow, while the frosty air, whipping madly through the sand hills, stung his face till it glowed beneath the brown. But presently, like the ghost of a forgotten kiss, something moist and chill touched gently his cheek, and was gone. Startled, he glanced skyward, then extended an arm, watching it curiously while the rough fabric of his sleeve was salted generously with fine white flakes. Though to some extent apprehended (they had been blind indeed to have ignored the menace of the dour day just then dying) snow had figured in their calculations as little as the scarcity of game. Amber wondered dimly if it would work a change in their plans, prove an obstacle to their safe return across the bay.

The flurry thickening in the air, a shade of anxiety colored his mood. "This'll never do!" he declared, and set himself to ascend a nearby dune.

Behind him a meager strip of sand held back a grim and angry sea; before him lay an eighth of a mile of sand-locked desolation, and then the weltering bay—a wide two miles of leaping, shouting waves, slate-colored but white of crests. Beyond, seen dimly as a wall through driving sheets of snow, were the darkly wooded rises of the mainland.

But, in the gloom, their little catboat lay occult to his searching gaze.

Quain's voice recalling him, he turned to discover his host stumbling through a neighboring vale, and obeying a peremptory wave of the elder man's hand, descended, accompanied by an avalanche in miniature.

"Better hurry," shouted Amber, as soon as he could make himself heard above the screaming of the gale. "Wind's freshening; it looks like mean weather."

"Really?" Quain fell into step at his side. "You 'stonish me. But the good Lord knows I'm willin'. Whereabout's the boat?"

"Blessed if I know: over yonder somewhere," Amber told him, waving toward the bay-shore an arm as vaguely helpful as his information.

"Thank you so much. Guess I can find her all right. Hump yo'self, Davy."

They plodded on heavily, making fair progress in spite of the hindering sand.

A little later they came to the water's edge and proceeded steadily along it, Quain leading confidently. Eventually he tripped over some obstacle, stumbled and lurched forward and recovered his balance with an effort, then remained with bowed head, staring down at his feet.

"Hurt yourself, old man?"

"No!" snapped Quain rudely.

"Then what in—"

"Eh?" Quain roused, but an instant longer looked him blankly in the eye. "Oh," he added brightly—"oh, she's gone."

"The boat—?"

"The boat," affirmed Quain, too discouraged for the obvious retort ungracious. He stooped and caught up a frayed end of rope, exhibiting it in witness to his statement. "Ain't it hell?" he inquired plaintively.

He cast the rope from him in disdain and wheeled to stare baywards. "There!" he cried, leveling an arm to indicate a dark and fleeting shadow upon the storm-whipped water. "There she goes—not 300 feet off. It can't be five minutes since she worked loose. It's the devil's own luck!"

A blur of snow swept between boat and shore; when it had passed the former was all but indistinguishable. From a full heart Quain blasphemed fluently. . . . "But if she holds as she stands," he amended quickly, his indominitable spirit fostering the forlorn hope, "she'll go aground in another five minutes—and I know just where. I'll go after her."

"The deuce you will! How?"

"There's an old skimmy up the shore a ways." Already Quain was moving off in search of it. "Noticed her this morning. Daresay she leaks like a sieve, but at worst the waters' pretty shoal inshore, hereabout."

"Damn!" Qlain brought up short with a shin barked against a thwart of the row boat he had been seeking, and in recognition of the mishap liberally insulted his luck.

Amber, knowing that his hurt was as inconsiderable as his ill-temper, which was more than half-feigned to mask his anxiety, laughed quietly, meanwhile inspecting their find with a critical eye.

"You don't seriously mean to put off in this crazy hen-coop, do you?" he asked.

"Just precisely that. It's the only way."

"It is simple madness. I won't—"

"You don't want to stay here all night, do you?"

"No, but—"

"Well, then, lend us a hand and don't stand there grumbling. Be thankful for what you've got, which is me and my enterprise."

"Oh, all right."

They Had Come to the Seaward Verge of the Woodland.

Together they put their shoulders to the bows of the old, flat-bottomed rowboat, with incredible exertions uprooting it from its ancient bed, and at length had it afloat.

Panting, Quain mopped his forehead with a handkerchief much the worse for a day's association with gun grease, and peered beneath his hand into the murk that veiled the bay.

"There she is," he declared confidently: "aground." He pointed. "I'll fetch up with her in no time."

But Amber could see nothing in the least resembling the catboat, and said so with decision.

"I'm coming, too," Amber said quietly.

"The hell you are! D'you want to sink us? What do you think this is, anyway—an excursion steamer? You stay where you are and—I say—take care of this till I come back, like a good fellow."

He thrust the butt of his shotgun into Amber's face, and the latter, seizing it, was rewarded by a vigorous push that sent him back half a dozen feet. At the same time the painter slipped from his grasp and Quain, lodging an end of the ell-pot stake on the hard sand bottom, put his weight upon it. Before Amber could recover, the boat had slid off and was melting swiftly into the shadows.

After a bit Quain's voice came back: "Don't fret, Davy. I'm all right."

Amber cupped hands to mouth and sent a cheerful hail ringing in response. Simultaneously the last, least, indefinite blur that stood for the boat in the darkness, vanished in a swirl of snow; and he was alone with the storm and his misgivings.

Twenty minutes wore wearily away. Falling ever more densely, the snow drew an impenetrable wan curtain between Amber and the world of life and light and warmth; while with each discordant blast the strength of the gale seemed to wax, its high hysteric clamor at times drowning even the incessant deep bellow of the ocean surf. Once Amber paused in his patrol, having heard, or fancying he had heard, the staccato plut-plut-plut of a marine motor. On impulse, with a swelling heart, he swung his gun skywards and pulled both triggers. The double report rang in his ears loud as a thunderclap.

In the moments that followed, while he stood listening, with every fiber of his being keyed to attention, the sense of his utter isolation chilled his heart as with cold steel.

A little frantically he loaded and fired again; but what at first might have been thought the faint far echo of a hail he in the end set down reluctantly to a trick of the hag-ridden wind.

An hour passed, punctuated at frequent intervals by gunshots. Though they evoked no answer of any sort, hope for Quain died hard in Amber's heart. Resolutely he turned to a consideration of his own plight and problematic way of escape.

His understanding of his situation was painfully accurate; he was marooned upon what a flood tide made a desert island but which at the ebb was a peninsula—a long and narrow strip of sand, bounded on the west by the broad shallow channel to the ocean, on the east connected with the mainland by a sandbar which half the day lay submerged.

QUEENS BOROUGH TIN HORSES

How Nightmares, Hobbies and Ponies of Beer Were Put on the City's Pay Roll.

"What's all this talk I hear about tin horses in Queens borough?"

"I'm surprised at your ignorance. Tin horses are a mere term used to designate equines which never existed, part of a graft game."

"Explain some more, please."

"Well, it was like this. If a fellow with a pull wanted some extra money he would have a couple of nightmares, report to the powers that be that he had a team, and they would be hired, at so much a day, for city work."

"Did all of the grafters have to have mares?"

"O, no; one of the gang had his wife's two clothes horses, drawing full pay."

"He was a genius."

"Yes, another man had a hobby about not wanting to work, his son had a hobby horse, and so he doubled them up and sent in bills for a team, at least, so I hear."

"That's interesting."

"Yes, rather. There was a rumor going around the other day that a man who owned a pair of ponies of beer also figured in the game."

"I suppose if one of the gang's wife and daughters owned pony skin coats they could have got on the pay roll too."

"Sure thing; it was a pony skin game, all the way through."

"And all that these fake horses ever drew was pay?"

"That's true, although they have set tongues a-wagging."—Brooklyn Times.

The Siamese Cat.

Siamese cats, with their curious markings and loud, discordant voices, are favorite pets.

In many respects these animals of Siamese breed are unique among felines. They follow their owners like dogs; they are exceedingly affectionate and insist upon attention, and they mew loudly and constantly, as if trying to talk. They have more vivacity and less dignity than usually falls to the lot of cats.

In color they vary from pale fawn through shades of brown to chocolate. There are two varieties, the temple cats and the palace cats, the principal difference between the two being that the palace breed is darker in color.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre, 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 162 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

The Silver Cup

at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3 per acre are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured, mixed farming a success.

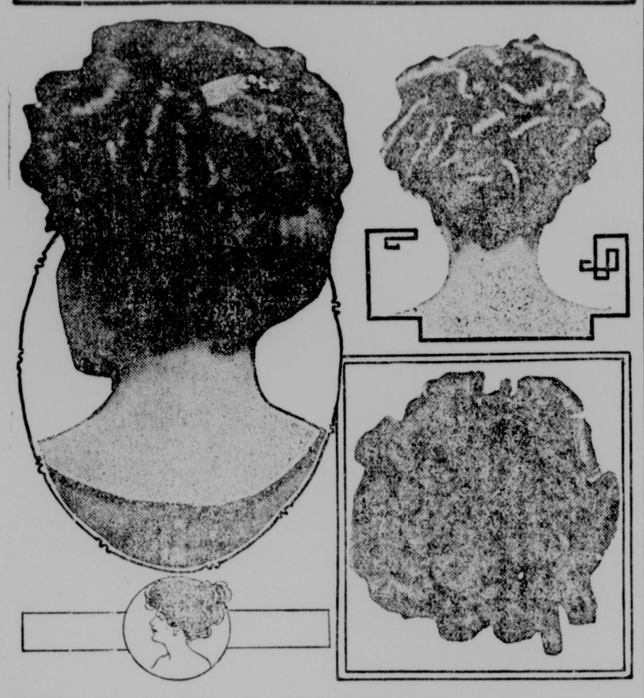
Suit Coiffure to Hat



IF it is true (as those who make it their business to know, say it is) that American women have less hair than the women of other lands, then we are compelled to admire the cleverness with which they conceal this deficiency. One would naturally infer that a vairety of styles in hairdressing would be impossible to them, but this is not the case at all. By using switches, chignons, transformations and the many other devices of dealers in hair goods, all the pretty conceits in the changing fashions in coiffure are copied and our gentlewomen continue to look today demure, tomorrow vivacious; another day finds them with a stately coiffure and then again they effect simplicity. No doubt Cleopatra rung all the changes within her knowledge or invention in matters of dress to aid her in earning the greatest tribute paid to her fascinations: "Age cannot wither, nor custom stale, her infinite variety."

Just now we must concern ourselves with suiting our coiffures to both large and small hats. The new imports for midsummer are more than large, one may almost call them enormous.

The large hats require a coiffure designed to fill in the space under the brim next the face and head, otherwise they look grotesque and their beauty is wasted. The small hats require only enough hair visible about the face to frame it, but it is necessary to have a coiffure under the hat, for the hat must be taken off.

The puffed chignon shown in the picture is woven in a long strip like that used for a "transformation." This strip is drawn together at intervals leaving quite large spaces on the under side of the coiffure, which are covered by the puffs and curls on the outside. These open spaces afford ventilation, and they also make it possible to arrange the chignon in a great variety of styles. What with them and the hair bands now universally worn there is no end to the variety of coiffures that fashion makes possible.

The chignon placed high on the head so that it is in the crown of the hat solves the problem of the small turban and makes a stately and beautiful coiffure. The puffs are crowded together a little and pinned down over a coil of the natural hair (or two coils) placed on top. Usually no other support is needed for this coiffure. In case the natural hair is very thin a small pompadour may be arranged by using a small hair roll before the chignon is pinned to place.—Julia Bottomley in the Illustrated Milliner.

HEADGEAR FOR THE MOTOR

Attractive in Design and Affords Ample Protection Against the Flying Dust.

Here is a very attractive way of arranging headgear for motoring. The vieux rose straw shape is wound with a blue silk scarf, which terminates in a loose chou at the side. A rose silk frill frames the face and a chiffon veil of the same color is gathered on to the crown, to be thrown back off the face if preferred. No pins at all are required, except for fixing the bonnet on the head.

Ribbon Holder.

Cut four three and one-half inch circles out of thin cardboard, tack Dresden silk on one, and white soft silk on the other, being careful that it is on smoothly. Trim of all superfluous ends and sew the circles together firmly. Whip a tiny valenciennes lace on the edge of these and repeat the process with the remaining circles. When this is done insert a bolt of baby ribbon between them, and with a stiletto make two holes from top circle through bolt and bottom circle. In these insert a short piece of baby ribbon, tying in bow on top and in this bow put a bone ribbon threader.

TUB DRESSES FOR A DOLLAR

Dainty Frocks in All Sorts of Designs Are Now Well Within the Reach of All.

It is astonishing how many dainty frocks for the summer can be made these days setting the limit of expenditures at $1, including the patterns and threads.

Never before have so many delicate designs been shown in inexpensive lawns and ginghams, and the business girl should begin now to make the smart little dresses which she will wear to the office during the coming summer.

Two things should be remembered. One is that much trimming of any sort detracts both from the cool effect of the gown and makes it bad to launder; the second is that however dainty the very light materials are they are far less serviceable than a plaid or a plain buff or blue dress.

As to the question of expense, begin with the pattern. Choose one of the new ones that are capable of being carried out in several different fashions, with or without the high waist line or with long or short sleeves and with or without yoke. Thus for 15 cents you will provide yourself with a pattern for several frocks.

Next, a few yards of white mull and some inexpensive lace will make broad collars and cuffs and a fichu or a dainty pointed yoke, all of which will serve as trimming, for your gowns.

Then as to materials. Ginghams, plain ones, may be purchased as low as 8 and 10 cents a yard. A good quality of lawn in dark colors is only a cent or two more in price.

Coat Hanger.

When away from home one very seldom thinks of taking a coat hanger along, but to prevent the coat from becoming creased and untidy looking by being thrown over the back of a chair an emergency coat hanger may be readily made. Roll a newspaper tightly and tie it in the middle with a stout cord, forming a loop to attach it to a hook or nail. This is better than throwing the coat limply in the nearest place, and is contrived in a minute with the materials always at hand.

Patch Quilts.

The housewife who has a patch quilt tucked away in some trunk in the attic will do well to bring it from its hiding place and spread it on the bed in her guest room this spring. If the real antique quilt is not available, then the making of one, piecing the squares together and stitching them, is a pleasant pastime.

KITCHEN CONVENIENCES.

For those who have tried the card index for recipes, note books and slips of paper that are never where they were left, are things of the past.

The neat little wooden box may rest on the kitchen shelf and when a recipe is wanted can be easily found and placed near by for reference. If it is soiled by spatters, a new one will quickly replace it.

When you are on a visit, get some choice recipes added to your box, by carrying a few cards with you. You can be making a cook book every day.

If new clothes pins are put into hot water before using they will not break so easily.

To remove dirt from porcelain tubs and sinks, dampen a cloth in gasoline and rub over the places. The soil will instantly disappear, leaving the surface clean and polished.

Tips for the Housekeeper.

A tablespoonful of paraffin oil with a quart of water, boiling, allowed to cool until reasonably hot will give windows a brilliant polish.

Keep cooking utensils looking like new by boiling them in soda water. Use a teaspoonful to a pint of water.

Aluminum utensils will not bear this treatment, as soda destroys the metal. To clean aluminum that is badly stained, a solution of oxalic acid is good.

Olive oil, when it may be purchased reasonably, is an ideal frying fat, as it burns less easy than any of our frying fats.

When cutting bread very thin, dip the knife occasionally in very hot water.

Cheeses which are not eaten fresh, such as the cream cheeses, should be wrapped in a cloth wet with vinegar, kept under glass away from the light.

Sugar tongs that come in candy boxes make useful articles in the kitchen. They will remove pickles and olives from bottles, rescue a dish cloth that is under boiling water, remove eggs from the water and numerous other uses will be found for them.

IT IS PLAIN that religion will not thrive with a bad stomach, and that poor cooking will show itself in wretched feelings.

SOUR CREAM AND ITS USES.

There are many cooks who will not take the trouble to save small quantities of sour cream. It is really a valuable article of food and may be used in numberless ways in food combinations, saving butter, sweet cream and other shortening.

Sour cream makes a good salad dressing, a filling for pie together with raisins and eggs. Gingerbreads, cookies of all kinds and fried cakes are always to be depended upon for keeping qualities when sour cream is used in their composition. Here are a few ways of using sour cream in cakes:

Nut Cake.—Take three-fourths of a cup of sour cream, one cupful of sugar, one and a half cupfuls of flour, one cup of chopped English walnut meats, one egg, one-half teaspoonful each of salt and soda; flavor to taste. Bake in a loaf nearly an hour in a moderate oven.

Feather Cake.—Take a cup of thick sour cream, one cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of flour sifted with a teaspoonful of soda and one of baking powder, a half teaspoon of salt, one egg, a teaspoonful of vanilla. Bake in a loaf.

Spice Cake.—To three-fourths of a cup of sour milk add the same amount of sugar, one and a half cupfuls of flour, two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, a teaspoonful each of baking powder, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg, sifted with flour, and a half teaspoon of salt and soda, one whole egg and the yolks of two. Bake in layers and put together with boiled frosting.

Cream Cakes.—Use the above recipe and bake the cakes in gem irons, sprinkling over each a little granulated sugar and putting a raisin in the center before baking.

USE OF ALCOHOL HEREDITARY

Pathetic Story of Brilliant Lawyer Who Disowned Son When Charged With Murder.

A young man from a good family committed an atrocious murder and was put on trial for his life. His grandfather had been an excessive drinker. His father and mother both drank moderately at meals. His life and history indicated great brain feebleness and degrees of insanity for at least two years before the murder. Public sentiment was very strong against him at the trial. The district attorney had employed an able lawyer to assist him and he publicly announced that the cause of justice demanded the prisoner's death. Two distinguished physicians were retained to swear to the sanity of the prisoner. I was called as an expert in his defense, says a writer in an exchange. As the trial went on it was evident that the efforts of the state would be directed to break the force of my testimony as to the insanity of the prisoner. I answered the hypothetical question and explained it at some length for the defense, and then was cross-examined by the state's attorney, who was evidently determined to destroy the impression which I had produced on the jury.

The attorney was a man of keen intellect and a thorough master of the art of examining witnesses. After trying various methods to create confusion in my statements, he settled down to a scientific examination, insisting on exact answers without qualifications. As the examination progressed it was evident to both of us that we were surprising each other in questions and answers. There was in his questioning unmistakable indications of a very clear knowledge of the alcoholic mind and method of reasoning such as can never be described in books.

Although two able physicians were seated at his side suggesting questions, it was evident that his knowledge of such cases was far superior to theirs, and the turns and forms of questions were revelations of familiarity with the subject that was a surprise to me.

At the close of the day's trial I concluded that a personal acquaintance with the attorney might give me an insight into his mentality that would be to my advantage in the next day's examination, which after a night of consultation and preparation would undoubtedly be still more severe. Upon being introduced by the judge, I, in an undertone, remarked to the attorney that I had never before been examined by any one who had such acute knowledge of the drink craze and its victims, and that I knew that this knowledge did not come from books. After a moment's hesitation he answered me with a quivering lip, "Yes, I know of this matter personally in my family and it has been a skeleton to me."

He asked me to come to his room at the hotel that evening for a personal talk. The interview lasted until midnight. He then told me of his only son who was expelled from college for drinking, and of how he had driven him away from his home against the advice of his wife, and that his son was now serving a life sentence for murder in a western prison. He spoke of his bitter feelings against the attitude his wife had taken, for she had insisted that the boy was diseased. This he himself could not believe and he reviewed the heart burnings and sorrows which followed the death of his wife, and her steadfast faith in the mental sickness of the boy, and her disapproval of his own harshness; and how at her death he realized that she was right, but his pride and position made him fear to think of this subject seriously. He spoke of his own drinking days, and of his abstinence at his wife's request after the birth of his son. Even on this trial he did not dare to permit his feelings to assume the possibility of mental disease. I told him frankly that he made a mistake, that his wife was right, that his boy was a victim, the direct transmission of his own drinking habits.

We shook hands and parted with a cordiality which was not apparent in the next day's examination, and yet beneath the bluff and stern exterior I could see the real man struggling to put the question so that my answers would be the least favorable to his interest. The case was won. My testimony prevailed and the victim was placed in an insane asylum, where he died two years later. No one knew that our midnight interview saved this prisoner from judicial murder.

A few years afterward this lawyer employed me as an expert in the defense of a similar case. At the close of the trial I went to his son, a poor, harmless, half-idiotic man. No questions were asked, but I knew that he had only recently been released and brought home to die. The father's tenderness toward him showed this. The crime had been committed in another state and no one knew the facts of the case.

A year later this lawyer was found dead in his bed, and the boy was placed in a private asylum, where he is now living. Fortunately, his mind is gone and he is unable to recall the past. This incident illustrates some of the startling facts not recognized

A Drop of Blood

Or a little water from the human system when thoroughly tested by the chief chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., tells the story of impoverished blood—nervous exhaustion or some kidney trouble. Such examinations are made without cost and is only a small part of the work of the staff of physicians and surgeons under the direction of Dr. R. V. Pierce giving the best medical advice possible without cost to those who wish to write and make a full statement of symptoms. An imitation of natures method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative and glyceric extract of roots, without the use of alcohol, such as Even on this trial he did not dare to permit his feelings to assume the possibility of mental disease. I told him frankly that he made a mistake, that his wife was right, that his boy was a victim, the direct transmission of his own drinking habits.

We shook hands and parted with a cordiality which was not apparent in the next day's examination, and yet beneath the bluff and stern exterior I could see the real man struggling to put the question so that my answers would be the least favorable to his interest. The case was won. My testimony prevailed and the victim was placed in an insane asylum, where he died two years later. No one knew that our midnight interview saved this prisoner from judicial murder.

A few years afterward this lawyer employed me as an expert in the defense of a similar case. At the close of the trial I went to his son, a poor, harmless, half-idiotic man. No questions were asked, but I knew that he had only recently been released and brought home to die. The father's tenderness toward him showed this. The crime had been committed in another state and no one knew the facts of the case.

A year later this lawyer was found dead in his bed, and the boy was placed in a private asylum, where he is now living. Fortunately, his mind is gone and he is unable to recall the past. This incident illustrates some of the startling facts not recognized

Or a little water from the human system when thoroughly tested by the chief chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., tells the story of impoverished blood—nervous exhaustion or some kidney trouble. Such examinations are made without cost and is only a small part of the work of the staff of physicians and surgeons under the direction of Dr. R. V. Pierce giving the best medical advice possible without cost to those who wish to write and make a full statement of symptoms. An imitation of natures method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative and glyceric extract of roots, without the use of alcohol, such as

One of the most curious phenomena ever witnessed occurred Sunday night, June 11. Full moon, round and yellow, hung low in the southern sky. Altho plainly visible its feeble rays made but little light. An arch like a a rainbow, extending from the horizon some distance into the sky enclosed the moon. Inside this all was bright. Beyond this the sky was covered with deep black clouds and all was midnight darkness. Out on them the lightning flashed almost incessantly. Nor did this pass in a moment but lasted an hour or more. The arch grew slowly smaller and finally after a blinding flash of lightning was seen no more. R. SEE.

EDITOR DEFFINBAUGH PLACED UNDER ARREST THIS MORNING

Charged in the Warrant With Criminally Libelling Mr. R. E. Sliger.

This morning shortly after eight o'clock Sheriff Shartzer placed Mr. Charles A. Deffinbaugh, editor of the Mountain Democrat, under arrest upon a warrant sworn out by Mr. R. E. Sliger, cashier of the First National Bank and foreman of the grand jury which adjourned last week, charging Deffinbaugh with having criminally libelled him by the publication of an article appearing in the columns of the Democrat last week, which was anonymously contributed under the nomdeplum Pro Bono Publico in which Mr. Sliger and other members of the grand jury were unjustly and most outrageously attacked for an alleged non-performance of their duties as sworn officers of the Court.

Mr. Deffinbaugh's hearing will take place some day early next week before Justice Teats.

KILLED IN BARNUM MINE

Robert Harvey, Aged 23 Years, Crushed to Death Last Wednesday.

Robert Harvey, aged twenty-three years, son of Augustus Harvey, a well known resident of the Potomac valley in Garrett county, was instantly killed last Wednesday afternoon about five o'clock in the Barnum mine operated by the Monroe Coal Mining Company when a large rock weighing several tons fell from the roof and literally buried the young man beneath it, crushing out his life in a twinkling.

Mr. Harvey had been engaged at work in the mine in which he was killed for a number of months and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. He was married about one year ago and is survived by his widow and his parents. His funeral occurred Friday afternoon from his late home near Barnum.

A Surprise Wedding.

The announcement, last Thursday evening, of the marriage of Mr. Ralph Thayer, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. A. Thayer, of Oakland, and Miss Juanita Bartlett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Bartlett, of Grafton, W. Va., which occurred on Wednesday evening at the Presbyterian manse, Grafton, Rev. J. A. McClelland officiating, came as a great surprise to the relatives and friends of the groom. Both parties to the wedding were students at the West Virginia University, Morgantown, the groom having graduated last week in civil engineering. He is an excellent young man and both he and his bride have the very best wishes of a large number of friends for a prosperous and happy married life.

BANKERS CONVENTION IN SESSION AT DEER PARK

Banquet Will Be Tendered Visitors Tonight By Local and Allegany County Banks.

The sixteenth annual convention of the Maryland Bankers' Association convened yesterday at Deer Park Hotel, which was opened for guests the day previous under the management of the Summer Resorts Company New Jersey, with Mr. A. P. McCloud local manager.

Many of the bankers from Baltimore and other points arrived at Deer Park Tuesday evening on a special train, while others drove through in their auto.

The address of welcome was made by Mr. Gilmor S. Hamill yesterday morning when the meeting was attended by representatives from each of the local and county banks.

One of the most important features of the meeting, aside from the business to be discussed and the election of officers, will be the address on the "Aldrich Currency Reserve Association," by Mr. A. Platt Andrew, the assistant secretary of the Treasury. Mr. Fred E. Farnsworth, the general secretary of American Bankers' Association, will be another of the speakers. A successor will be chosen to President Joshua W. Miles, and it is said to be the turn of Baltimore city to have the president again. The bank clerks will be represented by Robert S. Mooney, who was president of the Baltimore Chapter, American Institute of Banking, up until a few weeks ago, when his term expired. He will deliver an address.

The concluding feature of the convention and incidentally the crowning one from the viewpoint of those who accept statistics as a daily diet, but occasionally would fain revel in "a feast of reason and flow of soul," with something on the side, will be the banquet this evening at the Deer Park Hotel, for which covers will be laid for two hundred and fifty ladies and gentlemen. This banquet for which an elaborate menu has been provided, will be presided over by Judge Robert R. Henderson as toastmaster, and the toasts to be responded to will include addresses by Governor Crothers, U. S. Senator Chilton of West Virginia, and Mr. E. H. Sincell of Oakland.

This afternoon the members of the association will be entertained by the Garrett county automobilists, who will take them down over the state road for a spin.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Jamesson, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jamesson, of Piedmont, died at the home of his parents in Piedmont on Tuesday of rheumatism, which attacked the heart of the child, resulting in his death. The parents, who are well known in Oakland, have the sincere sympathy of a host of friends here.

PRESIDENT'S ENGAGEMENT AT MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK WITHDRAWN

Press of Official Duties of Chief Executive Given as Reason.

Superintendent Shelton of Mountain Lake Park, received last Friday morning the following letter:

The White House,
Washington, June 14, 1911.

My dear Mr. Shelton:

With reference to my letter of May 27th, I am very sorry to have to advise you that the President is compelled to cancel his proposed trip to Mountain Lake Park on the 25th inst., for the reason that he will necessarily be away from the city for the greater part of the preceding week and the pressure of his official duties will not permit him to absent himself so soon again.

The President much appreciates your courtesy in connection with the matter, and regrets the necessity for thus disappointing your Association.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES D. HILLES,
Secretary to the President.

The White House was secured at once by long distance telephone, and the President's secretary encouraged the Park authorities to hope that the President might come later in the season, but it has proved too late to make any further arrangements for the formal opening of the Park on Sunday, the 25th., so that the entire service has been recalled.

Of course this is a tremendous disappointment, but those who occupy the seats of the mighty are subject to certain contingencies that sometimes make it necessary for them to do things that greatly disappoint other people as well as themselves. Every effort is being made to bring the President to the Park later, and ample announcement will be given.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETING

County Superintendent Obligingly Sent Proceedings of Board for Publication.

For the first time since his incumbency of the office the learned and obliging secretary of the board of school commissioners has furnished the press with a copy of the proceedings of the board, presumably as a matter of news, but reading between the lines a blind man can readily see that the intent and purpose of the said l. and o. s. of the great triumvirate styled the board of county school commissioners of Garrett county, is to "knock" the County Commissioners for their action in lowering the school appropriation, which they had a perfect right to do under the circumstances and for which they have been congratulated by the great mass of tax paying and foremost citizens and residents of the county.

The letter of the learned and obliging secretary of the board is printed verbatim, which includes misspelling, bad punctuation and other egregrious errors:

School board meeting.

OAKLAND, MD., June 12, 1911.

Full board in sission today. After a most careful consideration of the situation, owing to the cut, in the the appropriation by the County Commissioners, for school purpose: board decided that it would be impossible to erect any new building, or to make many of the contemplated repairs, much needed, to the school property. This is a condition which the school board deeply regrets and a condition for which the County Commissioners are solely responsible, Under the present, financial conditions it will require the most careful consideration by the board to maintain the term of seven and one half months and keep the teacher's solaries to the present schedule-

The board hopes, however, to do it. The board adjouns to meet at call of president.

E A BROWNING, Sey

Please publish in this weeks issue of your paper—

THE REPUBLICAN publishes with pleasure the above letter, and we are extremely glad to have it from such distinguished authority as the aforesaid County Superintendent that the levy is sufficient "to maintain the term of seven and one-half months and keep the teachers' salary to the present schedule," with "careful consideration."

That is essentially all that the County Commissioners and tax-payers of the county wish. The Commissioners have no desire to furnish an excess of funds for the school commissioners to spend for the erection of school buildings by the county superintendent's brother at a price in excess of other legitimate bids; neither do the County Commissioners care to furnish money to pay large salaries to the relatives and friends of the county superintendent. The sole object of the County Commissioners is to furnish sufficient funds to carry on the schools and this they have done, according to the statement of the county superintendent, secretary, treasurer and examiner of the school commissioners of Garrett county, published above. Hence the County Commissioners have done their duty by the children of the county and the tax payers also.

What more can be said, and what is the use of the county superintendent and his few cohorts to stand on their hind legs and howl like a pack of coyotes that the County Commissioners have failed in their duty, when Browning himself is authority for the statement that funds sufficient have been provided?

Men's Clothing in Many Stores Has Reached a Fork in the Road.

The advancing cost of woolens is a condition, not a theory. It means either increasing cost for MEN'S CLOTHING or depreciation of Clothing values.

Clothing makers and sellers have reached a fork in the road.

There is one way to lessen the cost and still maintain the appearance in the Clothing. It can be taken out of the workmanship.

That is the way many makers are already getting out of the difficulty, but that is not the way with the line of Ready Made Clothing we are handling direct from the manufacturers.

We ask you to inspect the $10, $12, $14 and $15 and other priced suits we have in stock and judge for your self.

FOREST FIRES

Loss in Garrett County This Spring Totals $158,600.

The forest fires in Garrett county this past spring have been numerous and very destructive. The report of the State Forester made up from the official reports of the fifteen forest wardens, supplemented by a special investigation by himself, shows a deplorable state of affairs.

The twenty fires reported during May burned over 52,000 acres of woodlands causing a damage of $150,000. There were several dwelling houses burned and other buildings, thousands of panels of fencing were consumed and and an enormous amount of young timber destroyed. For the past few years through the activity of the forest wardens and the greater desire of the landowners to protect the young growth, fires have been kept out where they were formerly quite frequent. In consequence, large areas of a fine young growth had gotten started. These fires, however, have in most cases destroyed the young growth and cut off the fruits of years of watchful care. The worst feature of all is that undoubtedly most of these fires were the result of wilful firing of the woods, as the following report of the State Forester shows:

Cause of fire	No.	Area burned over	Amt. of damage
R. R. engines	1	300 acres	$ 800
Log engines	4	700 acres	3000
Clearing land	4	2200 acres	2800
Firing	11	48800 acres	152,000
Total	20	52000 acres	$158 600

This report shows that over half of the fires were caused by wilful firing and that over 95 per cent. of the entire fire damage was from this cause alone.

Miles of fencing were burned and at a time when it was a great hardship to the farmers to replace them. If the farmer stopped his other work to rebuild the fences, he could not get in his crops, and yet if he put in his crops without replacing his fences it would be useless. As he could not well do both at the same time it has worked a serious hardship.

Mr. Charles M. Miller, of Swanton, was in the city last Thursday on business and as an auditor at the farmers' institute held in the court house here that day.

Test Value of Alcohol.

The British authorities some time ago made a test of the alleged value of alcohol when men are subjected to unusual and exhausting labor. Experiments mere made at different times and under varying conditions with three regiments from each of several brigades. In one every man was forbidden to drink any alcohol whatever while the test lasted; in the second, malt liquor only was taken; in the third, a ration of whisky was given to each man. The whisky-drinkers manifested more dash at first, but generally in about four days showed signs of weakness and fatigue; those given malt liquor displayed less dash at first, but their endurance lasted somewhat longer; while the abstainers improved daily in alertness and staying powers. In the German army experiments are being made with sugar, which is claimed to have such great sustaining powers that it is proposed to serve it as an extra ration when unusual fatigues are to be borne.—Medical Record.

Lincoln on Liquor.

Abraham Lincoln, in speaking of the liquor traffic, once said:

"The liquor traffic is a cancer in society, eating out its vitals and threatening destruction, and all attempts to regulate it will not only prove abortive, but will aggravate the evil. There must be no attempt to regulate the cancer. It must be eradicated. Not a root must be left behind."

Lace Millinery

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

THE keynote of fashionable headwear for women is lace, as shown in the photograph above. The hat should be of dark straw so as to form an effective background for the delicate tracery of the lace, which may be Irish, Cluny or better still of Nacrame. In this instance, the hat is of dark blue straw, trimmed and rimmed with babe Irish lace. A pom-pom of fluffy white feathers completes the confection.

LIGHT CLOTH WALKING SUIT

Hay Colored Material Most Effective for This Peculiarly Jaunty Costume.

Hay-colored cloth is used here, with trimming of wide black military braid; the narrow skirt has a strip of the braid taken down the left side of front.

The coat is cut so that the braid corresponds, the right side of front being cut slightly wider than the left; the large revers and collar are edged with braid; the cuffs are also trimmed with it.

Hat of hay-colored straw trimmed with roses.

Materials required: 5 yards cloth 46 inches wide, 6 yards braid, 8 buttons, 4½ yards silk or satin for lining coat.

Cretonne Cabinets.

The small cretonne-covered cabinets are becoming very popular. These, too, may be placed on the dresser. They are of various sizes and heights and are provided with drawers for handkerchiefs, gloves, neckwear, jewels, etc. Similar cabinets are also provided for men. These have convenient compartments for collars, handkerchiefs, ties, etc.

GOOD USE FOR EXTRA SCARFS

May Be Made Into Blouse by Any One at All Clever With the Needle

If you have an extra scarf in the Paisley, Dresden or Parisian design and want to have a blouse to match the scarf which you wish to retain, for scarfs still have wide fashion, the idea of turning the extra one into a blouse is one you can snatch up and put to good use.

Scarfs, mufflers and kerchiefs of these silky crepe materials are easily cut up and made into neat and becoming blouses by the home needleworker who takes advantage of the innovation.

Almost invariably the middle possesses a figure design, while the border is also composed of figures with a band of white or light color between these two figured portions. Make it a point to use these strips of material for the lower part of the blouse or the inside of the sleeves, and in thus utilizing the plain strip a bolero effect is secured.

One must choose for onesself according to the largeness of design whether to set in the figured parts lengthwise or crosswise, the lengthwise effect being assumed generally only when the figure is very large.

Those with smaller figures can so well be arranged in a series of crosswise bars that it would hardly be becoming in the lengthened effect.

These crepe scarf waists are draped under sheer veiling, to which they adapt themselves readily without any nerve jarring aspect that attend some of the innovations that are executed in such an off-hand manner.

For the Traveler.

The traveler who is fastidious about the boiling of her eggs should invest in one of the egg-shaped boilers of copper, small enough to pack in a trunk. It will cook four eggs.

This lamp is like a huge egg, has an alcohol lamp beneath and a tray with four compartments to hold the eggs erect in the water and make removal easy.

For the girl in an apartment who likes to do light housekeeping such a cooker could be utilized for making cup custards and other dishes cooked in water.

Survival of the Kimono Sleeve.

It is strange how faithful Dame Fashion is to the kimono sleeve, which still appears on the latest models, and we have gone back to the very high waist effect. In most of the new skirts there is a loose pleat at the back which hangs down to varying lengths but generally reaches the hem. This has a charming effect, and takes away the extreme severity of the plain tight skirt. The train which has made its appearance is either cut quite square or is very narrow indeed

DON'T NEGLECT YOUR KIDNEYS.

Kidney troubles are too serious to neglect. Slight ailments are often fore-runners of dangerous kidney illness and should be treated without delay. J. L. Richardson, Red Key, Ind., says: "My back ached as though it would break. I could not move without intense pain. My kidneys were in such bad shape that it was necessary to draw the secretions. The doctors said I was beyond help. I began the use of Doan's Kidney Pills and gradually improved until completely cured. I have not had the slightest trouble since."

THREE CURED OF ECZEMA

"When a child, I suffered eight years with eczema. I could not sleep at night, and had sores all over my chest. We had doctors and none could do any good, until my mother saw the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies in the paper. We used the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, and they cured me of eczema. I also used them on my five children. Two of them had eczema very badly. When my children had eczema, I was not worried at all, as I knew the Cuticura Remedies would do their work. They had sores all over their heads, their hair would fall out, and they would scratch all night and day. They had it on their heads, face, and in back of the ears so that I thought their ears would drop off. I washed their heads and bodies with Cuticura Soap and they are as clean as the driven snow. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my children of ringworm. I would not be without the Cuticura Remedies. They are wonderful." (Signed) Mrs. Violet Cole, 26 S. Market Hogs Much Lighter.

The average weight of hogs marketed in recent years is much lighter than in former years; in the decade 1870-1879 the average weight of hogs killed during the winter months in western packing centers was about 275 pounds; in the decade 1880-1889 about 257 pounds; in the decade 1890-1899 about 239 pounds, and in the past decade 1900-1909 about 219 pounds. In other words, hogs marketed between 30 and 40 years ago averaged one-fourth heavier than those marketed in recent years.

The Second Dimension.

It was on a little branch railway in a southern state that the New England woman ventured to refer to the high rates. "It seems to me five cents a mile is extortion," she said, with frankness, to her southern cousin.

"It's a big lot of money to pay if you think of it by the mile," said the southerner, in her soft drawl; "but you just think how cheap it is by the hour, Cousin Annie—only about thirty-five cents."—Youth's Companion.

Peek-a-Boo Socks.

Many men wear peek-a-boo socks, not because they are in style, but because their wives use inferior strong laundry soaps. The free alkali and rosin contained in these soaps rot the material and as a consequence the poor men are blamed for being "hard on their socks."

This can be avoided by the use of Hewitt's Easy Task Soap. Twenty-five years of use have proved its worth. Five cents a cake.

Australia Rich in Libraries.

Victoria's (Australia) five hundredth free library was opened lately. One and all of the older libraries are well patronized. The gross revenue received by them in the aggregate from halls, members' subscriptions, and grants is about $340,000. There are about a million books in these libraries, and it was claimed that something like 3,500,000 visits are paid to them in the year. While works of fiction are read to the greatest extent, general literature and history receive a good deal of attention.

An Astonished Boy.

In February of this year a Wisconsin farmer took his twelve-year-old boy to a village for the first time, and there the lad saw a train of cars. He was so astonished at the sight that he lost the power of speech for three weeks.

If that youngster is ever taken to a circus or a zoological garden he'll surely be struck dumb for the rest of his life. His father's farm must be hidden away in a hole in the ground.

BUSINESS WOMEN
A Lunch Fit for a King.

An active and successful young lady tells her food experience:

"Some years ago I suffered from nervous prostration, induced by continuous brain strain and improper food, added to a great grief.

"I was ordered to give up my work, as there was great danger of my mind failing me altogether. My stomach was in bad condition (nervous dyspepsia, I think now) and when Grape-Nuts food was recommended to me, I had no faith in it. However, I tried it, and soon there was a marked improvement in my condition.

"I had been troubled with faint spells, and had used a stimulant to revive me. I found that by eating Grape-Nuts at such times I was relieved and suffered no bad effects, which was a great gain. As to my other troubles—nervous prostration, dyspepsia, etc.—on the Grape-Nuts diet they soon disappeared.

"I wish especially to call the attention of office girls to the great benefit I derived from the use of Grape-Nuts as a noon luncheon. I was thoroughly tired of cheap restaurants and ordinary lunches, and so made the experiment of taking a package of Grape-Nuts food with me, and then slipping out at noon and getting a nickel's worth of sweet cream to add to it.

"I found that this simple dish, finished off with an apple, peach, orange, or a bunch of grapes made a lunch fit for a king, and one that agreed with me perfectly.

"I throve so on my Grape-Nuts diet that I did not have to give up my work at all, and in the two years have had only four lost days charged up against me.

SYNOPSIS.

David Amber, starting for a duck-shooting visit with his friend, Quain, comes upon a young lady equestrian who has been dismounted by her horse becoming frightened at the sudden appearance in the road of a burly Hindu. He declares he is Behari Lal Chatterji, "the appointed mouthpiece of The Bell," addresses Amber as a man of high rank and pressing a mysterious little bronze box, "The Token," into his hand, disappears in the wood. The girl calls Amber by name. He in turn addresses her as Miss Sophie Farrell, daughter of Col. Farrell of the British diplomatic service in India and visiting the Quains. Several nights later the Quain home is burglarized and the bronze box stolen. Amber and Quain go hunting on an island and become lost and Amber is left marooned.

CHAPTER III. (Continued).

He had, then, these alternatives: he might either compose himself to hug the leeward side of a dune till daybreak (or till relief should come) or else undertake a five-mile tramp on the desperate hope of finding at the end of it the tide out and the sandbar a safe footway from shore to shore. Between the two he vacillated not at all; anything were preferable to a night in the dunes, beaten by the implacable storm, haunted by the thought of Quain; and even though he were to find the eastern causeway under water, at least the exercise would have served to keep him from freezing.

Ten minutes after his last cartridge had been fruitlessly discharged, he set out for the ocean beach, pausing at the first dune he came upon to scrape a shallow trench in the sand and cache therein both guns and his game-bag. Marking the spot with a bit of driftwood stuck upright, he pressed on, eventually pausing on the overhanging lip of a 20-foot bluff. To its foot the beach below was aswirl knee-deep with wash of breakers.

Awed and disappointed, Amber drew back. The beach was impassable; here was no wide and easy road to the east, such as he had thought to find; to gain the sandbar he had now to thread a tortuous and uncertain way through the bewildering dunes.

A demon of anxiety prodded him on: he must learn Quain's fate, or go mad. Once on the mainland it were a matter of facility to find his way to the village of Shampton, telephone Tanglewood and charter a "team" to convey him thither. He shut his teeth on his determination and set his face to the east.

Beset and roughly buffeted by the gale; the snow settling in rippling drifts in the folds of his clothing and upon his shoulders clinging like a cloth; his face cut by clouds of sand flung horizontally with well-nigh the force of birdshot from a gun: he bowed to the blast and plodded steadily on.

Imperceptibly fatigue benumbed his senses, blunted the keen edge of his emotions; even the care for Quain became a mere dull ache in the back of his perceptions; of physical suffering he was unconscious. He fell a prey to freakish fancies. For a long time he moved on in stupid, wondering contemplation of a shining crescent of sand backed by a green, steaming wall of jungle. Many visions formed and dissolved in dream-like phantasmagoria; but of them all the strongest and most recurrent was that of the girl in the black riding-habit, walking by his side down the aisle of trees. So that presently the tired and overwrought man believed himself talking with her, reasoning, arguing, pleading desperately for his heart's desire; . . . and wakened with a start, to hear the echo of her voice as though she had spoken but the instant gone, to find his own lips framing the syllables of her name—"Sophia!"

Abruptly he regained consciousness of his plight, and with an effort shook his senses back into his head. It was not precisely a time when he could afford to let his wits go woolgathering. Inflexible of purpose in the face of all his weariness and discouragement, he was on the point of resuming his march when he was struck by the circumstance that the whitened shoulder of a dune, quite near at hand, should seem as if frosted with light—coldly luminous.

Staring, speculative, he hung in the wind—inquisitive as a cat but loath to waste time in footless inquiry. The snow-fall, setting in with augmented violence, decided him. Where light was, there should be man, and where man, shelter.

His third eager stride opened up a wide basin in the dunes, filled with eddying veils of snow, and set, at some distance, with two brilliant squares of light—windows in an invisible dwelling. In the space between them, doubtless, there would be a door. But a second time he paused, remembering that the island was said to be uninhabited. Only yesterday he had asked and been so informed. . . . Odd!

So passing strange he held it, indeed, that he was conscious of a singular reluctance to question the phenomenon. He had positively to force himself on to seek the door, and even when he had stumbled against its step he twice lifted his hand and let it fall without knocking.

There was not a sound within that he could hear above the clamour of the goblin night.

In the end, however, he knocked stoutly enough.

CHAPTER IV.

The Man Perdu.

A shadow swept swiftly across one of the windows, and the stranger at the door was aware of a slight jarring, as though some more than ordinarily brutal gust of wind had shaken the house upon its foundation, or an inner door had been slammed violently. But otherwise he had so little evidence that his summons had fallen on aught but empty walls or deaf ears that he had begun to debate his right to enter without permission, when a chain rattled, a bolt grated, and the door swung wide. A flood of radiance together with a gust of heated air struck him in the face. Dazzled, he reeled across the threshold.

Three paces within the room, Amber paused, waiting for his eyes to adjust themselves to the light. Vaguely conscious of a presence behind him, he faced another—the slight, spare silhouette of a man's figure between him and the lamp; and at the same time felt that he was being subjected to a close scrutiny—both searching and, at its outset, the reverse of hospitable. But he had no more than become sensitive to this than the man before stepped quickly forward and with two strong hands clasped his shoulders.

"David Amber!" he heard his name pronounced in a voice singularly resonant and pleasant. "So you've run me to earth at last!"

Amber's face was blank with incredulity as he recognized the speaker. "Rutton!" he stammered. "Rutton—why—by all that's strange!"

"Guilty," said the other with a quiet laugh. "But sit down." He swung Amber about, gently guiding him to a chair. "You look pretty well done up. How long have you been out in this infernal night? But never mind answering; I can wait. Doggott!"

"Yes, sir."

"Take Mr. Amber's coat and boots and bring him my dressing-gown and slippers."

"Yes, sir."

"And a hot toddy and something to eat—and be quick about it."

"Very good, sir."

Rutton's body-servant moved noiselessly to Amber's side, deftly helping him remove his shooting jacket, whereon snow had caked in thin and brittle sheets. His eyes, grey and shallow, flickered recognition and softened, but he did not speak in anticipation of Amber's kindly "Good evening, Doggott." To which he responded quietly: "Good evening, Mr. Amber. It's a pleasure to see you again. I trust you are well."

"Quite, thank you. And you?"

"I'm very fit, thank you, sir."

"And"—Amber sat down again, Doggott kneeling at his feet to unlace and remove his heavy pigskin hunting boots—"and your brother?"

For a moment the man did not answer. His head was lowered so that his features were invisible, but a dull, warm flush overspread his cheeks.

"And your brother, Doggott?"

"I'm sorry, sir, about that; but it was Mr. Rutton's orders," muttered the man.

"You're talking of the day you met Doggott at Nokomis station?" interposed his employer from the stand he had taken at one side of the fireplace, his back to the broad hearth whereon blazed a grateful driftwood fire.

Amber looked up inquiringly, nodding an unspoken affirmative.

"It was my fault that he—er—prevaricated, I'm afraid; as he says, it was by my order."

Rutton's expression was masked by the shadows; Amber could make nothing of his curious reticence, and remained silent, waiting a further explanation. It came, presently, with an effect of embarrassment.

"I had—have peculiar reasons for not wishing my refuge here to be discovered. I told Doggott to be careful, should he meet any one we knew. Although, of course, neither of us anticipated . . ."

"I don't think Doggott was any more dumbfounded than I," said Amber. "I couldn't believe he'd left you, yet it seemed impossible that you should be here—of all place—in the neighborhood of Nokomis, I mean. As for that—" Amber shook his head expressively, glancing round the mean room in which he had found this man of such extraordinary qualities. "It's altogether inconceivable," he summed up his bewilderment.

"It does seem so—even to me, at times."

"Then why—in heaven's name—"

"I see I must tell you something—a little; as little as I can help—of the truth."

"I'm afraid you must; though I'm damned if I can detect a glimmer of either rhyme or reason in this preposterous situation."

"In three words," Rutton said deliberately: "I am hiding."

"Hiding!"

"Obviously."

Amber bent forward, studying the elder man's face intently. Thin and dark—not tanned like Amber's, but with a native darkness of skin like that of the Spanish—it was strongly marked, its features at once prominent and finely modeled. The hair intensely black, the eyes as dark and of peculiar fire, the lips broad, full, and sympathetic, the cheekbones high, the forehead high and somewhat narrow: these combined to form a strangely striking ensemble, and none the less striking for its weird resemblance to Amber's own cast of countenance.

Indeed, their likeness one to the other was nothing less than weird in that it could be so superficially strong, yet elusive. No two men were ever more unalike than these save in this superficial accident of facial contours and complexion. No one knowing Amber (let us say) could ever have mistaken him for Rutton; and yet any one, strange to both, armed with a description of Rutton, might pardonably have believed Amber to be his man. Yet manifestly they were products of alien races, even of different climes—their individualities as dissimilar as the poles.

"Hiding!" Amber reiterated in a tone scarcely louder than a whisper. "And you have found me out, my friend."

"But—but I don't—"

Rutton lifted a hand in deprecation; and as he did so the door in the rear of the room opened and Doggott entered. Cat-like, passing behind Amber, he placed upon the table a small tray, and from a steaming pitcher poured him a glass of hot spiced wine. At a look from his employer he filled a second.

Amber lifted his fragrant glass. "You're joining me, Rutton?"

"With all my heart!" The man came forward to his glass. "For old sake's sake, David. Shall we drink a toast?" He hesitated, with a marked air of embarrassment, then impulsively swung his glass aloft. "Drink standing!" he cried, his voice oddly vibrant. And Amber rose. "To the king—the king, God bless him!"

"To the king!" It was more an exclamation of surprise than an echo to the toast; nevertheless Amber drained his drink to the final drop. As he resumed his seat, the room rang with the crash of splintering glass; Rutton had dashed his tumbler to atoms on the hearthstone.

In the End, However, He Knocked Stoutly Enough.

"Well!" commented Amber, lifting his brows questioningly. "You are sincere, Rutton. But who in blazes would ever have suspected you of being a British subject?"

"Why not?"

"But it seems to me I should have known—"

"What have you ever really known about me, David, save that I am myself?"

"Well—when you put it that way—little enough — nothing." Amber laughed nervously, disconcerted. "But, seriously now, this foolish talk about hiding is all a joke, isn't it?"

"No," said Rutton soberly; "no, it's no joke." He sighed profoundly. "As for my recent whereabouts, I have been—ah—traveling considerably; moving about from pillar to post." To this the man added a single word, the more significant in that it embodied the nearest approach to a confidence that Amber had ever known him to make: "Hunted."

"Hunted by whom?"

"I beg your pardon." Rutton bent forward and pushed the cigarettes to Amber's elbow. "I am—ah—so preoccupied with my own mean troubles, David, that I had forgotten that you had nothing to smoke. Forgive me."

"That's a matter, I—"

Amber cut short his impatient catechism in deference to the other's mute plea. And Rutton thanked him with a glance—one of those looks which, between friends, are more eloquent than words. Sighing, he shook his head, his eyes once more seeking the flames. And silently studying his face—the play of light from lamp and hearth throwing its features into salient relief—for the first time Amber, his wits warmed back to activity from the stupor the bitter cold had put upon them, noticed how time and care had worn upon the man since they had last parted. He had never suspected Rutton to be his senior by more years than ten, at the most; tonight, however, he might well be taken for fifty. Impulsively the younger man sat up and put a hand upon the arm of Rutton's chair. "What can I do?" he asked simply.

Rutton roused, returning his regard with a smile slow, charming, infinitely sad. "Nothing," he replied; "absolutely nothing."

"But surely—!"

"No man can do for me what I cannot do for myself. When the time comes"—he lifted his shoulders lightly—"I will do what I can. Till then . . ." He diverged at a tangent. "After all, the world is quite as tiny as the worn-out aphorism has it. To think that you should find me here! It's less than a week since Doggott and I hit upon this place and settled down, quite convinced we had, at last, lost ourselves . . . and might have peace, for a little space at least! And now," concluded Rutton, "we have to move on."

"Because I've found you here?"

"Because you have found me."

"I don't understand."

"My dear boy, I never meant you should."

"But if you're in any danger—"

"I am not."

"You're not! But you just said—"

"I'm in no danger whatever; humanity is, if I'm found."

"I don't follow you at all."

Again Rutton smiled wearily. "I didn't expect you to, David. But this misadventure makes it necessary that I should tell you something; you must be made to believe in me. I beg you to; I'm neither mad nor making game of you." There was no questioning the sane sincerity of the man. He continued slowly. "It's a simple fact, incredible but absolute, that, were my whereabouts to be made public, a great, a staggering blow would be struck against the peace and security of the world. . . . Don't laugh, David; I mean it."

"I'm not laughing, Rutton; but you must know that's a pretty large order. Most men would—"

"Call me mad. Yes, I know," Rutton took up his words as Amber paused, confused. "I can't expect you to understand me: you couldn't unless I were to tell you what I may not. But you know me—better, perhaps, than any living man save Doggott . . . and one other. You know whether or not I would seek to delude you, David. And knowing that I could not, you know why it seems to me imperative that, this hole being discovered, Doggott and I must betake ourselves elsewhere. Surely there must be solitudes—!" He rose with a gesture of impatience and began restlessly to move to and fro.

Amber started suddenly, flushing. "If you mean—"

Rutton's kindly hand forced him back into his chair. "Sit down, David. I never meant that—never for an instant dreamed you'd intentionally betray my secret. It's enough that you should know it, should occasionally think of me as being here, to bring misfortune down upon me, to work an incalculable disaster to the progress of this civilization of ours."

"You mean," Amber asked uncertainly, "thought transference?"

"Something of the sort—yes." The man came to a pause beside Amber, looking down almost pitifully into his face. "I daresay all this sounds hopelessly melodramatic and neurotic and tommyrotic, David, but . . . I can tell you nothing more. I'm sorry."

"But only let me help you—any way in my power, Rutton. There's nothing I'd not do. . . ."

"I know, David, I know it. But my case is beyond human aid, since I am powerless to apply a remedy myself."

"And you are powerless?"

Rutton was silent a long moment. Then, "Time will tell," he said quietly. "There is one way . . ." He resumed his monotonous round of the room.

Mechanically Amber began to smoke, trying hard to think, to penetrate by reasoning or intuition the wall of mystery which, it seemed, Rutton chose to set between himself and the world.

Rutton Turned to the Fire, His Head Drooping Despondently.

Presently he grew conscious that Rutton was standing as if listening, his eyes averted to the windows.

"What is it?" he inquired at length, unable longer to endure the tensity of the pause.

"Nothing. I beg your pardon, David." Rutton returned to his chair, making a visible effort to shake off his preoccupation. "It's an ugly night, out there. Lucky you blundered on this place. Tell me how it happened. What became of the other man—your friend?"

The thought of Quain stabbed Amber's consciousness with a mental pang as keen as acute physical anguish. He jumped up in torment. "God!" he cried chokingly. "I'd forgotten! He's out there on the bay, poor devil!—freezing to death if not drowned. Our boat went adrift somehow; Quain would insist on going after her in a leaky old skiff we found on the shore . . . and didn't come back. I waited till it was hopeless, then concluded I'd make a try to cross to Shampton by way of the tidal bar. And I must!"

"It's impossible," Rutton told him with grave sympathy.

"But I must; think of his wife and children, Rutton! There's a chance yet—a bare chance; he may have reached the boat. If he did, every minute I waste here is killing him by inches; he'll die of exposure! But from Shampton we could send a boat—"

"The tide fulls about midnight tonight," interrupted Rutton, consulting his watch. "It's after nine—and there's a heavy surf breaking over the bar now. By ten it'll be impassable, and you couldn't reach it before 11. Be content, David; you're powerless."

"You're right—I know that," groaned Amber, his head in his hands. "I was afraid it was hopeless, but—but—"

"I know, dear boy, I know!"

With a gesture of despair Amber resumed his seat. For some time he remained deep sunk in dejection. At length, mastering his emotion, he looked up. "How did you know about Quain—that we were together?" he asked.

"Doggott saw you land this morning, and I've been watching you all day with my field-glasses, prepared to take cover the minute you turned my way. Don't be angry with me, David; it wasn't that I didn't yearn to see you face to face again, but that . . . I didn't dare."

"Oh, that!" exclaimed Amber with an exasperated fling of his hand. "Between the two of you—you and Quain—you'll drive me mad with worry."

"I'm sorry, David. I only wish I might say more. It hurts a bit to have you doubt me."

"I don't doubt," Amber declared in desperation; "at least, I mean I won't if you'll be sensible and let me stand by and see you through this trouble—whatever it is."

Rutton turned to the fire, his head drooping despondently. "That may not be," he said heavily. "The greatest service you can do me is to forget my existence, now and henceforth, erase our friendship from the tablets of your memory, pass me as a stranger should our ways ever cross again." He flicked the stub of a cigarette into the flames. "Kismet! . . . I mean that, David, from my heart. Won't you do this for me—one last favor, old friend?"

Amber nodded.

"Then . . ." Rutton attempted to divert the subject. "I think you said Quain? Any relation to Quain's 'Aryan Invasion of India?'"

Dragging Their Hosiery.

Little Arlene was familiar with the appearance of the garden hose at home, but when she observed a line of fire hose, with its great length and bulk lying serpent-like in the street, she immediately inquired what it was. Her mother replied that was firemen's hose, and the child went on watching the fire.

In the meantime two additional fire companies dashed up, and these newly arrived fire fighters were carrying their respective lines toward the burning building, when little Arlene spied them.

"Oh, mamma," she cried, craning her neck out of the crowd, "here comes more firemen dragging their hosiery behind them!"—Lippincott's.

Properly Thankful.

Clark Howell of Atlanta tells of the sad case of an elderly darky in Georgia, charged with the theft of some chickens. The negro had the misfortune to be defended by a young and inexperienced attorney, although it is doubtful whether any one could have secured his acquittal, the commission of the crime having been proved beyond all doubt. The darky received a pretty severe sentence. "Thank yo' sah," said he cheerfully, addressing the judge when the sentence had been pronounced. "Dat's mighty hard, sah, but it ain't anything what I expected. I thought, sah, dat between my character and dat speech of my lawyer dat yo'd hang me, shore!"

And They Adjourned.

The Mutual Admiration society met and was called to order.

"Beefsteak!" cried he, taken unawares, and a moment later the society adjourned.

STATE'S FARM INDUSTRIES

A statement given out by the Census Bureau indicates that the farming business in this state has not been demonstrating any retrograde tendency, but far otherwise. Such a thing as an abandoned farm is not to be located in any Maryland county. In the bulletin issued recently it is stated that the aggregate value of domestic animals, poultry and bees on farms in Maryland, increased from $20, 856,000 in 1900 to $32,560,000 in 1910, the ratio of increase being 56.2 in a single decade. While this summary includes only a partial scheduling of farm values it may be accepted as fairly indicative of farm progress in Maryland in general. And a magnificent showing it is.

In some of its details the report is interestingly suggestive During the decade poultry values in the state increased 60.5 per cent.—the industrious hen has been hustling to some purpose There has been a large development in horse-breeding during the past ten years, the increase in values in horses and colts being 79.5 per cent. Bees are bunched in with the domestic animals and the poultry, but the state's bee industries are surprisingly small, the aggregate value in 1910 being only $61,600, the increase in value over 1900 being only 1 per cent. Mules and mule colts considerably more than doubled in value during the decade.

A Card from Mr. Dixon.

To the Editor of The Republican:

I wish to say in answer to the slanderous article in the Democrat of last week that the party or parties who wrote same and then hid behind an assumed name are COWARDLY CURS of the meanest type, and the paper that prints such correspondence and refuses to divulge the name of the writer is no better. When it comes to a matter of reliability I am willing that the people with whom I have been doing business for the last fifteen years be the judge of that.

Church Being Repaired.

The M. E. church in Oakland is being greatly improved and beautified by carpenters and painters, work having been in progress for a week or more. In addition new concrete steps and landing in front of the building will take the place of the wooden structure which has become somewhat dilapidated.

GOVERNOR LIKES GARRETT COUNTY

Delighted With Its Beauty and Resources.

A special to the Baltimore American from Cumberland, June 16, says:

Governor Crothers, Chairman of the State Road Commission John M. Tucker and Chief Engineer Uhler arrived here this morning from Frostburg in Roberdeau Annan's automobile. Governor Crothers said that he was delighted with what he saw in Garrett county. "I found the road condition in Garrett county to be in splendid shape," he said, "and when the new state road there is constructed it will tend to make the old National road one of the finest thoroughfares for travel in the country. I am perfectly delighted with Garrett county. It is rich in soil, minerals and timber, and when once the highways are opened up and the roads put in first class condition in every portion of the county Garrett will develop until it should become one of the foremost counties in the state."

Grand Jury Report.

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court for Garrett County:

The Grand Jury for the June term, 1911, of the Circuit Court for Garrett county beg leave to report that we have now concluded our labors, and have to the best of our ability performed the duties devolving upon us as members of the Grand Jury, now desire to report our proceedings and receive our discharge.

We have had before us and examined 101 witnesses, and found nineteen indictments.

We have found presentments in all cases in which we believed the evidence justified and have ignored trivial cases and those cases which the evidence did not appear to warrant presentments.

The attention of the grand jury having been called to the serious and extensive forest fires which have occurred in different parts of our county, made special effort to secure evidence which would fix the blame where it belonged, and while there was not sufficient evidence in any particular case to find a presentment, the Grand Jury desires in order to bring the attention of the people the great damage which has been done this spring by forest fires, the great value and importance of the timber interests of our county, and the preservation thereof, and to prevent a repetition of such fires, to incorporate in our report statements furnished us by State Forester Besley: "The value of the timber resources of the county according to forests surveys made in 1908 is as follows:

Present stand of timber, 427,700,000 ft. B. M.
Stumpage value $1,095,200.
Value at mills, $16,800,000.
Cut of lumber, lath and shingles for 1909:
Lumber, 75,040,00 ft. B. M. Value at mill $1,187,000.
Lath, 9,240,000. Value at mill $30,000.
Shingles, 978,000. Value at mill $4,000.
Mine props, R. R. ties, tanbark, etc., $219,000.
Total value, $1,440,000.

The timber industry of the county pays annually $750,000 in wages. Forest fires reported in Garrett county for spring of 1911 numbered fifteen, burned over 49,000 acres, estimated damage $143,000. Reported causes, viz: intentional firing, 7; brush burning, 4; logging engine, 3; railroad locomotive, 1."

This Grand Jury requests all citizens to co-operate to prevent a recurrence of these fires.

We have made an examination of the books and records in the several county offices and have found them properly kept and in good condition. We also visited the court house and jail and made a thorough inspection of their compartments and find them clean, properly kept and in good condition with a few exceptions. There is a leak in the roof of the court house at the dome that requires immediate attention, and there should be a guard rail in the county treasurer's office. We would recommend that some provision be made for draining the water which accumulates in the basement vault in the court house.

We further recommend that a new elbow be put at the down spout over the kitchen door at the jail, and a better water hose supply be provided for the jail.

While acknowledging the helpful and most useful aid from the court, this jury is well aware of similar benefits and legal counsel obligingly given at all times by the State's Attorney, Mr. Julius C. Renninger. We desire to acknowledge the courtesy of the several officials of the county. We now beg to be discharged at the hands of the court.

Respectfully submitted,

RICHARD E. SLIGER, Foreman.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Several new board walks in town, or old ones repaired, and several more to be done. Our town needs them anyway

Our band goes to the German Lutheran picnic at Cove for the Fourth.

John Holman came home Monday from St. Johns College to spend his vacation.

Mrs. F. G. Fox and family are being visited by two of her nieces, Misses Mary and Edna Forsythe, of Uniontown.

Mr. Willey, of Baltimore, is shaking hands with his friends here, as well as doing some business.

One of the twin infants of Henry Wolf and wife died Sunday night. It was aged 10 days and was buried Monday in J. T. Garey's burying ground.

A new cement walk and steps are being built in front of the Lutheran church, and a new and elaborate fence has been ordered, and will very soon enclose that property, greatly improving it.

George Vagden says he hoed over an an acre of potatoes between showers last week. That is a big feat for a man of his age.

The Children's Day services in the Methodist Episcopal church were held last Sunday evening. The church was nicely decorated and was filled with people long before the time announced for the service to begin. A very nice program was rendered in an excellent manner by the children and from the smallest tot to the large scholars all doing well. All attending enjoyed the services.

Miracle Pressed Stone,

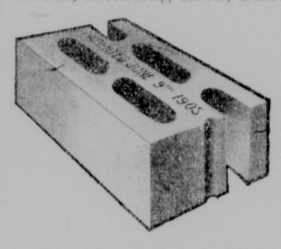
The Material for All Kinds of Buildings.

MANUFACTURED BY

W. H. KAHL & SONS,

OAKLAND, MD.

Estimates furnished upon application for all kinds of blocks, including Rock, Panel, Hammer and Smooth Face—All Sahpes—for buildings, Retaining Walls, etc. Absolutely Fire, Water and Frost Proof.



By the use of Miracle Blocks the builder saves 20 per cent. of the cost of his house and gets a better and more beautiful structure. The blocks are made upon the ground where they are to be used, thus saving large freight charges as upon brick and other heavy materials.

Insurance is another interesting item. Miracle Blocks are fire-proof and consequently call for a lower rate of insurance.

If interested addresf us, whether you want blocks for a small building or one covering a block.

Prompt attention given all inquiries. About twenty days' time is required for the making and seasoning of the blocks.

Some of the Baltimore papers report that the Governor of our State is favorably impressed with Garrett county. He should have come over to Friendsville and seen how badly good roads are needed here. But then it would have been hardly safe for the first gentleman of Maryland to travel up and down the mountains to get to our town over such hilly, bad rough roads as we have.

Bert Teats and wife were visited by the Stork who left a boy baby at their house.

Miss Katharine Morrow, of Uniontown, is visiting at the home of George R. Long and wife.

In all probability the band will go to Addison next Sunday where they will play for the local lodge Knights of Pythias of that town, who will hold their memorial services on that date.

George Beitzel of Bittinger, was selling strawberries here Monday.

Charles Glover has been taking some trips in his new automobile. He reports the roads in bad condition.

Not much can be done at the electric plant as the water is too high to do any digging.

Carried Off Prizes.

Robert Garrett, aged sixteen years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Garrett, of Deer Park, and grandson of Hon. and Mrs. R. T. Browning, of Lake Brown, arrived at his home from school yesterday bringing with him nearly all the prizes awarded at the commencement exercises of St. Edward's College, Huntington, W. THIS HIGH GRADE STEEL RANGE COSTS YOU NOTHING as compared with any other range of any make whatsoever, that you might buy.

¶ Any other range; any range you ever saw takes its draft through the front end, next to the fire and right underneath the grate.

¶ This air is about 50 to 70 degrees in temperature. The range must burn enough coal to bring the temperature up to 700 degrees, or baking heat

¶ Notice that - ordinary ranges have to burn enough coal to raise the air from 70 to 700 or 630 degrees.

CHAMPION RANGES

take the draft in at the opposite end, pass it under the bottom before it goes under the grate, and the air picks up enough from the waste heat under the bottom to reach about 250 degrees.

¶ The fire has to burn only enough coal to raise it from 250 to 700—450 degrees, as against 630 in ordinary ranges.

¶ CHAMPION RANGES save about 1-3 in fuel, every day they are used. This will pay the full cost of ther ange in 3 to 5 years, making it cheaper to you than any other.

¶ No experiment; been made and used for 18 years by thousands. Patented; can only be had from our agents. Guaranteed as represented or money back.

Read what the Grafton Sentinel says of a minstrel entertainment given in that city sometime ago, by Prof McClosky: "The minstrel show of the ladies of the auxiliary of the B. of R. T., which was produced with a special cast at Brinkman's Opera House last night was a thoroughly classy show in every particular. The vast audience from gallery to pit and from parquet to the doors, was well pleased, and voiced its approval in many outbursts of enthusiastic applause."

Prof. McClosky is at present engaged in rehearsing about thirty people for a big minstrel show for the benefit of the Mountain City Band and indications are that all former local attempts at this kind of a performance will be far surpassed. The entertainment will be given in Beckwith's Opera House and prices will be 35 and 50 cents. Don't miss this opportunity of enjoying a good laugh. A grand street parade a 4 p. m.

GRANTSVILLE.

The Farmer's Institute held here on Tuesday of last week was largely attended. Dr. Richard S. Hill, who has charge of institutes in Maryland, opened the session by speaking very entertainingly on farming and farm products, and introduced the several speakers during the day. Mr. W. Oscar Collier, of Talbot county, who is an expert corn grower, spoke on good seed, soil fertility and cultivation as applicable to the growing of corn. In the afternoon Miss Mary A. Burnett, of New York, lectured on the subjects of Home Economics and Domestic Science. Among the various labor saving devices suggested by Miss Burnett were fireless cookers, vacuum cleaners and dishwashing machines. In the course of her talk Miss Burnett made mention of the elegant dish of oatmeal she ate in Frostburg, which she declared was not cooked in a fireless cooker. Miss Burnett was followed by Dr. Hill who discussed home sanitation and laid great stress on the harm done by the house fly. Following Dr Hill was Mr. E. O. Oswald, of Washington county, who is an expert in fruit culture, and authority in particular on apple growing. Mr. Oswald urged fruit growers to do more spraying, more systematic pruning and more cultivating and fertilizing of fruit trees. The evening session was attended by a throng larger than the school house could accommodate. On Wednesday morning Mr. L. Diefenboch took the institute workers to Accident in his automobile.

On Thursday evening Governor Crothers visited Grantsville for the first time. Mr. Crothers theme was good farming and good roads, with the latter predominating. D. Hershberger took the party to Frostburg on Friday morning.
